REGARDING the latter, which is by some held to be a peculiarly British instinct, a scare has been raised in certain quarters in India that it is contemplated to annex Cashmere if we possibly can do so without giving offence to the inhabitants of the place. An English journalist in Calcutta, who looks with a jaundiced eye at every act of English administration in India, gives publicity in the columns of his newspaper to the report that it "is openly declared by Englishmen at Srinagar that Cashmere will be annexed within two or three years." And then follows this homily: "Any step on the part of the British Government towards the annexation of the Happy Valley will engender a sense of insecurity and distrust in the other feudatory princes of India, which may in the future be productive of serious consequences to the British Government." The text upon which this homily is based is not a very authoritative one. The English pleasure-seekers in Cashmere who talk of probable annexation speak only for themselves—the wish, perhaps, being father to the thought to which they give utterance. But they see enough of oppression and misrule in that Happy Valley to desire that it should be under British instead of Native rule.

THE name "Happy Valley" is a misnomer, so far as the unfortunate people are concerned. They would hail British annexation as a blessing from Heaven upon their miserable existence. The Hindu Brahmins, who have for years bullied and treated the Mahomedan majority of the inhabitants as little better than slaves, may, perhaps, regret the loss of the late Maharajah Runbir Singh, and hold the opinion of the writer in the Calcutta Statesman that he was "a vigorous, keen-sighted, and diplomatic ruler," but the people have no cause to mourn his decease. He was keen-sighted enough regarding his own interests and those of the Hindu courtiers about him, but for the welfare of his people he cared nothing—except in so far as they might be made to contribute to his treasury. A British Resident at Srinagar may not be to the taste of the Brahmins, but his presence has already achieved great good. There need be no fear of annexation, but the more that British influence is felt throughout the Valley the more prosperous will it become. With encouragement given to trade instead of former restrictions upon it, with communications extended, and former Native industries revived, the Valley will soon rejoice in the new order of things, and be grateful for it.

Can the following be true? It is furnished to the Bombay Gazette by its London correspondent:—

For some weeks the names of Sir Henry Morland and Sir Charles Lawson were duly inscribed on the honours list for Knighthood. But at the fatal moment of final revision, Lord Cross, acting no doubt on imperative commands which brooked no refusal, to effect a considerable reduction in the number of names, erased the two just mentioned. As an intimation had already been given that the names were actually on the list, the notification of the excision became an awkward necessity. Remonstrances were vain, but they were made at the India Office—Lord Cross was inexorable. The two expectant Knights were informed of their fate, and they proceeded to Windsor in the full belief that the Jubilee had no special joys in store for them. The resignation with which they bore the trial gained the active sympathy of the Duke of Connaught, who used his personal influence with his Royal Mother to such purpose that both gentlemen were knighted there and then.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 4.

It will be remembered that last year the coincidence in time of the great Mahomedan and Hindoo festivals of Mohurrum and Ramlila resulted in serious riots at Delhi, Etawah, and other places in Upper India—riots which, at least in Delhi, were followed by a long estrangement between the two communities. The festivals coincided again this year, and begin about a fortnight hence, and the authorities of the great cities in northern India, especially of those where rioting occurred last year, will have an anxious time. It is, therefore, satisfactory to learn that all preparations against a possible emergency are being made, and that the Mahomedan festival of Bukreed passed quietly last, Tuesday. The arrangements made at Delhi are said to be especially good. The official staff has been largely strengthened and it may be hoped that the city will not be the scene of such wild tumults and murders as disgraced it last October. Mohurrum moves round the twelve months, while the Hindoo festival, like Easter, varies only between two fixed dates. They will, therefore, not fall together again for about thirty years.

The Calcutta Englishman calls attention to a remarkable decline in the popularity of the great Rath Jattra, or Car festival, at the Juggernaut temple in Orissa. That the number of visitors this year should show a large decrease might have been expected, owing to the recent loss of two pilgrim steamers and to the common belief that the loss of a third had been predicted. It appears, however, that although the falling off is more marked this year, it has been going on steadily for some years past. The religious enthusiasm of the crowd is said to be also disappearing. There is no longer a wild rush for the car in which the idol is dragged from the temple to a country house and back again, and on several occasions it has been necessary to hire coolies to perform the work. The fact is a strange one, and apart from the reflections which it may suggest in other directions it would seem to show that the Government was over-sanguine in its estimate of the pilgrim traffic which accompanied the papers on the proposed Benares-Pooree Railway mentioned by me a fortnight ago.

The Indian Government, at the suggestion of the Coambers of Commerce of the Presidency towns, has addressed the local Governments on the subject of the adoption of the English yard as the standard of length throughout India. In doing so it states that the yard has now practically superseded the ever-varying gaz of the native dynasties and is largely used everywhere. The Government considers it desirable to fix it as the standard of length, but seeks the opinions of the local Administrations before moving. The despatch goes on to say that the Bombay and Madras Chambers of Commerce call for legislation making it punishable to mark a false length on a bale of cloth. The Governor-General doubts whether this is practicable, but desires an expression of views on that point also.

The Madras Government has published a statement showing the percentage of the different classes of the community in its employment. The general result is that of the Government employés 19·2 per cent. are Brahmins, 55·4 are classed as other Hindoos, 16·8 are Mahomedans, 4·1 Native Christians, and 4·5 Europeans.

The French travellers, MM. Bonvalot, Capus, and Pepin, who lately made an adventurous journey through Central Asia, were entertained at luncheon by the Viceroy before leaving Simla. Lord Dufferin, in proposing their health, said he desired both as head of the Government of India and as an ex-President of the Geographical Society to congratulate his guests on their safe arrival, and with great pleasure to welcome them to Her Majesty's dominions. He expressed warm admiration of the tenacity, courage, and endurance with which they had surmounted their innumerable difficulties. They had suffered great hardships, but had borne them with the gaiety and fortitude natural to the gallant nation to which they belonged. He looked forward with great pleasure to the account of their adventures which in the interests of science he hoped they would publish. He regretted that their stay in Simla was so short, as everyone would have joined in trying to make them forget the trials which they had endured; but he understood their desire to get home, and therefore wished them a prosperous voyage and a happy return to France, where the services they had rendered to geographical science would insure them a fitting reward at the hands of their appreciative countrymen.

BUYING EXAMINATION PAPERS.

(Times of India.)

It is a curious commentary on the spread of education in India that when examination papers in connection with the various Universities have to be printed the most extraordinary precautions are necessary to prevent their contents from prematurely leaking out. The stories of ingenuity whereby the University authorities, despite the greatest care and watchfulness, have after all been outwitted are numerous. A case in point has recently occurred in the Punjab. The papers for the current Entrance and Intermediate Examinations were being prepared. The whole work of composing, setting up, and printing was done in the University Registrar's own house, and with the assistance of a single individual, a gentleman connected with the Lahore Press. Even the latter never had the actual papers in his own possession, so that the chance of any premature disclosure of their subject matter was reduced to a minimum. Certain students, however, were not to be debarred from making the attempt to secure advance copies of the papers, and, as all other methods were closed to them, they set to work to bribe the gentleman who had been entrusted with the practical printing. Their agent was a Hindoo rejoicing in the name of Sant Singh, himself the father of one of the candidates. Sant Singh went about the matter with great discreetness, approaching the mem sahib first and promising her Rs. 100 if she succeeded in inducing her husband to betray his trust. An interview with the sahib followed, and to Sant Singh's intense gratification the little affair, after some haggling over the terms, was amicably arranged—copies of the papers were to be supplied, and a sum of Rs. 1,000 was to pass hands. But, alas! for the short-lived hopes of Sant Singh and his youthful clients! No sooner had the "mild Hindoo" gone on his way with the joyful news than our journalist repaired to headquarters, and, telling all that had occurred, showed how the plot could be further developed, and the real parties to the fraud discovered. His advice was taken, bogus papers were prepared, Sant Singh and several students came to fetch the prized documents, and Rs. 400 were given in part payment. The sequel of course is, that when the day of examination came round the guilty parties were readily identified, and have since been permanently debarred from competing at these examinations. But the best part of the story has to be told. The bogus papers were indeed terrible things, quite capable of scaring any candidate for University honours. We can imagine how these enterprising youths, between the interval of securing the advance copies of the papers and the eventful day of examination, cudgelled their brains over the problems set before them. Where, oh, were, was "Dixie's Land?" To "draw a map of Ireland pointing out the scenes of the recent outrages" was certainly no easy task, though the latter part of the problem might have been facilitated by upsetting the ink bottle over the diagram when the outline had been completed. "To state whether the sun moves round the moon, and if so, why," and "to explain the causes which have led to a fall in the value of the rupee and the effect on trade," were among the other conundrums propounded. But the unkindest cut of all was the question intended to test the candidates' knowledge of idiomatic English. Oh! those days of torture puzzling over the expressions—"He is up a tree," "The fat is in the fire," "He caught a Tartar." No doubt their meaning remained Greek to these students up to the very hour of the examination. But they appreciate their full significance now.

THE LATE SIR ASHLEY EDEN.

The Rangoon Gazette commenting upon the death of Sir Ashley Eden summarises his career as Chief Commissioner of Burma as follows:—

He succeeded the vain, yet kind-hearted General Fytche as Chief Commissioner here. Government felt that more energy was needed in this administration, and 'fiery Eden' was sent down to stir up what was fast becoming a sleepy hollow. And he did it effectually, He was by no means particular about treading upon people's toes, or wounding their fine sensibilities. He said what he meant and meant what he said, careless whose reputation he smirched or whose feelings he hurt. Opposition in the smallest degree gave him dire offence. He was sent here to push, and he pushed, and those who stood in his way got the worst of it. He was masterful to a degree that was ludricious when compared with his predecessor's urbanity. In Fytche's time, said one of his Secretaries, "I used to write the Minutes and he used to sign them; but in Ashley Eden's time he writes the Minutes and makes me sign them." Opinions differ, of course, but the present writer thinks that Ashley Eden's haste and push were not real progress. He promoted immigration—hastily, hurriedly, expensively, and his scheme proved to be a miserable failure;—and so thorough was the failure that it has rendered useless the attempt at any other scheme ever since. He promoted the railway. Promoted is not the word. He insisted, pushed, hurried it on. With this result, that the railway to Prome, which was not then absolutely needed, for there were the river road and a good "turnpike road," was constructed—while that which was greatly and terribly needed, the Tounghoo line, was postponed. Again, the railway was urged and pushed, so that the engineers had not proper time for care and study of the sections. The allignment was wrong. The rails were hastily laid upon the old Prome, road which was spoiled, and consequently the whole line has had to be constructed at least twice over; and that which should have been the cheapest has come to be one of the most expensive railways in India. The cost of construction was simply enormous.

This country is certainly indebted to him for the Rangoon College and High School. His minute on these establishments shows the temper in which they were begun; and his endeavour to crush St. John's College so as to utilize the buildings for the Government schools does not tend to make his name loved by missionaries. Nor does his placing the municipal bazaar alongside of the town church and his secular municipal girls' school a few doors from St. Mary's mission school (with which he had a quarrel), show that he had much regard for the goodwill of the clergy.

But there were very many in Burma by whom he was, if not loved, very much liked. By more he was admired, and by more still he was feared. In his own circle, where his will was undisputed, he was very amiable. The country undoubtedly in a certain sense flourished under his sway. It wanted a variety of rulers, and Phayre, Fytche and Eden, had each his own idiosyncracy, which contributed to the rapid increase of the prosperity of the province.

THE PUNJAB UNIVERSITY.

(Englishman.)

The Punjab University has for some time been the subject of an unhappy notoriety. The constant and remarkable leakage of the examintaion papers, culminating in the last gross scandal, it is not an abuse of language to say, renders that institution a disgrace to the province, and demands most drastic measures of reform from the local or supreme Government. The brightest hopes of an oriental and teaching university were entertained when the Act to incorporate the Punjab University was passed in 1882; but already those most conversant with the condition of the interests affecting the new institution had expressed their misgivings with certain indications which attended the new order of things. Suspicions, it was pointed out, were felt by the Native chiefs and gentry of the province, whose generous donations and contributions had rendered possible the new foundation, whether their money might not be diverted under the new scheme to purposes for which it was never intended. The most scrupulous faith, it was urged, should be kept in this matter, and the greatest precautions taken that the original principles of the University College should be maintained in all their singleness of purpose. It is a matter of history that this faith was not kept, and that these precautions were not taken.

Sir Charles Aitcheson, in his anxiety to strike out a new educational line, gradually became an instrument in the hands of those whose ideal for the improvement of the Punjab educational system was a bold copy of the University of Calcutta, regardless of the facts that no necessity existed for another mere degree-conferring institution, and that the whole of India and neighbouring countries were interested in possessing an oriental University for purposes of research and the maintenance of the ancient learning. The policy of the University was gradually changed, and, what was worse, funds that their donors had intended for investment for specific purposes were spent on the current expenditure, a misapplication of money which appears to have been mainly occasioned by the discovery that the new order of things did not obtain popular sympathy, and that subscriptions no longer came in with the former facility. Want of funds led to the contraction of a debt with Government, and the public were treated to a series of remarkable explanations such as are commonly given by men who, having embarked on a mistaken course of action are unwilling to openly admit or rectify their error. Meanwhile Dr. Leitner, but for whose influence, zeal, and special acquirements the University would, probably, never have been founded, seeing that it was impossible to associate himself with the new tendencies, and believing them to be impolitic and unjust, finally terminated his connection with the institution, which has since been the theatre of various speculative experiments in management, showing the evil results of governing a learned body by party spirit, instead of educational experience and knowledge.

THE TROOPING SERVICE.

Referring to the proposal to abolish the Royal troopships and substitute for them hired transports the Bombay Gazette says:—The ingenious proposal to utilise the P. and O. and British India passenger steamers, now engaged in the ordinary traffic between India and England, for the carriage of large numbers of officers and soldiers, including invalids, is seen at once to be impracticbale when we remember that first-class passengers, including ladies and gentlemen and children, would certainly refuse to travel in vessels so inconveniently crowded. An attempt to combine the ordinary passenger traffic with the transport of troops would give to the competing Continental lines the virtual monopoly of the carriage of first and even second-class passengers. The notion that in sending home invalids and time-expired men in the P. and O. or other passenger steamers all inconvenience would be obviated by the simple device of placing them under the charge of a senior officer of experience, "so as to avoid the riotous scenes which took place on a certain liner not so very long ago on its outward passage," shows very conclusively than the supersession of the Indian troopers can be advocated with a light heart by writers who have not given any thought to the practical difficulties which lie in the way. Forty young men, officers and gentlemen, first-class passengers on board a P. and O. steamer, made the lives of the ship's officers, and those of the ordinary passengers, a burden to them, as our correspondent "Sindbad" chronicled at the time. "Sindbad" was on board another steamer somewhat singularly circumstanced, in which a smaller number of joyous subalterns relieved the Captain and first officer of all responsibility for the navigation of the ship, and turned her astern and went ahead as to themselves seemed good. These, however, were larks. But what would it be to have on board a steamer in all seriousness at the beginning of the hot season, say some ninety odd Anglo-Indian children, with their anxious mammas, while time-expired men, and invalids in a hurry to get home, occupy every available inch up to the companion-ladder? Would such a system work for two seasons? Matters would not be improved if it were made incumbent on the P. and O. to carry English sailors, to the number of half the crew. It is very true that Mr. Sutherland has said that Lascars are not employed for the sake of economy, for they are not economical. But he has also said, what seems to be forgotten, that Lascars are preferred because, eastward of Suez at all events, they are more efficient, more amenable to discipline, and better able to withstand temptations fatal to sobriety, than are the class of English sailors who would be content to spend their lives going to and fro in the Red Sea. Taking all the circumstances into consideration, we come to the conclusion that while the Indian transports might be worked with greater economy, and might be profitably utilised during the months of the year when they now lie idle, on the whole they are valuable and necessary parts of the equipment required for the maintenance of a large British force in the East. They were designed and built for special purposes, which they fulfil on the whole very well. The suggestion that they should be broken up and sold for firewood, and that the special work for which they were intended should be given over to the passenger steamers, is founded on a total misconception of the conditions of the problem to be solved, which is simply to get the service performed by those troopers for a sum appreciably less than is now paid for it.

IS INDIA READY FOR WAR?

(Englishman.)

The drift of events on our North-West Frontier leads us to ask ourselves very seriously "Is India ready for war?" To this question there can be but one answer at the present moment, and that answer is "No," so far as a war with a European Power is concerned. It is no good saying that we shall be ready in a year or two years, for the fact remains that, at the present moment, we are not ready to meet a European army on equal terms. Englishmen are always ready to meet the enemy, and they will doubtless be able to give a good account of them, but this is not the view we refer to. If an army has to take the field with inferior weapons, it is put to great and unnecessary risks, the blame of which lies on those whose petty economies have placed it in so false a position. And it must be admitted that the army in India is woefully behind the age in the matter of armament. Our Cavalry suffer least of all in this particular, for Indian Cavalry are essentially light, and would in the case of a Russian war be more than a match for the Cossacks, as anyone who has seen both can testify. But the outlook of the Infantry is far worse, for here the question of weapons is all-important. The new rifle is still "under discussion at home, the chief details being decided, but the question of the magazine is still unsettled." Meanwhile the issue of the new rifle is necessarily stopped, and our men have to worry along with the old Martini-Henry. This is, however, a very excellent weapon in its way, and the only fault we have to find with it is the breech action, and, of course, as against a European army, the want of a quickloader or magazine. Owing, however, to the delay in issuing the new weapon it has been resolved to delay the issue of the Martini to the sepoys, on the ground that the whole of them could not get it at once. But it is in Field Artillery that we are most lamentably deficient. The guns with which the Field Artillery in India are armed are of an obsolete type, throwing obsolete shell at ranges and velocities that are quite out of date, and utterly unequal to the necessities of the present day. It is true that the batteries of the first Army Corps are to be armed with the new 12-pounder breechloaders some day or other, but the question is, when will that day arrive? Moreover, the mere fact of their distribution betrays an inconsistency, for, if the Artillery of the 1st Army Corps are to be rearmed, why should not the Infantry of the Corps be rearmed also, without waiting for the remainder of the rifles? But the real cause of this is that bad as the Snider is, it is, as a rifle, far better than the Indian field gun is as a field piece. Another point which needs serious consideration before we can say that we are ready for a European war is the reserve of horses in this country. If we had, as is very probable, a Cavalry campaign, one in which our Cavalry would be constantly faced by Cossacks, and forced to skirmish and fight and make long marches, to the great injury of the horses, where could remounts in sufficient numbers be obtained? Probably a few shiploads of walers could be procured, but the trade would become difficult if hostile cruisers were on the look-out for horse transports, which would not be unlikely. In any case, the walers would be required for the British Cavalry and Artillery, and the real difficulty would be to keep up the supply of country-breds for the Native regiments. A good many could be bought in the districts. It is a matter well worth serious consideration, and we think Government might take some serious steps to ensure a good supply of trained remounts at a crisis.

THE LATE COLONEL BECHER.

The Civil and Military Gazette, in noticing the death of Colonel Becher, which occurred at Dhera Dun on the 5th August, says:—Colonel Sullivan Edward Becher, Commandant of the 2nd Battalion 2nd Regiment, Prince of Wales's Own Goorkhas, was a son of Mr. Sullivan Becher, Bengal Civil Service, well known as the Judge of Saharanpore. Colonel Becher entered the Indian Army in July, 1860; so at the time of his death was a little over twenty-seven years' service. After doing duty with an English Regiment, Lieutenant Becher was posted, in October, 1863, to the 2nd Goorkhas, then under the command of that splendid officer, the late Sir Herbert Macpherson. With this Regiment he has remained ever since, a period of nearly 24 years. Becher had scarcely joined his new regiment when, in 1864, it was ordered on active service to the North-West Frontier to punish the Momands for repeated incursions into British territory. He took part in all the affairs and marches in that campaign, including the engagement with that tribe near Shubkuddur; for these services he received a medal and clasp. In 1868 Becher was again on the North-West Frontier with the 2nd Goorkhas, taking part against the Hazaras, inclusive of the skirmishes and hand-fighting at the Black Mountain. In 1871-72 he accompanied the Goorkhas to the Looshai country, for which service he received a clasp. Captain Becher accompanied his regiment with the Indian Expedition despatched to Malta and Cyprus as a menace to Russia, and to make her keep her hands off Constantinople.

Scarcely had the Goorkhas returned to India and reached their head-quarters at Deyrah when they were ordered to the front to take part in the Afghan Campaigns of 1878-79 and 80. In these campaigns Major Becher was present in both the first and second Expeditions, to the Bazar Valley. He accompanied Sir Charles Gough's column to Sherpore on the 24th December, 1879. He was present on the march from Kabul to Kandahar, including the relief of the British position and the subsequent defeat of Ayoub Khan at the battle of Khandahar; for these services he received the Afghan medal and two clasps, the bronze star for the march to Kandahar, and a brevet of Lieutenant-Colonel. Colonel Becher has been three times thanked for services in General Orders, viz., 610 of 1879, 582 of 1880, and 777 of 1881. On raising of the 2nd Battalion of the 2nd Goorkhas, from his long experience with those admirable soldiers, he was given the command. This was in the commencement of 1886, and, although he had considerable difficulties to contend with, he has brought within one year the 800 recruits sent to him into a most admirable state of discipline. Cholera has been of a very bad type in the new cantonments; over fifty men have died, not counting women and children. Colonel Becher has been most attentive, visiting his sick men and trying to cheer them up; but the constant tension and anxiety at last began to tell upon his health. Over a fortnight ago his brother officers begged him to take leave of Mussoorie to recruit his health and spirits, but he refused to leave his post while cholera still hung about his lines, but at last he could support the tension no longer, and applied for and obtained two months' leave. He came up to the Charleville Hotel, but on Thursday he showed decided signs of being infected with the cholera poison; on Friday afternoon he gradually sank with exhaustion, and died.

BENGAL.

THE thanks of the Queen have been communicated through the Bengal Government to Nawab Abdul Luteef Bahadur for the congratulatory telegram sent on the day of the Jubilee to Her Majesty by the Mahomedan community of Calcutta.

THE Englishman hears that the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company has just concluded a contract with the Assam Railway and Trading Company for a monthly supply of from 800 to 1,000 tons of coal for the use of the former company's steamers. This is a highly practical way of assisting to develop the resources of the country, and at the same time a testimony to the high quality and fitness for steaming purposes of our Assam coal, which cannot be gainsaid.

REMARKS, says the Englishman, are being made on the fact that no one acquainted with the navigation of the Hughli is on the inquiry now going on into the loss of the steamship Mahratta. There is not the slightest imputation on Mr. Westmacott and Captain Ward, of the ship Pegasus, than whom better selections could not have been made. But it would only be in accordance with the invariable practice if these gentlemen had for their colleague a member of the Pilot Service, to aid them with his special knowledge in a matter which lies outside of their qualifications.

CONCERNING the refusal of the Collector in Calcutta to receive cheques in payment of Income Tax, the Englishman says:—"The Collector was for some time in the habit of returning cheques, drawn on banks other than the Bank of Bengal, with a printed memo. merely stating that they could not be accepted. As this course did not satisfy parties, he has apparently found it necessary to explain his position more at length by furnishing a copy of the correspondence which we print elsewhere. It is evident that Mr. Goodricke is in an unenviable situation. He has already referred the matter to Government with the view of getting it settled in the interests of the public convenience."

FIRES IN CALCUTTA.—There were thirty-six fires in Calcutta during the past year, resulting in loss of property to the extent of Rs. 64,375.

A RESOLUTION in the Gazette of India states that the Secretary of State having sanctioned the admission of superior Officers of the Indian Telegraph Department to the benefits of Civil Engineers' Provident Fund, it has become necessary to issue a revised set of rules, embodying the modifications due to this order. The revised rules are as follows:—

A Provident Fund is sanctioned for the following Officers: Public Works and Telegraph Departments, Civil Engineers, on the effective list, Public Works Department, Civil Engineers transferred to the Accounts Branch or the superior Revenue Railway establishment, or to foreign service, all civil members of the superior Accounts establishment, who are not Civil Engineers, and superior Civil Officers of the Indian Telegraph Department.

The conditions under which officers will join the funds are monthly deposit, which may be not less than five, nor more than ten per cent., on the salary, in the case of officers in the Public Works Department on February 4, 1885, or in the Telegraph Department on October 13, 1886.

Deposits will be voluntary, and may be discontinued at option of the depositor. Those who wish to join the fund may pay up their arrears within the authorised limits from commencement of service, or any shorter time, in one sum, interest on which will be allowed from the date of payment; but officers joining either of these departments, after the dates given above, must contribute five per cent. of their salary to the fund, and may contribute ten per cent.

MADRAS.

THE reports submitted to Government by the several District Magistrates and the Commissioner of Police, Madras, on the working of the Arms Act during 1886, show an increase in the total number of licenses of all descriptions issued, of 2,730, or 11·5 per cent. The total number was 26,365, which considerably exceeds the average of the preceding five yeaos, and is declared to be highest on record.

THE members of the Madras Railway Savings Bank have petitioned the Agent that Government be requested to include the Bank among the Company's special funds, and that its moneys, at present amounting to Rs 50 000 already, be lodged in the Government Treasury instead of the New Oriental Bank, for interest, as they prefer a Government security for all sums lodged by the members.

THERE is a movement on foot to remove the statue of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress which was unveiled by H.E. the Governor on Jubilee day, June 20, from its present site on the south of the Senate House, to the interior of the new Madras Town Hall. The statue, remarks a local paper, is certainly one more suited to be under cover than in the open air; and, in most respects, the Town Hall would be the proper place for it.

The figures set down in the Administration Report relative to the cost of prisoners in Madras Jails show that during the last five years their cost, as compared with that in other provinces, has been steadily increasing, amounting to no less than 20.2 per cent.; that in Central Jails being 30 5 per cent.; and that in District Jails only 7·9 per cent. The cost of rations in the Central Jails has risen from Rs. 34 to Rs. 44-5-0, or 30·3 per cent.; and that of establishment and guards from Rs. 32-7-0 to Rs. 42 10 0, or 31·4 per cent. Government in their remarks on this portion of the Inspector-General's report, point out to that officer that the high cost of prisoner's in Madras jails was a question which had been brought prominately to notice by the Finance Committee, but that no satisfactory explanation has been given in the report, and Government sarcastically add: "The Inspector-General does not seem to realise the serious import of the figures." The extraordinary differences between the proportions of hospital diets (which are much more expensive than the ordinary diets) issued in several jails is another matter that has caught the eye of Government. Though the issue of hospital diet is at the discretion of the Medical Officer, and him alone, Government, nevertheless, think that "there are other causes than the idiosyncracy of medical officers" to which the differences may be attributed. The Jail administration report has undergone a thorough overhauling by Government; the Inspector-General is told in several places that this, that, and the other should have attracted his attention, and he has been called upon for fuller information, further explanation, &c., &c.

THE Inspector-General of Jails, Madras, has been "sat upon" by Government. In his report on the Administration of the Jails of the Madras Presidency for the year 1886 he pointed out a noticeable decrease in the number of juveniles during the year under report, and suggested that "the intended establishment of a reformatory may have something to do with it, as the incarceration therein will be of a longer duration than those it has hitherto been in Jails." Government, on this, remark in their view of the report:—"The connection is not apparent. The Inspector-General seems to think that a prospect of residence for a minimum period of two years in a reformatory has deterred juvenile offenders from committing crimes. If this is his meaning, the Government fear that he takes too sanguine a view of the deterrant effect of a reformatory." A little further on in the Government review the Inspector-General comes in for what amounts to censure. For instance, in some of the sub-jail returns seven females were returned as having been sentenced to rigorous imprisonment with whipping. Government express their astonishment to find the entry "unremarked on by the Inspector-General." This officer has now been called upon to submit a list of the cases in question, and to state whether the sentences have been executed, and whether he has drawn the attention of the District Magistrates concerned, or of the Government, to them.

BOMBAY.

THE suit in which the present Thakore of Palitana sued his younger brother for eleven lakhs of rupees has been dismissed. When the late Thakore died defendant removed treasure, filling 150 carts, to his village, and subsequently to Bombay, alleging it had been given to him by his father. The present Thakore, finding no account of the gift in the State books, sued his brother for the amount. The judge said the present Thakore was justified in making the claim owing to the defendant's conduct, which was not straightforward either towards him or towards the agency.

AT a recent meeting of members of the Bombay Bar, it was unanimously resolved to forward a memorial to the Chief Justice and Judges of the High Court, requesting that a representation be made to the Local Government and the Government of India for the introduction of the Legal Practioners' Act in Bombay. Communications were to be addressed to the Law Society at Bombay and the Pleaders' Association of Western India, requesting their co-operation in the matter. The immediate occasion for the action of the Bombay Bar was a suit filed, or about to be filed, in the local Small Causes Court by a touter or law-broker against a member of the legal profession to recover the commission or brokerage which had been agreed to be paid him for procuring business. The suit, if it had gone to trial, would have been a singular one; and the legal gentleman was advised by judicious friends to comprise it out of court;—and did so. The Legal Protectioners' Act, in one of its clauses, provides a punishment of six months' imprisonmeent to the person offering or receiving commission for procuring legal business; and the acts has been in force for some time past both in the Bengal and Madras Predencies. The number of those entitled to share in the emoluments of legal business in Bombay has so far increased, and is increasing, that the proportion of the emoluments for individual shares is growing small by degrees and beautifully less Hinc illa lachrymæ.

Mr. W. H. Crowe, Dfstrict Judge of Poona, has given judgment in the Harrison v.s. Harrison and Kirkham divorce case. The plaintiff, Claude Edward Harrison, an officer of the 2nd Durham Light Infantry, sued for a dissolution of his marriage with his wife, Sarah Elizabeth Harrison, on the grounds that during three months preceding the 6th of June, 1887, his said wife, Sarah Elizabeth Harrison, committed adultery with Private Frederick Alfred Kirkham, of the 2nd Battalion Durham Light Infantry, at various times and places in India, and also committed adultery in Bombay, on or about the 5th April, 1887, with some person passing himself off as Captain Harrison, whose identity is unknown. The respondent, Sarah Elizabeth Harrison, denied that she at any time or place in India or elsewhere committed adultery with the co-respondent as alleged; and urged further that the petitioner condoned the said adultery with the co-respondent if any, and had been also guilty of adultery himself, and prayed that the petition might be dismissed. The co-respondent, Frederick Alfred Kirkham, denied that he committed adultery with the said Sarah Elizabeth Harrison as alleged in the petition, and prayed that the petition might be rejected and his costs awarded. The petitioner said in his deposition that he had not cohabited with his wife since the 20th March last; that he ceased to cohabit with her on account of her conduct with Private Kirkham, and of some letters which he found. Kirkham, who had been his soldier-servant from the time he left the depôt of the regiment in England, and who had accompanied him in that capacity to India, was accordingly returned to duty, and prohibited from coming to his bungalow. After that, on the 5th of June, he had occasion to go into that portion of the house in which his wife and children were sleeping, and on looking through the doorway he saw Kirkham lying on Mrs. Harrison's bed with his coat off and with his braces hanging down. He thereupon called his servant to witness the fact of his being there, and communicated with the regimental police, the result being that Kirkham was arrested. It was established beyond doubt that the two stayed for two days together in the travellers' bungalow at Khandalla, and that Kirkham having deserted on the 11th of April, the two were in the habit of holding communication in Bombay, where Kirkham was staying at the Esplanade and Mrs. Harrison at the Wellington hotels. Letters giving evidence of improper intercourse were put in, and the Court granted a decree nisi.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH AND PUNJAB

THE Punjab Government has had placed at its disposal by the Government of India a further supply of Brittany cattle, which have just been imported from France. They will be distributed among planters in the Kangra Valley for breeding experiments.

THE Cashmere Mission Hospital has up to date made very satisfactory progress. In 1886, 202 surgical operations were performed, with only two deaths after operation. Considering the position and the scanty resources of the country, this result cannot but be regarded as most favourable. The mission is doing good work, it seems, among the poor Natives of the country, and its religious character has not prevented Dewan Lutchman Dass from helping with funds. This is very encouraging, especially as Cashmere has long been looked upon as too far removed to admit of enlightenment.

A SEPOY, this time of the Police, ran amuck on the night of the 9th August, at Benares. He shot his sub-inspector, who was lying asleep on a charpoy, wounding him desperately, and then fired at the District Superintendent of Police, Mr. Parsons, who was driving up to the spot, but the bullet luckily only struck the splashboard of the dog-cart. The intending murderer then quietly gave himself up at the Kotwali. To do the police justice, crime of this sort is exceedingly rare in their ranks as compared with its prevalence in the Army.

DURING the week ending the 3rd August, cholera was reported in the Benares, Ballia, Gorakhpur, Fyzabad, Lucknow, Rae Bareli, Allahabad, Cawnpore, Banda, Farukabad, Stapur, Kumaon, Agra, Jhansi, and Aligarh districts.

BURMA.

A TELEGRAM from Burma announces that Ressaldar Major Abdool Kareem Khan, of the 3rd Hyderabad Contingent Cavalry, had his camp attacked on July 17 by a strong force under the pretender of 200 men and about 150 guns. The Ressaldar had only twenty Lancers with him, but managed only to repel the assailants, but shot down many of them, six dead bodies being found next day in the jungle. On the 20th the Ressaldar's party again came across the remnants of the young pretender's forces that had been defeated, and routed on the 19th by Colonel Fitzgerald, and managed to kill three and capture one.

NEWS of a disquieting nature come from Bhamo. It is reported that those wild semi-savages, the Kachins, and other kindred races, are showing signs of disorder.

RULES for purchase of ponies for Government service have been published. The purchase of ponies in the Bhamo and Mandalay districts, including ponies coming in from Thibaw and the neighbouring Shan States, will remain exclusively with the Transport Department and the purchase in other districts in Upper Burma hitherto carried on by the Transport Department, will cease and will be carried on by the civil authorities. A more cheap and far better mode would be to depute officers of the neighbouring Shan States where the ponies are to be had abundantly. The requirements of the Government will be continuous for many years to come. Sellers of ponies are invariably met by middlemen half-way on their journey to Mandalay, where arrangements are entered into whereby the middlemen profit by the transaction.

TRIP to AUSTRALIA.—The P. and O. Company have decided to follow their fresh departure in the way of cheap trips to India by one to Australia. For 100 guineas they will take a passenger to Australia and back, accommodating him in the first saloon. The voyage is calculated to occupy about ninety days and a clear stay of ten or twelve days will be able to be made in the colonies, or the passenger can prolong his stay for six months without further charge. Some estimate may be made of the cheapness of the trip when it is borne in mind that living on board these steamers is equal to that at the best hotels.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

TROOPSHIPS will leave Bombay for England on 15th October 29th October, 12th November, 25th November, 31st December, 14 January, 29th January, 11th February, 17th March, and 31st March.

So far as arrangements have been made, some Batteries of Field Artillery will go home by the first trooper; the 12th Lancers by the 2nd; 1st King's Own Light Infantry by the 4th; Hampshire Regiment by the 6th; and North Staffordshire by the 8th.

IT is stated that the office of the Commissary-General, Bombay Army, has been permanently transferred to Poona. The removal will take place some time in October, and a portion of the Finance Office will be devoted to this department. The Commissary-General's Office was removed there on a former occasion, but was subsequently transferred to Bombay.

THERE will be only four of the usual Divisional Camps of Exercise next cold weather, viz., in the Lahore, Sirhind, Meerut, and Oudh Commands. The Cavalry camp at Lawrencepur will interfere with the usual camp at Pindi. The regiments which General Luck, as Inspector-General of Cavalry, will have under his command at Lawrencepur, will probably comprise, in addition to two British Cavalry corps, the following:—1st, 5th, 12th, 14th, 15th, 17th, and 18th Bengal Cavalry, the Guides from Hoti Mardan, K b and N-§ bRoyal Horse Artillery batteries.

THE necessary preliminary inquiries having been made regarding the general arrangements and cost of the proposed Cavalry Camps of Exercise to be held next cold weather, orders will shortly issue sanctioning the manœuvres. There will be some nine Cavalry regiments assembled at Lawrencepur and Neemuch, respectively, with a due proportion of Horse Artillery.

ADVANTAGE is to be taken of the opportunity of the presence of the representative Royal Engineer officers from the Madras and Bombay Sappers and Miners as members of Committee on Field Telegraph about to assemble at Roorkee, for considering and reporting on the following points which concern the three corps of Sappers and Miners alike, viz., those of Madras, Bombay, and Bengal:—(1) Recodification of the regulations relating to issue of working pay to Native ranks; (2) settlement of the relative positions of the Native officers and the British warrant and non-commissioned officers in corps of Sappers and Miners; and (3) the introduction of a short manual of drill for Sapper Companies on parade with their equipment and mules.

LIEUT.-COLONEL F. W. NICHOLAY, who obtains command of the 2nd Goorkhas by Colonel Becher's death, entered the service in 1861, and was appointed to the 107th Foot in September, 1862. From this Regiment he joined the Staff Corps in 1866, and has held various appointments, amongst them the Adjutancy of the Calcutta Volunteers and the temporary command of that Regiment. He was appointed second in command of the 2nd Battalion of the 2nd Goorkhas in February, 1886, and has, in conjunction with Colonel Becher and the other officers, worked hard to bring the new Battalion up to the pitch of discipline it has attained in one year and a-half.

PRIVATE PATRICK DONOGHUE, of the Connaught Rangers, recently appeared at the Chief Court, Lahore, before Sir Meredyth Plowden and a special jury. He was charged, under sections 299 and 300 of the Indian Penal Code, with the wilful murder of Lance-Corporal Reynolds of the same Regiment. He pleaded not guilty, and evidence was then heard during the whole day, and the jury retired at 7.50 P.M. to consider their verdict. They were not at first unanimous; but they retired again for a short time, and, on returning, the foreman, addressing the Court, said that the jury found the evidence insufficient to convict the accused, and returned a unanimous verdict of "not guilty."

CASHMERE does not possess such an immense store of buried treasures as the Pioneer recently asserted was the case, if the statement of a Srinagar correspondent of the Lahore paper is to relied on. He says:—"That there is treasure concealed in some of the forts in Cashmere, such as Riassi, Solal, and Dhiangur, is an admitted fact, but that the hoards so accumulated are of a fabulous amount is simply ridiculous. It is true that Maharajah Golab Singh, from the period of his accession as ruler of Cashmere to his death in 1857, saved the greater portion of the revenues of the country, and accumulated them in the fortresses referred to. When his son, Maharajah Ranbir Singh, succeeded him there was doubtless a very large sum buried in these forts. But the late chief never saved any of the revenues. On the contrary, on more than one occasion he removed large sums from the concealed hoards. When the present Maharajah, Pertab Singh, became his successor heavy drains were made upon this wealth. What with the Maharajah's trip to Calcutta in 1885, the expenses of his installation, the payment of the debts he contracted when heir-apparent to the throne, and the payment of arrears to the army and state officials there cannot be much left of the accumulated store. It is reported that some of the Cashmere officials have deserted the country. The cause of the desertion is unknown."

THE NATIONAL REVIEW.*

We are glad to see, in this number, that the realisation of the expectation held out by the Editors in the August issue, that Liberal Unionist contributions would be welcomed, has been found possible without in any way affecting the claims of the National to the position which it has fairly won as the organ of the Conservatives Party. Mr. Wodehouse, the Liberal Unionist member for Bath, whose article receives precedence, devotes himself to an examination of the value of "Mr. Gladstone's concessions." He has no difficulty—it is almost "slaying the slain"—in exposing their utter worthlessness. As he justly remarks, we have no kind of guarantee that "Egan shall not be Chancellor of the Exchequer in an Irish Cabinet; and Mr. Sheridan himself Home Secretary, with undisputed command of the Police;" with Mr. Gladstone's entire acquiescence. No security is offered for loyal Ulster; nor, amid a dense mist of studiously vague verbiage, do we find anything approaching a practical suggestion for ensuring the unquestioned and absolute supremacy of the Imperial Parliament over the travesty of a legislature to compass the establishment of which the member for Midlothian is ready to do what in him lies to dismember the Empire.

The means of replacing the House of Commons in its normal condition as a workable legislative machine deservedly attracts the attention of Viscount Ebrington, the Liberal Unionist representative of West Devon. He clearly perceives that a diminution of the majority now required for the application of the closure of debate is one primary necessity if the working power of the engine is ever to be restored. He also urges the devolution on grand committees of much business, and the practical transfer to other tribunals of the hitherto jealously guarded authority of Private Bill Committees. The paper is obviously the result of much thought, and well deserves careful perusal.

"Cobden's Dream," to which Mr. Farquharson, the Conservative member for West Dorset, devotes some interesting and suggestive remarks, is one which has cost England dear. That Cobden was so wholly unpractical a man, that his enthusiasm for an idea would ever have carried him, had he lived, to the bathos of absurdities which form the staple of the annual speeches at that mutual-puffery association, the Cobden Club, we do not for a moment believe, when we find that, for a quarter of a century since the repeal of the Corn Laws, corn has uniformly been cheaper (p. 72) in Protectionist France than in England, and when no less an authority than Lord Derby tells the Manchester and Liverpool Agricultural Society that the depression in agriculture, for which foreign competition "was greatly to blame," has cost the country three hundred millions sterling, we may well deplore with Disraeli, the fact that Cobden's dream ever became a reality, and mournfully recognise the accuracy of the forecast of its consequences set before us (p. 79) by the great Conservative statesman.

The fact that a Conservative administration have succeeded in practically passing a Bill for ensuring the grant to labourers of small allotments of land may well give rise to hopes that the peasantry will recognize the fact, that the true friends of the poorer classes are (as they ever have been) the Conservatives. Mr. Henry Evershed contributes a very instructive article regarding "the truth about allotments," a subject on which he speaks with peculiar authority.

It is "like the blowing of old breezes, and the ringing of old bellses" to come across an unread production of Thomas Love Peacock: the inimitable style, and the whimsically original way of looking at things, inevitably reveal the man. Just as—so he tells us in the preface to "Gryll Grange"—he would not behold the New Forest after its disafforestation, so he looks, since the removal of the deer, with a different eye on Windsor Forest, close to which he was educated, but which, though living within easy reach of it, he never latterly visited. To him "the last day of Windsor Forest," was that on which the deer were driven from its glades, and, as he was wont to say, "immured" in the Park.

Of criticism there is no lack. Mr. Willert has an easy task in showing that the religion of Christ is better than the "religion of the future," and that the service of God is to be preferred to "the service of man." The late co-Editor of the National, Mr. W. J. Courthope, speaks in a tone of enlightened appreciation of Keats' place in English poetry, showing how Spencer influenced him. Mr. Conrad Alberti calls attention to works which, with the daily increasing tendency to regard German as an essential part of ordinary education, will day by day be more and more read—those of Gustave Freytag—while "Recent Literature in China" is the subject of an excellent paper by Lieut. Shore, R.N. The Native Press is beginning to assert its power, and even the authorities are stated to be influenced by its comments on current events. Miss C. M. Phillimore's paper on Donatello's work on the Façade of the Duomo at Florence, and some vigorous verses on "Wordsworth's Grave," by Mr. W. Watson, are the lighter reading of this capital number.

HALF A CENTURY; OR, CHANGES IN MEN AND MANNERS.*

"Rip Van Winkle" is supposed to have slept for fifty years, and then awoke to a new world. Mr. Shand does the reverse of this, and takes his reader back for half a century, and shows them what their ancestors were wont to do when Queen Victoria commenced the reign of which the Jubilee has just terminated so happily, and in a manner so auspicious and gratifying.

And what a strange mass of oddities are massed together! Then it took 112 days for a letter to get to Jamaica, now 18 days; then New York was 105 days distant, now the journey is accomplished in 7 days; then the largest ship in the Mercantile Marine was 50-horse power, now some ocean clippers can boast of upwards of 13,000-horse power. It reads somewhat strange, too, that the Times, while admitting the success of the Manchester and Liverpool Railway, should warn investors "against being betrayed into speculative imitation." In the present day the capital thus sunk is well-nigh as large as the National Debt. Gas was regarded as the inventor of the Evil One—now one company alone earns well nigh a million a-year!

London fifty years ago could not boast of more than six theatres with any pretensions to decency and propriety. There were, it is true, numerous low places—half theatre, half dancing saloons—where immorality plied a thriving trade; but paterfamilias and his entourage were confined to Covent Garden, Her Majesty's in the Haymarket, the Olympic, and the Victoria. Now there is scarce a street in the centre of the town but has a theatre—some large, some small—but all respectable and properly conducted. Clubs were, of course, utterly unknown save in a political and gambling sense—the latter, hells in name, "hells" in nature. In the year of grace 1887 such places of social reunion are to be numbered not by ones, twos, or even tens, but by scores and hundreds.

Shooting, too, was widely different. Guns with flint locks or at best percussion; the ramrods jammed; the ammunition got damp, the shot would not run down the barrel. Mais tout cela est changé. Breechloaders and patent ammunition dispense with all the trouble and vexations which played havoc with the tempers of the sportsmen who rejoiced to see the day when George the Fourth was King.

Newspapers were costly and rare, and no wonder. The paper was heavily taxed. The stamp on each copy cost 5d., the duty on each advertisement was 3s. 6d. How could enterprise hold its own when thus heavily handicapped in the race of success?

All this and much more Mr. Shand tells his readers in the most chatty and fascinating of manners. Seldom has it been our lot to review a book more replete with information, more engrossing in matter, and more artistic in style. To those who have not as yet read his "Half a Century" of men and manners we can promise what is said to be beyond the pale of possibility—"a new pleasure."

* "Half a Century; or, Changes in Men and Manners." By Alex. Innes Shand. (William Blackwood and Sons.)

In glancing through the file of the Art Journal we find that the June number was overlooked. In these circumstances it is perhaps unnecessary to do more than invite attention to the two etchings—one of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, the other of the Royal Castle at Windsor. It would be impossible to conceive anything more artistic, more charming, more suitable to the Jubilee year in which we are living.

The Century Magazine, so far as pictures are concerned, is perfection; but as regards the letterpress, the reader should be an American to appreciate the never-ending drag of Yankee tales, Yankee wars, and Yankee scenery. A journal published at New York must needs appeal to the population across the Atlantic, and old England has no objection to be told the ways and doings of the "new Britishers"; but there is, or should be, "reason in the wasting of eggs."

The Army and Navy Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) for September continues the account of "Six Months of Ocean Tramp," and M. J. Colquhoun's story of "Every Inch a Soldier," the chapters in the present number being of thrilling interest, dealing as they do with some of the most stirring incidents of the Indian Mutiny. Colonel Rivett Carnac's paper on the "Early History of the Bengal Presidency" is a most readable one, as also the account of "A Frontier Adventure," by Parker Gilmore. A good and useful memorandum on "Soldiers' Shoes," by A. T. Sibbald, will be appreciated by military readers. E. E. Cuttrell contributes a bright little episode "The Sincerest Flattery," and Furlough tells the story of the month "trippingly" as usual. A very good number.

The Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) commences its September issue with a brilliantly-coloured frontispiece of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, to which Major Archer supplies the letterpress. In giving the history of these Orders might not the names of the present recipients of the distinction be given too? "The French Cuirassiers," with its excellent illustrations (nine), is, we presume, a translation, but not the less to be appreciated on that account. Colonel L'Estrange continues his interesting chapters on General Boulanger, and General Mitford his admirable account of his travels in the Orient and Occident. Captain Gall also gives another of his able chapters on "Modern Tactics." The pièce de resistance of the number is the paper in which the Editor gives at some length, and with eleven illustrations, his "Impressions of the Great Naval Review of 1887." As a favoured guest on board the Inflexible he was a spectator of all that happened, and he gives his readers the result of his close scrutiny, keen judgment, and ripe experience on several of the most intricate questions of the day affecting the efficiency of the Fleet and the naval supremacy of Great Britain. The paper will, no doubt, attract considerable attention in Naval circles. A Jubilee Ode, with which the number concludes, is perhaps more loyal than poetical; but it is not worse than Lord Tennyson's.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"Kidnapped," by Robert Louis Stevenson (Cassell and Co.).

THE old imprint of Milford Lane, which ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL has borne for nearly thirty years, undergoes a change to-day; the printers, Messrs. Woodfall and Kinder, having removed their printing offices to new and spacious premises, 69 to 76, Long Acre. These premises, which they have had specially built for their large and increasing business, have, of course, all the modern improvements and conveniences which go with progressive times, but the former building is associated with many incidents of journalism that will be pleasant memories for some of the old hands, of whom there are many in the establishment. Could the "tall gentleman" who once threw an MS. into Woodfall's first printing office in the city, which MS. was a letter from Junius, look in at Long Acre to-day he would not pen a, perhaps, less complimentary letter to his printer than he did as Junius then to Woodfall, telling him that his ambition should be to achieve "a moderate independence." The ambition of printers, as of other business men to-day, is to make a fortune, and it is to be hoped that such may be the case with the present successors of the printers of the "Letters of Junius."

MESSRS. WOODFALL AND KINDER'S new printing offices at Long Acre have been planned by Mr. Witherington, architect, and erected by Messrs. Patman and Fotheringham, under the supervision of Mr. Rowe.

THE taste for whisky in preference to other spirits has spread to Burma. The imports in 1882-83 amounted to 11,576 gallons, in the next three years they were 13,344, 13,834, and 19,137 gallons respectively, whilst in the twelve months just ended, the total had risen to the large figure of 43,904 gallons. The imports of brandy were highest during the past five years, in 1884 85 69,279 gallons having been received. There was a fall to 53,791 gallons in 1885-86, and a rise again to 61,246 gallons in 1886 87. The imports of ale, beer, and porter increased from 213,753 gallons in 1882-83 to 452,009 in 1886-87, and those of rum from 47,641 to 50,471 gallons. There was a decrease in champagne and claret, and an extraordinary decline in the imports of gin, which in 1882-83 amounted to 101,654 gallons, whilst in the last twelve months they were only 63,802 gallons. The increase in malt liquors is attributed to the large quantity received from the Murree Brewery for the use of the troops.

COLONEL MARSHALL made a curious slip in his English history in his recent speech at Haidarabad. "On one occasion," he began, "when the famous English orator, John Bright, had addressed one of those eloquent speeches for which he is celebrated to a large audience, another gentleman who rose to speak after him contented himself with the remark, 'I say ditto to Mr. Bright.'" Mr. Bright would, no doubt, feel grateful for this compliment, but at the same time it is not improbable that he would remind Colonel Marshall that the "famous English orator" of his anecdote bore the name, not of John Bright, but of Edmund Burke.

The following notifications are Gazetted:—Mr. C. R. Marindin, Officiating Magistrate, Dinagepur, is allowed leave for three months. Mr. H. R. Coxe, Assistant Magistrate, Naraingani, Dakka, is allowed leave for two months and twenty days, and Mr. A. A. Pennel, Assistant and Collector, Dakka, is appointed temporarily to have charge of the Naraingang sub-division of that district during his absence. Mr. N. Warde-Jones, Deputy Magistrate, on leave, is appointed temporarily to have charge of the Giridhi sub-division in the district of Hazaribagh. Mr. J. Beames, Commissioner of the Burdwan Division, is appointed to be Commissioner of the Bhagulpur Divison. Mr. N. S. Alexander, Commissioner of the Bhagulpur Division, is appointed to be Commissioner of the Burdwan Division. Mr. H. C. Clogston, Assistant Superintendent of Police, Howrah, during the absence on leave of Mr. W. W. Daly.

REASONS FOR MORE BUSINESS IN INDIA.

Indian papers to hand contain reports of the meeting of the partners of the Bank of Bombay, at which some interesting matters was discussed by the chairman. In the course of remarks dealing with the action of the Indian Government in disposing of Council bills he expressed the opinion that it was worthy of consideration whether the Government did all that it could be expected of it in that way, whether it did all it could to lighten the stringency of money. He held that inasmuch as cheap money stimulated and fostered trade anything Government did to prevent or lessen stringency must through its benefit to trade directly feed the Exchequer. He thought there was every reason to anticipate an increase to banking business. Latterly the Exchange Banks, suspicious of silver, had kept their funds in England, and depended largely on local sources to supplement their business requirements. That policy might alter from time to time, but so long as the movements of silver were beyond the reach of calculation it was likely to prevail pretty frequently. And the movements of silver might become startingly eccentric soon, governed as they were threatened to be by bulls and bears through the manipulation of the newly-devised warrants scheme. That is one reason for more business. A second was the expansion of the cotton mill and kindred local industries. A third was the extension of the railway system of Western India, which will inevitably swell internal and external commerce. The Southern Mahratta lines were approaching completion, the Nagpore-Bengal and Midland lines were being constructed rapidly, and soon they might hear that the Godra-Rutlam extension had been sanctioned. These would add hugely to the trade of the presidency and port. It appeared in January as if they were going to have a bumper year in crops. Accounts from every district were splendid. Late rains and unusual cold, with in some places frost, did much harm in February, marring the bright promise, and although crops had turned out on the whole fairly well, they had disappointed early anticipations.

M. NICOLAS NOTOVICH.

The Simla paper gives some further information concerning M. Notovich, the Russian correspondent who has arrived at Simla:—

He is only thirty years of age, and an officer of the world-known Cossacks, decorated by the Czar in 1877 with the Order of St. George (equivalent to our V.C.). He was wounded in the head by a bullet, and received also a sword-cut on the wrist, under General Scobeleff, whose orderly he was. After the war he went through Turkey, Asia Minor, the Caucasus, Central Asia, and Persia, always on horseback, like our Captain Burnaby. He has many interesting stories of his travels, the best of which relates to a keepsake given to him by Ayub Khan.

Apropos of the news of Sikandar Khan and of Dhuleep Singh that they are in Central Asia, M. Notovich says they never have been there. Sikandar Khan is always at Teheran, and Dhuleep Singh is still at Moscow with Shaik-ud-din. He cannot go to St. Petersburg until he receives an invitation from the Czar, on which account he has sent a petition to be received.

Mr. Notovich has also proved himself as ready with the sword as the pen; and if all the Cossack officers are as much at home in the drawing-room as in the battle-field, they must be a fine body of gentlemen.

We asked him at parting why the English and Russians should be such foes, and he replied, smiling, "If the Bosphorus question were only settled, we should be brothers and not foes."

THE value of gold imported into India during the first three months of the current financial year was Rs. 59,68,292, and of that exported Rs. 3,93,844. The value of silver imported was Rs. 2,47,52,906, and of that exported Rs. 26,11,640. This leaves a balance of imports of both metals of Rs. 2,77,15,714. The essay value of coins and bullion received at the Indian mints in the said three months was Rs. 2,61,50,462, and of that coined and examined Rs. 2,51,17,347.

THE India Council offered for tender last week 20 lakhs of rupees in bills upon the Presidency Treasuries and in telegraphic transfers, and sold the full amount, about three-quarters being in bills. Applicants for the bills at 1s. 5⅛d. per rupee were allotted about 15 per cent. of the amounts applied for, as were applicants for the transfers at 1s. 5 3-16d. per rupee. A week ago the price obtained for the bills was 1s. 5 3-16d. per rupee, 22 per cent. of the amounts applied for being allotted; while for the transfers 1s. 5⅛d. per rupee was obtained. In the week, therefore, it will be seen that the price has fallen a quarter of a farthing per rupee; but the proportion allotted was slightly lower yesterday than on Wednesday of last week. Upon the whole it must be pronounced that the policy pursued by the Council of late has been successful. Fluctuations must from time to time be expected; and, indeed, a little while ago a downward movement in the exchanges seemed far more probable than an upward. Then, however, it was assumed that the Council drawings would be very large, as was indicated in the Budget statement. They have not been at all so large as was expected; while the check given to the exports of cotton piece goods has decidedly favoured the market, and has thus aided the policy lately pursued by the Council.

MONDAY, AUGUST 29, 1887.

THE BRITISH SOLDIER IN INDIA.

ONE of the most remarkable, and at the same time one of the most pleasing, features of our rule in India is the change which has come over the conditions under which the soldier from England formerly took service in the East. Fifty years ago, when Tommy Atkins left the shores of his native land for India, he went with no hope within his own breast nor in the breasts of his friends that he would ever return. An embarkation of a regiment in those days was a sad and sorry spectacle, notwithstanding the cheering strains of music and the acclamation of the crowds which were supposed to make the ceremony an imposing one. The dark side of the picture very soon commenced. There was first of all a long and dreary voyage round the Cape in generally a crowded, ill-ventilated, and badly victualled transport. Diseases, such as small-pox and fever, broke out on the voyage as often as not. There was little attention attention paid to cleanliness, and less to comfort on board. Cattle fare better on a voyage now than did soldiers in those days. Landed in India the situation was not particularly attractive. There were duties and fatigues to be done, drills to be gone through, and all manner of discomforts to be endured in camp or miserable quarters upon which sun or rain beat fiercely, without anybody troubling themselves that the hospitals filled, that cholera was rampant, and that hundreds died like rotten sheep. As gaps were thus made in the battalions, fresh drafts from Europe came to fill them up, and to fill fresh graves in their turn. It was a life of terrible monotony and stagnation, tempered only perhaps by canteen rum. Sometimes there was a chance of service in the field, and the prospect of a fight was the silver lining to the otherwise dark cloud which overhung Tommy Atkins's destiny in India. And so matters continued with little change until the great Mutiny had been put down by his indomitable endurance and grand gallantry. The authorities then began to bestir themselves to do something to better his condition. Sir Hugh Rose was perhaps the first Commander-in-Chief of India who devoted himself thoroughly and unceasingly to improving the position of his soldiers in every way affecting interior economy of regiments, military hygiene, barrack accommodation, food, clothing, exercise, and amusements. It is true that other Commanders before him—notably Sir Charles Napier—attempted certain reforms, but the credit must be given to Sir Hugh Rose of having made the amelioration of the condition of the British soldier in India his care and study during the whole tenure of his command. He was fortunate, no doubt, in having public opinion on his side, and on being able to impress his views upon the Government of the day, although it is no secret that he had more than one hard battle to fight against the economic conservatism of that strange anomaly in the Viceroy's Council—the Military member—who, subordinate to the Commander-in-Chief, can oppose and thwart him whenever and wherever the latter suggests a change in the old order of things. In Lord Napier of Magdala the soldier in India found another friend, whose sympathies for his well-being were not less than those of Sir Hugh Rose, and Lord Napier has been succeeded by Sir Donald Stewart and Sir Frederick Roberts, friends of his own, who have been true to the same instincts of doing all in their power to make the lot of Tommy Atkins in India a bright and pleasant one. And such it is to-day. Soldiering now in India is a career to be sought after, and were necessity to arise, the authorities here might raise any number of battalions for service in that country by simply making known the plain facts of how the soldier there is now treated. The idea of forming again a local European army for India still finds favour in many quarters; but there are many objections which would have to be met before the experiment could be tried again. One difficulty, however, there is not—the difficulty of finding recruits. On the contrary, should such a force be called again into existence, the Authorities could make sure of obtaining a splendid body of men of excellent physique and of good character—were the attractions of Indian service made public. In the matter of pay alone the private soldier in India at the present time receives nearly as much as a sergeant did a dozen years ago, and if it be true that the purchasing power of the rupee has locally increased, Tommy Atkins can not only live comfortably there but save money. His work is not severe, he has good and spacious quarters; his health, his physical and intellectual training, his wants and his amusements, are all carefully attended to, and everything is being done to make his sojourn in the East a pleasant and profitable one for him. And it is not only the Viceroy and Governors of Provinces and their Councillors who are permitted to migrate to the hills in the hot weather. A Return just published shows that there are between thirteen and fourteen thousand European soldiers scattered over the hill stations of Bengal and Upper India this summer. This is a large proportion out of the 43,000 troops in Bengal, and it speaks well for the contented condition of India that this arrangement has become possible. But not only is the soldier thus cared for; his little ones are looked after too. There are just now not less than three thousand European soldiers' children enjoying the same balmy breezes on the Indian hills. Verily a change has come over the old military martinet dream, in whose vision Tommy Atkins was only food for powder if wanted for war, and little better than food for grave-worms if wanted for Indian service!

THE annual dinner of the officers who served in the Afghan War took place at Simla on Sept. 1. General Roberts, who presided, in replying to the toast of his health, alluded to the deaths of Generals Macpherson and Macgregor, and described them as men who by universal consent would have been among the principal leaders in a possible greater war of the future. He then proceeded to dwell on the necessity for preparation, and said:—"If we prepare thoroughly and completely we have nothing to fear from any foe that may come upon us. With such troops, such officers, and such an army generally as India can place in the field, we must win."

A REUTER'S telegram, dated Alexandria, August 25, states:—"The Duke of Connaught arrived here early this morning from Brindisi. Shortly after his arrival his Royal Highness proceeded to the Palace, and invested the Khedive with the insignia of a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath conferred upon his Royal Highness by the Queen on the occasion of the Jubilee. The ceremony was of a most brilliant character, and took place in the presence of all the Ministers. The Duke subsequently went on board Her Majesty's ship Phaeton, where the Khedive returned his Royal Highness's visit. The Duke left Alexandria at noon, by special train, for Suez, the Khedive accompanying him to the railway station. Zulficar Pasha and Halton Boy, director of the European Railway Administration, travelled in the train with his Royal Highness."

STUBBINGTON HOUSE.—This well-known naval and military academy has lost none of its popularity; indeed, the longer it is established the greater number of successful pupils does it turn out. At the recent examination for Royal Naval Cadetships Stubbington House again took the first, as well as the fourth fifth, sixth, and seventh places. At the final examination for the Naval Cadets Scholarship on board the Britannia, commanded by Captain F. G. D. Bedford, C.B., a Stubbington boy took first place, and the batch to pass out of the ship in November next has been headed throughout by a boy from the above naval and military school. Among the pupils who studied and successfully passed at Stubbington may be mentioned the present popular Senior Naval Lord at the Admiralty. The candidates sent up for the Army Preliminary during the year have been successful, and according to the Book Report on the education of executive officers more than one-third of the successful candidates are from Stubbington.

THE

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxio to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

SYSTEMS OF

HEATING, COOLING, VENTILATING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHTING ARE THE CHEAPEST AND BEST.

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, th school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

From all sub-tropical planting settlements we have had cordial approval of the publication and an encouraging measure of support. THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

As a medium for English, American, and Australian ADVERTISEMENTS of goods suitable for the tropics, India, as well as Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Java, and West Indies (Central America being included in that term), or connected with agriculture, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST stands unrivalled, the work being constantly in the hands of Native as well as European and American agriculturists. Being a Monthly Periodical, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST lies on the table and is very often referred to during each month, a fact which advertisers will know how to appreciate.

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G., Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, writing of the T. A., refers to it as "an astonishing repertory of everything relating to the economic botany of the East."

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name —J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scene from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 23rd August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 21th August; and from Calcutta to the 20th August.

AUTHENTIC reports from Afghanistan indicate that the Afghan revolt has collapsed, and that the Ghilzais are dispersing.

THE Amir's troops are reported to be returning towards Ghazni and Kandahar, the Ghilzais being demoralised after their defeat of the 26th July, and showing no signs of fresh gatherings.

SOME two thousand Taraki and Andari Ghilzais, flying from the Ameer's vengeance, have just crossed the border into Toba and Peshin. The Nasiri fugitives are also finding their way into the Zhob Valley.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS will leave Simla in October. He will probably meet the Viceroy at Peshawur early in November, and accompany him on tour along the north-west frontier.

THE Government of India have placed a restriction on travelling in disturbed parts of Upper Burma.

THE question of the reduction of the Upper Burma Army has been referred to General White for final suggestions.

FROM the Ruby Mines comes the news that revenue, collected at 30 per cent. ad valorem, is coming in satisfactorily, and will likely greatly exceed Messrs. Streeter's bid.

SOME proposals have gone home to the India Office, in which some new appointments have been recommended for the Secretariat of the Chief Commissioner of Burma.

THE concession has been made to officers serving in Burma, Civil and Military alike, of counting their privilege leave from the date of arrival at and departure from Calcutta. Military officers in Burma, who have not been able to take their special leave this year, may take it next.

SOME two-thirds of the Indian police stationed at Mogok, the headquarters of the Ruby Mines district, were on the sick list last month.

THE scheme for the redistribution of divisional brigades and station commands, which has been under consideration for a year past, has now been worked out, and will shortly be submitted for approval to the Secretary of State.

BETTER reports are coming in regarding the cholera in Upper India, the late heavy rain having checked the spread of the disease.

MR. A. O'MEARA, the well-known surgeon-dentist, has left Peshawar for Kabul on the invitation of the Amir, who has, it is said, long desired to consult him professionally.

THE Sangor to Etawah portion of the Indian Midland Railway is to be constructed by contract. The work has been given to Messrs. Glover and Co., of Bombay.

THE Government of India will take over the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway from the 1st of July next.

IT is probable that his Highness the Nizam will visit England next year.

THE death is announced from cholera of the late Colonel Thompson, Acting Deputy Commissioner of Amraoti.

CHOLERA has been bad in the further western Dun almost as far as the Jumna. In Judge Vansittart's tea plantation there were eighteen seizures in one day, of which nine were fatal. Cholera is beginning to subside in Deyrah and its immediate vicinity.

THE death is announced, on August 6, of the Maharani of Ulwar.

IT is reported from Burma that the Rev. Mr. Wintour has filed a suit against the Bishop of Rangoon and others to recover passage money, arrears of salary, and damages for defamation.

THE Secretary of State having sanctioned the appointment of a scientific assistant in the Revenue and Agricultural Department, Dr. Watt, C.I.E., will be the first incumbent of this office.

IT is reported that the fiat has gone forth that all future admissions to the superior grades of the Bengal Police shall be by competitive examination.

THE Royal Engineer officers summoned to Simla to assist in the preparation of designs for defence works are Major W. H. Haydon, Captain E. C. Spilsbury, and Lieutenants E. A. Edgell, W. R. Hilliard, B. B. Russell, and G. Williams.

MR. THIBAUT has taken over charge of the combined offices of Registrar of the Punjab University and Principal of the Oriental College.

WORK is said to have been suspended for some time on the Sarakhs branch of the Russian Transcaspian Railway. The reason for this is not known. The Oxus line seems more important in the eyes of the Russian Engineers now that the Merv-Chaharjui section has been completed.

IT is probable that M. Pasteur may send out an agent to India during the ensuing cold weather to conduct experiments in the vaccination of cattle.

IT is officially notified that Cantonment Magistrates appointed since 1st January last come under the operation of the five years' rule. Pay in the case of Subalterns will be Rs. 600 a month, rising to Rs. 700 after the highest standard is passed. Officers higher in rank will receive Rs. 700 and Rs. 800.

FROM the latest returns of the prices of food-grains throughout India it appears that, on the average, every item is slightly dearer in the Punjab than in the North-West Provinces and Oudh.

MESSRS. ANGIER BROTHERS' Steam Freight Report says :—The chief features have been a good sustained demand for steamers from Azoff, Black Sea and Danube, and an improvement in outward rates to India. In the China trade dissensions have again arisen among the members of the Conference in consequence of the circular issued by the Ocean Company offering a participation in the profits of their steamers over and above a certain sum per voyage to all regular shippers; in the present state of the trade, however, there is little chance of the steamers making any margin over or even reaching the sum fixed. A reduction of 5/- per ton in homeward rates has been made, but no further changes have yet resulted. China coasting is a shade better. Java rates home improved to 38/9, otherwise all India business is very dull indeed. From Japan 35/ net is offering for 2,000 tons Rice to U.K. or Cont., September-October loading. A medium-sized boat might be placed from Bangkok for Rice at 35/- to 36/3 net, October. From Java 38/9 was paid to fill a pressing order for Mediterranean, U.K. or Cont., September, but 37/6 only is offering for further tonnage. From the Burmah Rice Ports 37/6 net has been accepted for next season, February-March loading, and this rate might be repeated for handy sized tonnage.

THE LOSS OF THE TASMANIA.—A massive silver salver is about to be presented to Mr. and Mrs. Ratcliffe Platt, of Oldham, by a number of the passengers who were on board the P. and O. steamer Tasmania when she was wrecked. The salver bears the following inscription :—"Presented to Mr. and Mrs. Ratcliffe Platt, Werneth Park, Oldham, in thankful remembrance of the timely aid afforded by them with their yacht Norseman, in rescuing forty-nine passengers from the P. and O. steamer Tasmania, which was wrecked off the coast of Sardinia on April 17, 1887."

NOTES.

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT arrived at Bombay on he 5th inst., and opened the Soldiers' Industrial Institute at Poona on the day following.

THE Anglo-Indian Press is very indignant that the Horse Guards should have sent back the list of recommendations for honours and rewards, on account of the Burma campaign, to India for revision. But what could the Horse Guards do with a list which recommended everyone, from commander to subaltern, for distinguished services? Why the non-commissioned officers and privates were not included also seems strange when the determination was so strong to do everybody justice. Perhaps the reason for omitting the name of Tommy Atkins was that given in the old song by Lover:—

"What had he to do with wreaths and laurels?
He was but one of the rank and file."

Certainly with so many officers "recommended" there was little room in the Burma Despatch for a private soldier's name.

BUT the Anglo-Indian Press has no right to attribute, as it does, this action of the Horse Guards to the jealousy of Lord Wolseley. The Pioneer says that "the same distinguished soldier who ignored General Stephenson's victory at Giniss as an insignificant skirmish has evidently been unable to bear the idea that British troops have been distinguishing themselves in another part of the world without his assistance." This is unjust and untrue, and the Pioneer only damages its own high reputation as the leading journal of India by giving publicity to such an assertion. It is not "the general tendency of the Horse Guards to pooh-pooh India, backed by the predisposition of the Adjutant-General." The Indian army has no better friend or well-wisher than Lord Wolseley. And Sir Frederick Roberts, of whom calumny says he is so jealous, knows this well.

THE Pioneer points to the hard work unostentatiously done by the troops in Burma, as shown by the Casualty Returns. From the commencement of the operations under General Prendergast to the end of last month 13 British officers had been killed in action, 5 died of wounds, 17 of disease, 54 had been wounded, and 125 invalided. Of the rank and file, British and Native, 116 had been killed in action, 35 died of wounds, 1,477 of disease, 446 had been wounded, and 4,186 invalided. In other words, 1,663 officers and men have been killed or have died of disease, and 500 have been wounded. The total casualties, including invaliding, are 214 British officers, 2,227 British rank and file, and 4,033 Natives of all ranks, or a grand total of 6,474. Admitting all this, there is no necessity to add that the Horse Guards desires to ignore the services of the troops who were engaged. Surely it is part of a British soldier's duty to endure privation and run climatic risks without insisting that his name should be mentioned in despatches for so doing. To argue differently is to insult and degrade an honourable profession.

ACCORDING to the latest information received by Government, Ayoub Khan's party had been surrounded in Afghanistan by the troops of the Ameer, and he himself driven back into Persia, where orders have been given by the Shah for his capture.

This will, it is to be hoped, put a stop to the sensational scares which were being manufactured in the Press regarding Ayoub's actions being directed by Russian intrigue with a view to preparing a revolution in Afghanistan, in order to expedite the coming Russian conquest of British India.

NOT satisfied with the above explanation, the irrepressible Dr. Tanner asked in the House last night whether, in the event of Ayoub Khan raising a fresh insurrection in Afghanistan, Her Majesty's Government would be prepared to give armed support to the Ameer? To this question Sir J. Fergusson diplomatically replied that he was not able to state what the Government might do under any conceivable circumstances.

Of course such an answer was only to be expected from an official source. It would, no doubt, have been very inconvenient to have given a direct reply, but there is certainly some anxiety in the public mind as to how far we are committed to assist the present Ameer in case he should have to call upon us for assistance. A letter which appears in our columns to-day from a well-known thoughtful and experienced writer, whose views on all matters affecting India are entitled to every respect, touches upon this subject, and will be perused with interest by many of our readers.

THE question of the lease of the Burma Ruby Mines evidently interested the House of Commons much more than any questions of income or expenditure in connection with the Indian Budget. Mr. Bradlaugh was very much "down" upon the Messrs. Streeter, whose representatives in Burma, he declared, had been allowed by the Government officials to take rubies at their own price, and "as to those which they did not take they had been allowed to compel the Natives to pay 30 per cent. of the value to them." This was explained by Sir J. Gorst, but still the discussion went on until he assured the House that the Secretary of State for India would give no contract for these mines to any one until their value had been fully ascertained. Perhaps then Messrs. Streeter will not tender for it.

AN Indian contemporary says:—"A strange story comes to us from the Western Presidency in connection with the local Public Works Secretaryship. It would seem that the Government of India objected to a member of the Civil Service being made Secretary, and the Local Government seemed equally to object to putting in a senior officer of the Department or to receive one from outside. So the result is that the Department is now being managed by a Second Grade Executive Engineer, who is acting as Secretary. No special pay is attached to the Secretaryship, but the Local Government can appoint the holder of it to be a Chief Engineer of the First Class, with a salary of Rs. 2,500. In order to give the present incumbent the full salary a Government Resolution has lately been passed appointing the lucky Second Grade Executive Engineer to be a Chief Engineer, First Class, "sub pro tem." This is promotion with a vengeance—from pay of Rs. 800 per month to Rs. 2,500. But, we may venture to ask, why has not the said Resolution been published in the Gazette? Perhaps the Government of India might again direct their attention to the affair."

THE "Indian Forests Conservancy Return" appears to be a valuable document, from a monetary point of view. According to a statement in one of the Bengal papers the cost of printing four volumes of the Report in England amounted to Rs.21,657-12 annas. They were completed in August last, and up to the middle of last month eight copies had been sold in India, realising Rs. 133, being Rs. 16-10 per copy. To the cost of printing must be added the cost of preparation at home, in the office of the Secretary of State for India, which amounted to Rs. 17,856-8. It would be interesting to know the cost of the preparation of the original reports in India. The cost in England of the preparation and printing amounts to nearly Rs. 10,000 per volume!

THE Simla Argus writes:—"We are informed that recruiting for the Native Army is being vigorously pushed forward, and that jail birds are being enlisted wholesale. There is no precedent for drawing recruits from the criminal class; but inasmuch as they have been under strict jail discipline, there is strong probability that they will turn out to be brave soldiers. The only objection which can be raised against such a step is that honest Natives who have already enlisted are apt to show their resentment to men who have been attainted of crime, and the Native army may thereby become greatly demoralised. We hope, however, the criminals who have been enlisted will be regarded as soldiers, and not as scoundrels and thieves, fighting for our beloved Queen-Empress."

THE Government of India have decided that as the entire cost of the Burma Military Police is a civil charge, and as military officers appointed thereto are seconded in their regiments, service therein would ordinarily be held to be civil employ. But, taking into consideration the quasi-military character of their service, and the fact that the military officers holding these appointments must, at the end of five and two years respectively, according as they may be commandants or assistant commandants, revert to military employ, the Government of India have decided that service in the Burma Military Police shall be held to be military for the purposes of election, by military officers employed therein, of the new Leave Rules for the Staff Corps. It is to be understood that this decision holds good only for so long as the military character of the police is preserved, and for so long as the officers are held to be liable to revert to military duty at the end of five and two years respectively.

THE IMPENDING INVASION OF AFGHANISTAN.

TO THE EDITOR.

Sir,—The active preparations for a march on Kandahar, which have been going on in India, and the material increase simultaneously made in the numerical strength of the Indian Army, place beyond doubt the determination of our Government once more to invade Afghanistan; and recent events in that country seem of a nature likely to precipitate the movement. At the same time, we are without any authoritative declaration of the motive for which we are about to attack an unoffending neighbour, or the purpose which the projected war is intended to accomplish: nor has a voice been raised in Parliament to inquire into any such motive and purpose. And yet the policy which is being pursued towards Afghanistan is substantially the same as the policy initiated in 1876, which led to the war of 1878-80, and resulted in disaster and discomfiture.

The late war was entered upon for the purpose of forcing the Afghans to receive a permanent British garrison in Kandahar, and eventually one at Herat, with a British Resident at each place. With this end in view three columns penetrated into the country, and in less than three months these forces were reduced to a state of impotency through sickness and the destruction of their baggage animals. The chief object of the campaign was the advance of a column to Herat. This column entirely failed in accomplishing its task; on reaching Kandahar it had already lost 20,000 of its Commissariat camels, and found itself in an enemy's country without food and without transport. Thereupon three-fourths of the troops were ordered immediately to return to India as the only means of keeping them supplied with food; and this unsuccessful attempt to reach Herat may be said to have constituted the campaign up to the treaty of Gundamuck. Two other columns also entered the enemy's country, but their operations were subsidiary to the proposed advance on Herat; and when that had failed, they became meaningless. The loss in camels in the three columns reached the appalling figure of 60,000, while typhoid and cholera raged among our troops, so that several regiments were reduced to half their strength. Under the circumstances there was nothing left for us but to make peace on the best terms we could get, and we accordingly accepted the offer of honourable terms which was made to us by Yakoob Khan on his being proclaimed Ameer of Kabul by a section of the Afghan tribes.

The treaty of Gundamuck was then concluded, and under its provisions we sent Sir Louis Cavignari as British Resident at Kabul. Within a few weeks of his arrival in that city the Residency was attacked, and Sir Louis Cavignari and his escort were all killed. This led to a second invasion of Afghanistan when, owing to the difficulty previously experienced in feeding our forces at Kandahar, the notion of maintaining a garrison at that place was given up as impracticable, and it was resolved instead to establish a large British Cantonment at Kabul. Sir Frederick Roberts marched to Kabul over the Peiwar Pass; but his subsequent defeat by Mahomed Jân and all the troubles which grew out of it compelled our Government to relinquish that plan likewise.

A new plan was then formed, which consisted in making over Herat to Persia, placing Abdurrahman in possession of Northern Afghanistan and converting the territory of Kandahar into a distinct province under the rule of a Wallee. This scheme, in its turn, was frustrated by the advance of Ayoub Khan from Herat, the defeat of our forces at Maiwand, and the siege of Kandahar. Our energies were then directed to the relief of our garrison at Kandahar, an operation in which we were successful; and the Government was then led to give up Afghanistan to the present Ameer, retaining only the right to occupy the Pesheen Valley, an isolated tract so destitute of food and water that a single regiment of Cavalry could scarcely subsist on it resources.

Thus our attempt to maintain British garrisons and British Residents in Afghanistan was defeated at every point. On what grounds are we warranted in looking for more successful results in the invasion on which we are about to embark?

The Beaconsfield-Salisbury Cabinet, who initiated the policy which is now being pursued, declared that the object of their policy was to secure a "strong, friendly and independent Afghanistan" against a Russian invasion of India. That object was certainly not promoted, but was defeated by the late invasion, excepting insomuch that the Afghans ultimately asserted their independence; but the war inflicted on us an amount of injury, the effects of which will long be felt. Besides the loss of military prestige which resulted from our failure in a war entered upon without the least provocation, we have entirely alienated the people of Afghanistan, imposed a heavy burden of taxation on our Indian subjects, and evoked from the latter unequivocal expressions of disapprobation and discontent. In order to appreciate the gravity of these results, it is only necessary to remember that if Russia should ever determine on invading India, the result would in no small degree be influenced by the attitude of the Afghan tribes, and the feelings which the Indian populations would entertain for the British Government.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS

GENERAL NASSAU LEES.

(Pioneer.)

An Oriental power, like England in the East, has for two generations liberally encouraged among its servants the study of the languages and literature of the great country she governs, and yet the one man who has spared neither person nor purse in support of this great aim, himself the first Oriental scholar in India, both in time and degree, in Mahomedan literature and law, remains without a riband. Major-General Nassau Lees, like Lord Castlereagh at Vienna, is indeed distinguished among the stars that surround him. Year after year the fountain of honour shoots up its glittering cascade, no spray of which has silvered his bays, and the tinkling streamlet at its foot hurries along, lending a brief radiance to wayside pebbles that check and obscure its career. For a generation that has forgotten his ill-requited services it would not be amiss to review them briefly, if for no other purpose than, like the death of Byng, "to encourage the others." Omitting to mention the appointments he held, and which, owing to the line he chose, might lead to fame but not to emolument, it is but justice to say that the Calcutta Madrassah owes to his strenuous support its establishment on a foundation of permanent security. Its great defect lay in the very partial recognition of the Oriental classics in the University course, and the rule compelling students of the Anglo-Persian Department to hold their scholarships at some of the English Colleges. This prevented the Arabic department from obtaining fresh blood from its own English school, and left it dependent on the Mahomedan schools of the country. The remedy of this hindrance, the introduction of Oriental classics into the course for a Bachelor's Degree, the affiliation of the Madrassah to the University, were obtained mainly by General Lees, in spite of official opposition, after a contest as long, if not as famous, as that of Troy. Before closing his connection with that institution he had the satisfaction to find that the English department of the college which had been frequented only by the children of tailors, khidmatgars and coachmen, was numerously attended by the sons of wealthy and influential gentlemen in and about Calcutta, and that more English junior scholarships had been gained by the students than in the preceding seventy-five years of the existence of the college. As regards the duties of the Principal of those days, it may comfort the present holder that they are not his. He was at once Professor of law, logic, literature and mathematics, and had to examine in Arabic both the Calcutta and Hughli Mahomedan Colleges, besides conducting alone the whole of the Arabic senior and junior scholarship examinations. And this, in addition to duties as examiner of the military class in the Medical College, of direct cadets and candidates for admission to the Army, and responsibility for the language qualifications of civil and military officers in the various Departments of the Service. But his greatest services to literature remain to be mentioned. He edited and printed, entirely at his own expense, the great commentary of Zamakshari, to this day the most valuable exegesis on the Koran extant, and which elicited the handsome acknowledgments of the Shah of Persia. It was dedicated to the Court of Directors, and accepted with the inexpensive recompense of thanks. His own press continued to pour forth editions of works hitherto never printed. The Nafahat-ul-Uns of Jami, an exhaustive treatise on Sufyism; the Mahomedan Conquest of Syria, by Wakidi; a similar work by Azdi; the Nukhbat-ul-Fikr of Ibu Hajar; the History of the Caliphs of Us Suyúti, and the Tales of Kuliubi. In Persian he brought out the famous romance of Wis o Ramin of Fakhruddin al Astarabadi and the Aaras-i-Buzurgan, an obituary notice of the principal Mahomedan doctors. He also wrote the Arabic and Persian series long in popular use as elementary schoolbooks in those languages. Well-known and appreciated by scholars in Germany, France and Holland, General Nassau Lees has met at the hands of his own country alone no recognition for work that left him the poorer for the doing. There was scarcely a subject of public interest, or connected with the economic progress of India to the discussion of which he did not contribute, in numerous publications, the fruits, not of his leisure, for he gave himself none, but of the careful husbandry of his time. Questions regarding land and labour, the drain of silver in the East, the cultivation of tea, of cinchona, for an essay on which he received, we believe, a special prize from Government, the sale of waste lands, Central Asia and others, have at various times occupied his pen. From his own and foreign Universities, he received such distinctions as it was in their power to bestow. It is not too much, it is not too late, to expect that amends may yet be made for the omission of the past. Among the knighthoods that fortune has, of late, so profusely scattered, as if to show her power there are few names worthy to scale with his. Eminence in Oriental learning and unequal exertions in facilitating its study to others cannot be denied him, and learning is itself discredited in his neglect. Moulvies and Pundits by the score have lately been honoured by a pompous burial beneath weighty and barbarous titles of fame, and he who has done more for them and their literature than all of them together is unrewarded. He has, however, a consolation that honours do not often give. Ea est enim jucunda laus quæ ab iis proficisitur qui ipsi in laude vixerunt. Is he to have no other?

MOFUSSIL JURISDICTION.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

A planter's life in Bengal often necessitates his serving as Judge and Jury combined on short notice. Here is a specimen of an ordinary coolie scuffle:—

A coolie quarrel, as usual on bazaar day. Sweetface (Sudamooki) and Rosy (Gulabi) have had a row—a deuce of a row. The facts of the case, elicited from the statements, duly discounted, and shorn of irrelevance of eye-witnesses of the fracas, appear to be as follows: Rumtub, Sweetface's husband, had been casting sheep's eyes at Rosy. He had treated her to bazaar lollipops, which, like the conversation lozenges affected during Sunday outings by our Scotch lasses and lads, are eloquent comestibles. He had again and again presented her with pan soupari, a very compromising refreshment. Worst of all he had flung at her clods of earth, tantamount to a declaration. For, to enlighten the greenhorn, earth clods are used among coolies not as a means of aggression as one would suppose, but are singularly enough, with ibonbons and quids, considered as appropriate vehicles for conveying expressions of tender feeling.

All this was so lacerating to Sweetface's sensibilities that she became negligent of her household duties, whereby Rumtub soon began to find himself less comfortable than he could wish. Being a man of imperfect logic, this caused him, by way of setting matters entirely to rights, to whack Sweetface, and called her a lazy witch, all of which hurt her feelings so much that, meeting her rival a-marketing, she eased her mind by using her tongue with such plainness of epithet and unambiguousness of assertion that Rosy felt constrained to tweak her nose, and a hairpulling match ensued, in which the cause of right was victorious. Responding to an impassioned appeal, a number of Rosy's adherents, including her brother, a very little man, took up the cudgels on her behalf. Sweetface's cousins and uncles espoused her cause with their shillelaghs, all the fat was in the fire, and the peaceably chattering garden bazaar was turned into an Indianized Donnybrook fair. Eventually the opposing factions were collared and walked up to the bungalow by a posse of line chowkidars.

There now devolves upon me the duty of adjudicating as to who is right and who wrong; a manager is always expected to settle a row like this, which is generally about as easy as it might be to decide which of two dogs began a fight. It is often the most difficult and time-wasting of one's duties to settle coolie quarrels over which both sides lie wholesale, and both expect satisfaction. Personally I never interfere unless hurt has actually been done, or flagrant oppression committed; I find they settle their own quarrels as a rule much the best without any meddling, but there are gardens where coolies are encouraged to come up shrieking their complaints at all hours of the day and night. However, a decision must be come to in this case, as it is a serious row.

Rosy is in hysterics, Sweetface is panting, dishevelled, weeping, but voluble; Rumtub is alternately thrusting forward a bruised head, arm, and back for my inspection; Rosy's brother is wiping his bleeding nose, and looking at the results on his jacket; the other combatants in varying states of dilapidation as to crowns and garments are ranged in the background. Evidence is heard, and counsel on both sides listened to. As Sweetface appears on the whole to be the injured party I grant her a verdict. Sentences are deferred.

BENGAL.

THE working of the Income-Tax in Calcutta appears to give rise to many complaints differing in this respect from the conditions that obtain in Bombay, where the tax is collected without friction of any kind. Last year the Bengal Government had to repudiate the action of the Collector in attaching the property of a gentleman well known in Calcutta society, who had received his first intimation of the amount assessed on him from the officer entrusted with the warrant; and this has had the effect of securing a more careful observance of legal procedure. But there still are cases which are calculated to make the tax unnecessarily obnoxious. An up-country paper writes:—

Gentlemen of unquestioned position, of whose strict probity there can be no sort of doubt, are required to go through the labour of elaborate calculations in order to fill up their returns, only to find that these returns are not accepted, and that the Collector has arbitrarily clapped on something more. Cases of this kind are unknown in England, and it would be well for the Calcutta executive to remember that in the assessment and levying of a tax, for the amount of which you are entirely dependent on information given them by the taxpayer, some consideration is due to the informant. An officer who proceeds on the assumption that no one makes a true return not only causes intense irritation, but directly encourages the submission of false figures or refusal to submit any figure whatever; in either case his position tends to make a fair income-tax an impossibility. The Government is, no doubt, partly to blame in the matter for having made an increase in collections the principal test of efficiency in a tax-collector; but it is the duty of honest servants of the Government to point out the flaw in this test.

MR. C. A. SOPPITT, Assistant Commissioner, Burma, and lately sub-divisional officer in the North Kachar Hills, Assam, has recently published a very interesting account of the Kuki-Lushai Tribe on the north-eastern frontier of Assam, with an outline Grammar of the Rangkhol-Lushai language and a comparison of the Lushai with other tribes.

MADRAS.

AS a means of convenience an agreement has been entered into between the Madras and Pondicherry Governments, under which British revenue officers, entering English territory on duty, are allowed to pass the respective toll-gates without payment of toll. The same system has been in vogue for some time past in the case of Police officers.

THE minor Professor of Medical Jurisprudence at the Madras Medical College, who has hitherto been paid a salary of Rs. 200 per mensem, is, in future, to be remunerated by a fee for the annual course of lectures which he is required to deliver. By this arrangement a large saving will be effected.

THE promoters of the Nilgiri Railway Company have been informed that the Secretary of State is unwilling to accept the responsibility of a Government guarantee even for a limited period, as suggested by them, upon the additional capital of five lakhs, which they wish to raise for the extension of the line from Coonoor to Ootacamund; and that, constituted as the Company is at present as a domiciled Indian one, legal difficulties exist to raising this capital in the English Money Market, even if it be to obviate the necessity of State guarantee above alluded to.

THE labours of the members of the sub-committee of the Public Service Commission in Madras have terminated so far as the taking of evidence is concerned. Sir Charles Turner, the president, will remain in Madras for some time longer in order to look over the proofs of the evidence given in Bombay and Madras, which is being printed in the Government office there. He will then proceed to Simla.

BOMBAY.

SIR FRANK SOUTER nominates, and Sir Munguldas Nathoobhoy seconds, Mr. Geary as a candidate for the vacant seat on the Bombay Corporation.

MR. C. G. BLATHWAYT, C.S., has been allowed privilege leave from the 2nd September. Mr. H. H. Ommanney will act as Collector and Magistrate of Kanara during his absence.

THE following appointments take effect from the date on which Mr. H. A. Acworth delivers over charge of the office of Deputy Collector of Salt Revenue:—Mr. T. M. Cotgrave, deputy collector of Salt Revenue; Mr. C. Pogson, First Class Assistant Collector;

Mr. J. H. Dickinson, Second Assistant Collector; Mr. Jehangier Maneckji Kharshadji, Third Assistant Collector; and Mr. A. R. Maidment, Fourth Assistant Collector.

MR. G. P. MILLETT, Assistant Conservator of Forests, and District Forest Officer, Sholapore, has been allowed three months' privilege leave.

MR. R. COURTENAY, Acting Assistant Judge and Sessions Judge, Rutnagherry, has been allowed furlough to Europe for sixteen months, from September 19.

MR. D. DAVIES has been appointed to act as District Superintendent of Police, Khandesh, during the absence of Major W. G. A. Macbay.

IT is not improbable, according to the Deccan Times, that his Highness the Nizam may visit Ennland next year. His Highness has long desired to do so, but circumstances have prevented him from fulfilling his wish. Should his Highness go, as the first of the Native Princes of India, he may rely upon being very warmly welcomed.

THE Khojas have lost another leading member of their community within a few days after the death of Mr. Jairajbhoy Peerbhoy. Mr. Joomabhoy Lalljee, whose stalwart frame and immense size were conspicuous in all Native assemblies, has died of dropsy, at his residence at Malabar Hill, at the age of forty six years. He was a member of the firm of Messrs. Hajeebhoy Lalljee and Company, well known Khoja merchants, who are the owners of half-a-dozen steamers plying between Bombay and the Malabar Coast and Cutch Mandavie. The firm carries on a large trade with Arabia and Zanzibar, and holds contracts with Government for the supply of goods and stores required at Aden. Mr. Joomabhoy was a very popular member of his community, and some years ago built a hospital at Moondra, near Cutch Maudavie, at a cost of upwards of half a lakh of rupees. He had also built a dhurmsalla at his native place Gogo, and another a Cutch Mandavie. He was a Justice of the Peace and a member of the Municipal Corporation, and took an active interest all public movements.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

THE report on the experiments lately carried out in the Punjab Forest Department, with a view to the manufacture of turpentine from indigenous conifers, has not yet been printed. However, it is stated that the experiments have not been conducted in the most scientific manner; and some specimens of the turpentine extracted were not approved by experts at Arcot, Madras, to whom they were sent for examination. It is proposed, therefore, to stop experiments in the Punjab, and start them in the central circle, North-West Provinces, under direct management of the Forest School, and to send men from the Punjab thither to learn the process.

THE official Judicial Commissionership of Oudh, remarks an up-country paper, is apparently not a coveted post. It has been declined by the two Senior Commissioners in Oudh and, if report speaks correctly, by the Legal Remembrancer of these Provinces, and it is still unknown who will succeed to the acting appointment should Mr. Young decide on taking the short leave for which he is gazetted. "The quantity and responsibility of the work, and the depressing sense of constantly increasing arrears, amply account for the unpopularity of the post, and, indeed, unless the judicial amalgamation with the North-West comes more quickly than there is sign of its doing at present an additional Judicial Commissioner will again be wanted to bring the Court anything like level with its business."

THE railway authorities hope to run trains over the new bridge at Benares by the middle of September. The opening ceremony is fixed for the 9th of November, the birthday anniversary of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The bridge will be named "The Dufferin," and the inaugural ceremony will be performed by the Viceroy, who will be assisted by our present and future Lieutenant-Governors, Sir Alfred Lyall and Sir Auckland Colvin. His Highness the Maharaja of Benares undertakes the entertainment of the many guests, amongst whom will be the director of the Railway Company, who will come out to India specially for the occasion.

BURMA.

As Regiments and Police patrols in Upper Burma are, to a large extent, quartered in places at which no Post Office exists, the delivery of unpaid or insufficiently paid articles at such places is impossible. But paid letters, &c., are forwarded by convoys or escorts as opportunity offers. To prevent disappointment the public are, therefore, the Postal Authorities state, strongly recommended fully to prepay the postage on articles intended for delivery in Upper Burma.

A MARINE Police Force is to be established in Mandalay, and the following notice appears in Brigade Orders:—Steady and intelligent Europeans being required for temporary employment in the Marine Police, Officers Commanding British Corps in the Command will be good enough to forward to the Brigade Office the names of any Non-Commissioned Officers who may volunteer and are recommended for this duty. The men selected will probably be required to take command of police river patrol steam-launches; a colloquial knowledge of Hindustani is necessary; and the names of none but the most thoroughly reliable and intelligent Non-Commissioned Officers are to be submitted. Regimental pay of Non-Commissioned Officers will be made up to Rs. 100 per mensem, with Rs. 20 extra if not provided with free quarters. Free rations will not be granted.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

On the motion to go into the East India Revenue accounts in the House of Commons last night, Sir J. Gorst said:—He wished first to observe that the statement as it appeared at first sight was not a very prosperous one. Of the three years that were under their consideration, 1885–6 showed a large deficiency, whilst 1886–7 and 1887–8 showed a very small surplus; but he was very happy to say that the condition of the finances of India was not quite so bad as the appearance of these figures would lead anybody at first sight to suppose. Though the deficiency of 1885–6 was put down as 2,000,000 tens of rupees, that was not the actual deficiency—that was to say, India was not poorer by that sum. Not only Rx.683,498 had been spent in the reduction of debt, but Rx.1,089,000 had been invested in the construction of railways, and Rx.186,807 for the construction of productive irrigation, so that out of the expenditure of the year a total of Rx.1,959,305 had been applied either to the reduction of debt or to investments for increasing the assets of the Government of India, and the true deficit was the sum of £842,421. He was happy to say that since the circulation of his memorandum regarding the accounts of 1886–7, there had been an increase of revenue of £1,100,000, of which the land revenue gave £476,000, the salt revenue £117,000, the Excise £109,000, the railway £166,000, and other heads £232,000. Of this improved revenue £420,000 belonged to the provincial governments, leaving an improved revenue for Imperial purposes of £680,000. Then on the expenditure side the army expenditure had been £400,000 more than was anticipated, and the other heads had increased to the extent of £504,000, of which £202,000 was due from the provincial governments, leaving a net increase on other heads of £302,000. Altogether the expenditure had been worse than was anticipated by £98,000. Therefore, on the whole, taking into account the improved revenue and the increased expenditure, there had been a net improvement of Rx.582,000, which would turn the surplus of Rx.60,110, shown in his circulated statement into a surplus of Rx.642,110. As regarded the year 1887-8, in which the surplus shown in his statement was Rx.16,700, he was sorry to say that the prospects since the statement was published had become somewhat more gloomy, for the prospective land revenue was Rx.150,000 worse than the estimate. That, however, was not altogether a loss, because the improvement in the land revenue of Rx.476,000 in the preceding year meant that part of the revenue collected had gone into the account of the year 1886-7 which otherwise if it had not been collected would have gone into the account of 1887-8. The anticipation in connection with the opium revenue was Rx.200,000 worse than when the Budget estimate was framed. Salt had improved Rx.300,000—(hear hear). But he was sorry to say that Upper Burma, which was so serious a draw on the finances of India, and which in the Budget estimates showed a deficit of Rx.1,700,000, had become somewhat worse. Army expenditure in Upper Burma was worse by Rx.300,000, and in the rest of India it was worse by Rx.160,000. Besides that there was a prospective charge of housing troops in Burma of Rx.100,000, so that on the net result the prospects for 1887-8 were worse by Rx.610,000 than they were when the Budget estimate was framed in India. Therefore, instead of there now being a prospect of a small surplus of Rx.16,700 there was an estimated deficit of Rx.593,300. But, as hon. members were aware, it was the practice of the Indian Government to make very cautious estimates of revenue, and it was not too much to anticipate that the increase of revenue would more than make up for the present estimated deficit. There was another matter which would introduce a very heavy additional charge upon the expenditure of 1887 8, but so far from being a real loss to the revenue of India it was in reality a gain and a matter of congratulation. He referred to the conversion of Four per cent. stock into Three-and-a-Half per Cent. stock effected some months ago. Out of a total of holders of £53,261,820 Four per Cent. stock holders to the amount of about £47,750,000 had accepted the terms of conversion. The effect of this conversion would be a saving to the revenues of India of about £240,000 sterling per annum, but its immediate result would be to throw an extra charge of Rx.10,97,000 upon the revenue for 1887-8. It might be interesting to the committee to state the particulars of a table which had been prepared at the India Office, showing the credit of the different Governments of the world as estimated by the value of their securities in the London Money Market. He found that Great Britain stood at the head—(hear, hear)—selling its Consols at a price which yielded to the investor £2 19s. per cent. Next came the United States, £3 0s. 9d.; and India came third, £3 9s. per cent.—(hear, hear). Other Governments appeared in the following order:—Canada, £3 9s. 6d.; New South Wales, £3

13s. 6d.; Victoria, £3 13s. 9d.; France, £3 14s. 9d.; Cape of Good Hope, £3 19s.; New Zealand, £4 2s.; Austria, £4 10s. 6d.; Italy, £4 10s. 9d., and Russia, £5 3s. 9d. The net revenue of India was steadily increasing, and the increase was more than was accounted for by the income-tax and revenue derived from Upper Burma. It was also satisfactory to notice that the land revenue was increasing—not largely, it was true, but steadily. It was an encouraging fact that when at home and in other agricultural countries rents were falling and depression prevailed the land revenue of India showed not only no reduction, but a slight increase—(hear, hear). Coming to the net expenditure, it had also increased, but there was no great increase from normal causes. No doubt there had been an increase under the head of army charges, but that was due to the charge made two years ago at the time of the Penjdeh incident. That charge was about Rx.1,500,000, and what had caused an apparent increase of expenditure had been the deficit of Upper Burma and the great increase of expenditure upon exchange. If it had not been for those abnormal causes, which were beyond the control of the Government of India, there would have been a reduction of no less than Rx.473,100. He was bound to confess that financially Upper Burma had so far been a disappointment. The land revenue had yielded only one-half of what was expected, and the charges for police, for the army and marines were enormously in excess of anything that was anticipated. The estimate was that there would be a deficit in connection with the charge on Burma of £1,770,500, and since his statement was circulated telegrams had been received from India showing that there would be an additional Rx.300,000 required for the army, and Rx.100,000 for the raising of troops. It was desirable to point out that whereas there was a great reduction with regard to the army and Marine charges for 1887–8, that reduction would not give much relief to the financial position of Upper Burma, because it was met by an increase of police. When the annexation of Upper Burma was made it was not expected that so heavy a charge would be thrown upon the revenues of India by the policy then pursued, and it was only right to point out that at present at least a heavy charge had been incurred in the past year, and that it was likely to be felt in the present year, although he had every hope that in the not very remote future Burma, instead of being a burden, might at least pay its way, and even become a source of profit to the revenues of India. With respect to the army there had been an increase of about 22,000 men, 10,700 being British, and 11,900 Native troops. This permanent increase in the army had caused an additional expenditure in 1885–6 of Rx.347,000, and in 1886–7 a further expenditure of Rx.430,000, and in the year 1887–8 it was estimated to cost a further sum of Rx.370,000. There would be a total increase of expenditure of Rx.1,200,000. With regard to the home charges, which were payable in sterling, there was an apparent though not a real increase—the increase was in the exchange. The State defence works, consisting of frontier forts and harbour defences, which were most essential to the safety of India, and which the Government were bound to push forward with the utmost possible expedition, were of course not reproductive works. It was contrary to the principle upon which Indian finance was conducted to charge them except against revenue. No one desired that extra taxation should be put upon the people of India for the purpose of providing for a charge of this kind, and the Secretary of State had no intention of suggesting to the Government of India that any such extra taxation should be imposed. In regard to railways, there were certain conclusions he desired the Committee to draw from the figures. Indian railways paid a large and increasing profit upon capital invested, the percentage of net receipts on capital expenditure having in the three years under review been 5·27, 5·84, and 5·97. The Government of India was not making a profit, but was incurring a large and increasing annual charge, which for the three years was Rx.731,000, Rx.485,000, and Rx1,589,000. That charge upon the revenues of India had entirely been brought about by the fall in exchange. There had been spent on lines still under construction about Rx.14,000,000, upon which the Government had to pay about Rx.560,000 in the form of interest. The drain on the revenues of India would terminate to this extent immediately these new lines were opened. In conclusion, he desired to draw the attention of the Committee to the question of the taxation in India. A table in his printed memorandum showed that the amount of taxation which the Indian people had to pay was not two shillings per head, while the people of this country had to pay £2 18s. per head. It must be admitted, therefore, that the taxation imposed on the people of India was a very light one at the present moment. He did not deny that even light taxation might, under certain circumstances, be felt to be burdensome; but he ventured to say that the Government of India was, on the whole, one of the most beneficent Governments which the world has ever witnessed—that the Government of India was, on the whole, administered in a more true sense for the benefit of the governed than any other Government in the world—that it was, on the whole, one of the most equitable Governments of which history gave us any account, and that so far from the people of India having any ground of complaint because they were under the rule of Great Britain instead of being under the rule of the tyrants who held sway over them before we went to that country, the Natives of India had very good reason to be most grateful to this country for the establishment and continuance of that beneficent Government—(cheers).

THE STORY OF THE GHILZAI REVOLT.

The difficulty of obtaining reliable news from Afghanistan where party feeling runs high and all reports are more or less coloured with tribal and local bias, is so great that it seems to be almost hopeless to attempt a connected story of the Ghilzai revolt. The Lahore paper, however, is equal to the occasion, and it gives the following history—a "trustworthy history" it calls it—of the Ghilzai rebellion up to the present time :—

According to the latest news from Kandahar, the Andari mutineers and the tribesmen who had gathered round them in Mizan were retreating to the impenetrable fastnesses of the independent Hazara country to the north, after destroying all the supplies which they were unable to carry away. Their object is obvious. Ghulam Haidar, the Amir's General, will risk defeat if he follows them into the mountains; and if he does not, they can come out at some of the passes further north, and cross the high road into the Taraki country. No attempt has yet been made by either side since the beginning of the rebellion to bring on a decisive action. Ghulam Haidar has not dared to attack the Ghilzais in their chosen positions, and they naturally hesitate to go down and meet his regular infantry, cavalry, and artillery in the open. Both sides, therefore, are adopting Fabian tactics. The Amir's General is trying to starve out the rebels. They are harassing his troops with incessant marching and countermarching, and with guerilla warfare.

Ataghar, Tirwa, and Nawa-i-Taraki, the original strongholds of the rebels, form a triangle with sides some fifty miles long. The revolt began in Ataghar three months ago. An attempt to capture it by such troops as were available in Kandahar failed completely. The Ghilzais attacked them on the march and took ten guns; the Amir's troops barely escaping a disastrous rout. They precipitately abandoned the Ghilzai country and took up a position in the Maral district, whence a retreat was open through friendly tribes to Kandahar. Strong reinforcements from Kabul arriving under General Ghulam Haidar, Orakzai, who assumed the command from his father, Sikandar Khan, the Amir's army took up a position nearer Ataghar, but did not attempt to assault it. Provisions getting short, and promised succour from the Povindahs not arriving, the rebel leaders abandoned Ataghar and retreated east to Tirwa outside the Amir's jurisdiction, where many of their women and children had collected. They were followed by most of the fighting men, only a few tribesmen returning to their villages, which had been laid waste by the Amir's soldiery. General Ghulam Haidar marched on Tirwa, but hearing of a rising near Charjui on the Kabul-Kandahar road, and the capture of a Barakzai Sirdar of high rank with his family by the rebels, he moved hurriedly north-west to clear the road and re-open his communications with Kabul. No sooner had he effected this in conjunction with a small force brought from Ghazni by the Governor of that place, than a formidable gathering was reported in the Taraki country to the east, where the Ghilzais were being joined by the Nasiris and other tribes. He accordingly marched east again, and occupied the Taraki capital or the village that goes by that name. On the road he had a smart brush with a body of five hundred rebels detached to watch him, whom he drove off, with some loss on both sides. Three days later he sent out a picked force, to attack an outlying Nasiri village, whose people were probably preparing to join the rebels. Although the Amir's troops outnumbered them ten to one, and had breechloaders and artillery, the villagers fought desperately, and did not give way till they had lost seventy killed, including eight women. This was about the middle of June, and there has been no action of importance since. Ghulam Haidar remained in the Taraki country for three weeks longer, attempting, it is believed, to get the rebels, who took up a strong position in the mountains a few miles off, to come to terms. The tidings of the successful march of the Andari mutineers right across the Amir's dominions, and their arrival in the vicinity of Kelat-i-Ghilzai, brought his negotiations to an abrupt close, and he hurried off to that fortress, in the vicinity of which he was at the date of the latest news, having been joined by the troops from Herat, which recently arrived from Kandahar.

Thus, after three months' campaigning, the Amir's General has, for the present, abandoned entirely the southern Ghilzai country east of the Kandahar-Kabul road. Much of it has been laid waste, but, in return, the rebels have ravaged the Durani country along their borders. In spite of this, the attempts made by the Amir to rouse the ancestral hatred of the Duranis for the Ghilzais have, to a great extent, failed. The Durani tribal horse which formed the pride and strength of Afghanistan up to 1839, and even later, only mustered a few old men, who have returned to their homes; while force and persuasion combined have only availed to procure some two thousand unwilling recruits among the Barakzais and other Durani clans for service in the regular infantry. It is clear that only the fidelity of his northern troops—Kohistanis, Logeris, Wardaks, and the like—stands alone between the Amir and the loss of his throne. As long as as they remain true to their salt, the rebellion may collapse as suddenly as it began. But it must be remembered that these gentry are notoriously mutinous and faithless even in Afghanistan. The fidelity of his Ghilzai officers and soldiers was for long the Amir's mainstay. It enabled him to get the better of Ayub Khan in 1881, and has leavened his army ever since. His Kabulis may stick to him, and prevent the Ghilzais—of whom there are still many thousands in his army—from open outbreak. But the consciousness of their power and the fatigue of long-continued campaigning against the kith and kin of their own comrades may be too much for them, in which case Lord Dufferin will have to find a new Amir.

UPPER BURMAH.

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian has been shown a private letter from an official who has lately been to Bhamo respecting the state of the town and the neighbourhood. The writer says that there, as almost everywhere else now in Upper Burmah, the people recognise the stability of British rule. The administration has become to them a reality. The work has become much easier on account of this growing feeling of confidence. The taxes are paid with tolerable regularity and without difficulty, and the withdrawal of the rapacious officials has led to an increase of trade and to a general air of activity and business which would surprise those who saw the country a year ago. At Bhamo there was for a time great distrust on the part of the Chinese merchants, owing to one or two unfortunate incidents during the early days of the occupation; but this has now been completely removed, largely owing to the efforts and influence of the gentleman of the consular service in China who was sent there, and whose knowledge of Chinese language and manners rapidly smoothed away the suspicions of the Chinese. The writer concludes that now we have a fair field in Upper Burmah for administration; the pretenders have disappeared, the dacoits remaining can be put down by the police, aided by the people themselves, who have taken heart; and all that is wanted to make Upper Burmah as wealthy as the lower province—which is able to pay to the Indian revenue a surplus of about a million a year—are good roads and a few railways.

BELGIAN INFLUENCE IN THE FAR EAST.

Baron Sadoine, the former Director-General of the great iron firm of Cockerill, has returned from the Far East, and has communicated to a Belgian newspaper his views of the difficulties of business there. He complains that he only met two Belgians in China, one of whom was employed in an English house at Shanghai, while the other was attached to a Dutch firm. All the Belgian Consuls are German or English, and it is therefore impossible, he says, for Belgium to struggle against the American, English, and German syndicates, who are well supported by countrymen of their own long settled in China. Besides these heads of commercial firms, who speak all languages, even to Chinese, there are a number of engineers on leave from Europe, who direct military schools, fortifications, arsenals, &c. The German, English, American, and French traders, moreover, are backed by their naval authorities and their mercantile shipping, and against this strong organisation it is almost hopeless for a country like Belgium to contend. Baron Sadoine, nevertheless, put in a tender for two transport steamers on behalf of the Cockerill Company, but his price of £34,000 was underbidden by an English firm at £29,000 per steamer. Another tender, for 2,500 tons of rails, was lost to Belgium in consequence of an article in an English journal at Tientsin which asserted that Belgian rails were inferior, if cheaper; but after tenders were opened it appeared that the Belgian company's offer was 10 per cent. above an English tender, although the price at Antwerp of the same article was below that for rails in Barrow. The Baron asserts that the English imitate Krupp, who last year delivered 1,500 tons of rails at a loss of £1 per ton in order to get a footing in China. M. Sadoine thinks that nothing can be done without powerful organisation, political and mercantile.

It is stated that the escape of Ayoub Khan is regarded without anxiety in official quarters. Contrary to the general order of things, the news reached the Government several days before it appeared in the newspapers, but it was accompanied by information with regard to the condition of affairs in Afghanistan which deprived it of any serious significance. Had the reports which were current of the Ameer's dangerous illness been well founded matters would have been different, for the death of the present ruler of Afghanistan would very probably be followed by a struggle for the throne. The construction placed in official circles on what has occurred is that these reports of the Ameer's illness reached Ayoub and his Russian friends, and that he was encouraged by the Russians to escape in order that they might have a candidate to run for the throne in case of a vacancy. Ayoub is supposed at the present time to be at some point on the shores of the Caspian. As it has turned out, however, that the Ameer is in excellent health and making headway against the Ghilzais, Ayoub's presence in Russian territory now will be anything but welcome, and it is not improbable that he may be seized and sent back to captivity. Meanwhile the reports from Afghanistan are more reassuring than they have been for some time past.

A CONTRAST.

The Marwar Gazette, a little Rajputana paper, which cannot be suspected of any overwhelming love towards Englishmen as such, has a rather curious and distinctly uncomplimentary article on a certain phase of Native ideas:—

Do the people of India—by the people of India we don't mean that conceited clique who see but one step dividing the successful student from the successful and eminent legislator and statesman—present the same facts in connection with their history to enable any thoughtful man to say that they, as a whole, are as advanced in political knowledge as the British are? Let us see. When red rebellion raised its crest in '57 in Bengal, and threatened to overshadow the whole land, can any one point out to a single movement or attempt made by the Natives in the Bombay or Madras Presidencies to organise independent means either to succour the Government of Bengal or even to take measures to secure themselves from a rebel invasion? And yet the wealth of the Bombay and Madras Maharajahs Rajahs, Zemindars, and petty chiefs who were loyal to the British was sufficient to have mobilised a force that could have at least been employed right across the peninsular to resist any attempts of extending the outbreak beyond the limits of Bengal. Did such an idea cross the minds of even our Native Rulers, to say nothing of our indigenous artizans, merchants and ryots? All that everyone did, not actually embroiled in the dangers of those troublous times, was to look helplessly to Government to take all the measures that might have been necessary, while they never dreamt of defending themselves. We do not say this as a reproach, far from it; we say it to show how widely dissimilar their ideas are to Englishmen in England. Again, when Muscovite ambition was baulked just when it seemed its intrigues and machinations for half a century were about to be crowned with success; when the British ironclad fleet steamed up the Dardanelles, and cast its anchors before Constantinople, and bade the Russian advance no further towards the imperial city of the Bosphorus, a deep murmur ran through the world that Russia would retaliate for the humiliation and disappointment inflicted on her up-to-then victorious arms in Turkey by invading India. Then there was hurrying to and fro through the length and breadth of the land; our coasts, till then innocent of defences, were being here and there, but ridiculously inefficiently, dotted, with a few bastions and heavy 12-ton guns, in the use of which the local troops scarcely knew anything. The Russian fleet, nearly twice as powerful as the East Indian Squadron, was sent out to sea with sealed orders, and there was no knowing how soon it might have appeared on our coasts. What did India do? Absolutely nothing. And why? Because it perhaps did not know of its danger, and if it did, looked upon the Government as its bounden protector. However, not even B. A. India held meetings to vote its private wealth to secure war cruisers to protect open towns, or coast trade, nor did this section of our fellow-countrymen volunteer to become the "fiery young patriots" they have since developed into. Even now, when a very general impression prevails that Russia's designs are ultimately threatening to India, what is indigenous India, with its wealth of money, men, and arms doing to render a foreign invasion futile? Absolutely nothing, and yet these—the patriots, not only want to introduce a form of Government all of their own imagining, but these are demanding, of vested right, to be allowed to officer the Army.

We have amongst us Native gentlemen of deep and true ability who, individually, are fit to and do advise the Government, and are genuinely respected. But these, almost to a man, deplore the ridicule their younger countrymen are bringing upon Native claims for political advancement and liberty. And because they will have neither part or lot with the wild young spirit engendered among them from a study of text books, they are denounced as fogies, and men of an older time and generation, who have lost touch with everything that is modern and rightly revolutionary. Fortunately the Government has yet preserved its sense amid the din of words raised at recent meetings, conferences and what-not, and look upon the pranks of these political youngsters with the indulgent eyes of a parent not insensible of the time when it was itself sowing its wild oats.

The arrangement between the Government of India and the Admiralty, under which a number of ancient gunboats are maintained in Indian waters on payment of a contribution to Imperial naval funds of £70,000 a-year, has not been at all satisfactory. India has justly complained that the East Indian Station, extending from Singapore to Zanibar, has been the refuge for such ancient craft as were too inefficient for even the China Fleet, and now that Australasia has been supplied, mainly through Admiral Tryon's energy and ability, with a complete scheme of naval defences, some attention has been paid to her wants. The period of service of the present Commander-in-Chief (Admiral Richards) has nearly expired; and it is not considered just to saddle him with the beginning of arrangements which he will not be able to complete. Admiral Fremantle will probably be appointed, and to him will be committed the task of organising the Indian naval defences, together with the dockyard and store depôts now existing.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

COLONEL R. M. LLOYD, S.C, 1st Bombay Infantry, has been granted leave out of India.

CAPTAIN RENNY, 7th Bengal Cavalry, has been ordered home, to rejoin the Staff College on return from field service in Burma.

LIEUTENANTS POINGDESTRE, 40th Bengal Infantry, and Loch, 1-3rd Gurkhas, have been appointed to the Intelligence Branch, Quartermaster-General's Department.

COLONEL W. ANDERSON, Madras Staff Corps, commands the 3rd Brigade Upper Burma Field Force, for the period between the departure of General Lockhart and arrival of Colonel Collett, C.B.

A RECRUIT of the Agra Battalion, Burma Military Police, stabbed two men of the same battalion, who attempted to arrest him while he was in the act of deserting from the lines a week ago, and got away. He was subsequently captured. The men were severely wounded.

THE following Royal Engineer officers have been posted as follows:—Captain Barnet and Lieut. Remington to the Meerut Command, Military Works, and Lieut. Hunter to the Headquarters of the I.G. Military Works. Lieut. G. Williams, R.E., is transferred from the Rawal Pindi Command to the Headquarters I.G. Military Works.

CONSEQUENT on the late increase of British cavalry and artillery in India it is contemplated to have more horses in what may be called the reserve, while the batteries on the roster for service in the two Army Corps will receive an additional number of horses, so that their teams may always be equal to any work that may suddenly be required of them.

COLONEL TOKER, on return from leave, takes up his appointment very shortly as Junior Deputy Secretary in the Military Department. Captain G. Barrow, who has been officiating in the Department as Assistant Secretary, then reverts to the Intelligence Branch, displacing Captain Grierson, who goes to Peshawur as Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General.

A SOLDIER of the 1st Battalion Royal Canadians, named Andrew Clarke, was found a few days ago floating in the moat at Calcutta. From the evidence adduced at the coroner's inquest, it would appear to be a common occurrence for bad characters to break out of Fort William at night, have their riot in town, return the same way into the Fort before reveille. During the rains the moat has plenty of water, and what is not generally known to the soldiers is, that there is a ditch within a ditch, the inner or centre one being three feet deeper than the visible one. The battalion has not the best of names for sobriety, but what shall we say of its discipline when it is known that the deceased had been absent three days, and his absence had not been reported.

GOVERNMENT has made over to the Bombay Volunteer Artillery for drill purposes four 25-pounder rifled guns; and the members of the Battery, whose detachments recently paraded, were agreeably surprised to find how handy and workable the gun proved to be, as compared with the 40-pounder hitherto used. Colonel Walker has given permission for gun drills to be held by the Volunteers in the Arsenal compound; and the various detachments will parade there until further orders; entrance by the gate in rear of the Brigade offices, Town Hall.

Several despatches which the Secretary of State for War has received from the Secretary of State for India relative to the operations which have taken place in Burmah since the capture of Mandalay have been published in the Gazette. The Adjutant-General in India, in a letter accompanying the despatches, refers in high terms to the distinguished manner in which the army has acquitted itself during a series of arduous and protracted operations. Deep regret is expressed at the death of Sir Herbert Macpherson, and sincere and grateful thanks are tendered to General Sir Frederick Roberts, Lieutenant-General Sir C. Arbuthnot, Major-General Sir George White, and other officers for their gallant services. The Governor-General in Council has also the satisfaction to notify that Her Majesty's Government have sanctioned the distribution of a gratuity to all the troops.

A GENEROUS PRINCE.—The Darjeeling paper says:—"We are glad to announce that the Maharaja of Cooch Behar has, with that consideration for the welfare of his countrymen and his generous liberality which have so decidedly marked His Highness's character since he came of age and took up the government at his country, made a free gift of his estate of Darjeeling, known as "Bryngwyn," consisting of a spacious house and 7½ acres of land, valued at Rs. 50,000, to the native community of Bengal, for the purpose of the Native Hostel which it is proposed to establish here. This princely gift, together with about a lakh of rupees contributed by different Native gentlemen, ensures the successful establishment of a sanitarium for Natives beyond all doubt, and the Committee of Management should now get to work to mature and complete their arrangements for opening the institution early next season. Thanks are due to Major Evans Gordon, the manager of the Cooch Behar State, for taking up the proposal to transfer Bryngwyn so warmly as he did, and for obtaining so promptly from England the Maharaja's consent to transfer."

THE DEFENCE OF OUR PORTS AND COALING STATIONS.

Lord Carnarvon again writes to The Times on this subject. He stated at the commencement of the session that our commercial ports were almost, if not quite, defenceless; the dangerous and discreditable state, he says, remains unaltered. The Tyne, with the great manufactory at Elswick, the Clyde, with its great ship-building and refitting yard, are without protection, while the Mersey, with the wealth of Liverpool, has only the so-called defence of some old thirty-eight ton guns. There is, indeed, so far as Lord Carnarvon is aware, in no commercial port a single heavy gun mounted of modern pattern. Then as to the imperial coaling-station, his lordship writes:—

In many of these, such as Hong Kong, Singapore, Mauritius, a division of expense as regards the defences has been agreed to. The local community undertook to erect the works or to provide the money for them, while the Imperial Government engaged to supply the armaments. These communities have as a rule performed their part of the contract; we have in every case left our share unperformed, either wholly or in part. Each of the three important stations which I have mentioned—each essential to the protection of our vast commerce and to the security of our fleets—each in their different degrees essential to our supremacy in the eastern seas, remains unfortified because we have not yet sent out the armament which we engaged to provide. For this discreditable and dangerous condition I have sometimes heard the excuse set up that the manufacture of modern armaments is so slow that two years are needed for the construction of a gun with its proper mountings. A melancholy apology! If the manufacture is so slow, the guns should have been ordered as soon as it was known that Singapore or Hong Kong or Mauritius was prepared to do the works or to give the money; instead of which, in order to save financial appearances, and to gain a false credit for economy on the Estimates, we have made or allowed delays in giving the necessary orders to the manufacturers. More than this—even the auxiliary armaments, those machines and quick-firing guns which are absolutely necessary in modern war, which even without the heavier guns might for purposes of defence have an almost incalculable value, and which can be procured and sent out at once, are, probably for the same reason, subjected to the same fatal delay. They have not been sent out; I might perhaps ask if they are even ordered? The fault of all this is with us. Our endless Committees that too often decide nothing, our undue centralisation here, our want of proper individual responsibility there, the absence of that combination of administrative knowledge and authority which is very graphically described by Sir J. Stephen's recent Commission, are productive of delays, errors, waste, and danger here, as in many other parts of our cumbrous system.

In contrast to this Lord Carnarvon points out what is being done by our Australian Colonies, who have roughly speaking spent £5,000,000 upon defence.

THE sub-editor of the Civil and Military Gazette was offered a bribe of Rs. 400 by a man named Sant Singh, to let him see and copy from the original the University examination papers of the F.A. Examination for his son and another relative. The wife of the sub-editor was first interviewed by Sant Singh, who asked her to intercede with her husband in his behalf and get him copies of the examination papers, for which he would allow her Rs. 100 in addition to the amount he would give her husband She promised to do her best, and told Sant Singh to call in the evening. He did so, and Mr. Jennings, after a great deal of trouble, got Sant Singh to promise Rs. 1,000 for twelve copies. On the man leaving he brought the same to the notice of the manager, who accompanied him to the Registrar of the University, Mr. Bell, who supplied Mr. Jennings with bogus papers which were sold to a young man named Daulat Ram, grandson of the Dewan of Kapurthala, who accompanied Sant Singh and his son, and who paid Rs. 400. The two students were recognised sitting among the other students on the day of the F.A. Examination by the sub-editor, Mr. Jennings, and other witnesses, and no doubt they will be severely punished.

Professor Vambéry writes to an Austrian newspaper as follows: I must not be forgotten that, while Chodscha Saleh was being bargained over, Russia quietly took possession of the town of Kerki, on the left bank of the Oxus and on the high road to Herat. This was done on the pretext that Kerki was necessary for the defence of the Merv-Samarkand Railway. But that is not all. The Russians have sent explorers, under strong escort, much further on towards the upper course of the Oxus, and before long we shall hear of Russian annexations in the districts where that river takes its source. The English have in reality sacrificed almost the whole of Afghanistan to Russia. At any rate they have taken the important resolve to confine within the narrowest limits the advanced works for the defence of India; in fact, to defend their Indian possessions on the frontier of India. It is inconceivable how the whole frontier delimitation can be represented as a matter in which Russia has given way and England has achieved a diplomatic victory. If the Government in office seek to convey that impression to the English people, they may, perhaps, succeed, for nowhere in the world do the affairs of Central Asia excite less interest and is so little known about them as in the political circles of England; but it is to be hoped that English statesmen themselves are under no delusion. The significance attributed by some of the leading English newspapers to the recent Anglo-Russian Agreement is a clumsy and ridiculous misrepresentation. Unfortunately, that agreement involves another etape on the now chronic movement of retreat of England in Asia, which in the interest of humanity and of the spread of civilisation in the East is profoundly regrettable, but cannot concealed.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE CAMPAIGN OF SEDAN.*

On 19th July, in the year of grace 1870, a young French Secretary of Legation, by name Baron Wimpfen, entered Berlin, and handed to the German authorities the French declaration of war. On the 1st of September of the same year, Napoleon III. addressed to the Emperor of Germany a short dramatic letter, to the effect that, not meeting death at the head of his troops, he had resolved to place his sword in the hands of his Majesty. A few days later the ex-Monarch of the Tuileries was closeted in the cottage of a Belgian weaver, together with the iron Chancellor of the Teuton dynasty, pleading for favourable terms for the besieged in Sedan, but in vain—the conquerors were inexorable. "The entire army, with arms and baggage, must surrender as prisoners of war," were the only conditions acceptable to Count von Moltke, the supreme arbiter of the day. Alteration there was none, and on 3rd September the Emperor Napoleon telegraphed to the Empress these brief but expressive words: "The army is defeated and captive. I myself am a prisoner."

Not two months had elapsed since a mighty nation, flushed with all the pride of power, had hurled defiance at the hereditary enemy, which it was thought could be crushed at a blow: "à Berlin" was the cry on every lip, and yet victory fell to the much-despised foe—victory the most crushing of which the annals of the world contain a record. What happened—why such a stupendous reverse? The answer is the raison d'être of Mr. George Hooper's most able and valuable work.

It is not within our province to digest the thousand and one causes which tended to the humiliation of France and the glorification of Germany. There were currents and under-currents—currents of imbecility, currents of intrigue, currents of folly, currents of infatuation; but the chief cause of the reverses which, culminated in the disaster at Sedan, when 83,000 men laid down their arms, was unpreparedness. While the Germans were forcing steadily and rapidly forward, their resources concentrated, their movements marked by the regularity of machinery, while a mass of well-drilled and well-accoutred humanity was pushing on and on with fatal earnestness and zeal. Their Gallic foes were scraping together, here and there, such troops as could be hurried up from the cities, the villages, the districts, the provinces. Regiments were without men, men without regiments; food, raiment, tents, ammunition all ran short. "Too late" was the fatal word which destiny wrote upon the portals of the French Bureau of War. The soldiers were as brave as lions, they fought like heroes; but incapacity in high places, imbecility of purpose, and vacillation of design, threw a cloak of failure round the efforts of the rank and file. Then followed demoralisation, wranglings amongst those in command, resignations—and defeat.

The lesson is sad, but it is salient. It teaches all who care to learn the pressing need of being ready for all emergencies. England is insular, but she still may derive warning from this melancholy display of inefficiency; and if rulers in high places would look to the mote in the national eye, then Mr. Hooper's most unbiassed, impartial, and skilful attempt to see clearly the beam in the Gallic eye will have served the country in good stead, when the day of her peril draweth nigh, and the lion and the lamb no longer lie down together in peace, security, and quiet.

PRINCIPLES OF CIVIL GOVERNMENT.*

Political power has been transferred from the few to the many; the destinies of the Empire are now in the hands of the democracy. "The stage," says Mr. Kinnear, "is one of peril, not the less real because it is inevitable. But if it is to be passed with safety, still more, if it is to lead to an era of higher work and happiness of humanity, it can only be by fully understanding the essential elements of existence in communities, and by careful consideration of all that experience can teach us of the conditions under which freedom and happiness can be developed." The outlook is not encouraging. If a democracy cannot succeed unless the oi polloi of mankind are willing and able to devote themselves to the study of national problems, it is greatly to be feared that failure is foredoomed. Take the very work which Mr. Kinnear has published to meet the want which he has pointed out. It is plain, simple, concise, closely-argued, and ably planned. But are there half-a-dozen sons of toil in each village who would sit down with pipe and ale to con over the mysteries of "federation," of "national unity," of "centralization" of "socialism," of the "rights of majorities and minorities," of corruption," of "freedom," and scores of such-like intricacies?

What happens is just what might be expected to happen. The labouring classes, having neither time nor inclination to work out problems of State for themselves, fall into the hands of others to guide and counsel. If it chance that these latter are honest, sincere, and able, all is well; but if, as frequently happens, demagogues arise, voluble, glib of tongue, unscrupulous and utterly devoid of precept, then, indeed, may it be said of the voters of Great Britain: "All they, like sheep, have gone astray." Then comes the reign of ignorance and folly, and "what, think ye, will be the end thereof?" Who shall say?

If, however, we feel bound to urge that not one in a thousand of the working population will read Mr. Kinnear's work, we are equally compelled to add that they who do take the trouble to master its contents will be amply rewarded. His views on the various problems of life are not only sound, but so evenly balanced that it is difficult to decide as to the school of thought to which he belongs. This is as it should be. A leader of men should be impartial. Culling the good and dividing the bad, he should address himself "to all sorts and conditions of men." This requirement is most completely fulfilled in the "Principles of Civil Government," which, if it should not "command," can at least "deserve" success.

The Indian Magazine for September (London: Kegan Paul. Bristol: Arrowsmith) contains a pleasantly written description, by Miss Dorothea Roberts, of not the least interesting among the Jubilee gatherings, that of the "Bands of Mercy" (an offshoot of the Society for Preventing Cruelty to Animals), which took place at the Albert Hall on the 4th July last, the Queen attending in person immediately after laying the foundation stone of the Imperial Institute.

The burning widow-question crops up in a sensible paper by Mrs. Hoggan, M.D., who points out that the abolition of Suttee is "but a doubtful advantage . . . . unless the lives thus spared are made worth having." It must be remembered that in the matter of the abolition of Suttee, it was, in a manner, possible "to make people virtuous by Act of Parliament;" whereas generations may elapse ere the traditional habits and feelings of a vast population can be changed. It must suffice for us that we avail ourselves of every means—female medical aid being by no means the least important—of acquiring influence in Native families, and that we strive "with our might" to make a discreet use of it when acquired. But it is to Native action that we must, in the last resort, look. As a Native lady, Srimati Har Devi, well remarks in a paper (p. 482) on "The True Basis of Social Reform" Natives themselves must "strike at the root of the disease by endeavouring with all their tan, man, and dhan (body, mind, and wealth) to educate their daughters, and to eradicate their ignorance." Something, too, can be done in the direction urged by Pundita Ramabai Sarasvati, and alluded to at p. 492, to alleviate, here and there, the wretched lot of a high-caste Hindu widow by training selected ladies as teachers, and enabling them to lead really independent and useful lives.

The Westminster Review, now in its sixty-fourth year, makes a bid for popular support as a shilling monthly instead of an expensive Quarterly. The change is a judicious one, and will be appreciated by the readers of the Review, which, under its able editor, continues to display the same scholarship, research, and earnest thought which made it an intellectual power long ago. The September number contains several vigorous and interesting articles, amongst which may be specially noted "India and America: A Contrast," "The Peasant Nobility of Orkney and Shetland," and "The Law in Relation to Women." In the Independent Section, which continues to form a marked feature of the Review, the paper on "Free Education" will repay perusal, although opinions may differ regarding some of the conclusions arrived at by the writer. The review of Contemporary Literature and Belles Lettres is, as usual, well and carefully done.

The Art Journal for September contains a grand engraving of Collier's picture known as "The Last Voyage of Henry Hudson." In other respects the number is scarcely, perhaps, up to the average, but the latter is so high that a critic gets critical. And to get one really first-rate illustration for 1s. 6d. cannot be a bad investment of a few odd coins.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"Unrest; or, The Newer Republic," by Earl Hodgson (W. H. Allen and Co.); "The Kidnapping of Prince Alexander of Battenberg," by A. Von Huhe, translated by Captain F. Beaufort (Edward Stanford); "Episodes in a Life of Adventure," by Laurence Oliphant (Wm. Blackwood and Sons).

SIR JOSEPH RITCHIE LYON DICKSON, M.D., who was for forty years physician to Her Majesty's Legation at the Court of Teheran, died recently at Malta, in his sixty-seventh year. In 1847 he was appointed physician to the British Legation in Persia, and in 1849 he was called in to attend the Shah for typhus fever, during the absence of his Majesty's body physician, and in recognition of his medical services on that occasion the Shah conferred on him the Star of Commander of the Persian Order of the Lion and Sun. On the occasion of the Shah's visit to Europe in 1873 the British Government, at his Majesty's request, attached the English doctor to his staff, and in compliment to the Shah he was knighted by the Queen on June 30, 1873. The post of physician to Her Majesty's Legation at Teheran, vacant by Sir Joseph Dickson's death, is worth £600 per annum, and is in the gift of Lord Salisbury.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

WE shall hardly be accused of having much sympathy with the general views and opinions of Mr. Bradlaugh but we certainly think that he did good service last night in the House of Commons by protesting against the method which obtains there of bringing forward the Indian Budget. He had given notice to move that "the House regretted that the only occasion afforded for submitting to its consideration any statement of the wishes or grievances of the Natives of India should be postponed to so late a period of the session as to prevent fair consideration of such wishes and grievances. It was, in fact, disgraceful to the Government of this country that this question should be put down as the eighth order of the day in an empty House at the very last moments of the session." This protest was to the point, and was met with cries of "hear, hear!" from the limited audience which listened to it; but Sir J. Gorst did not hold out much hope that such a state of things would be soon altered. He declared that the regret as to the late period of the session at which Indian affairs were brought before the House was fully shared in by the Government itself. "Everyone would be glad if it were possible to bring the affairs of India under the consideration of the House at a time when more interest would be taken in the matter, but no Government of modern times had ever succeeded in doing this, such were the exigencies of Parliamentary life." We cannot but think this excuse a sorry one. Honourable members when it suits their convenience out-of-doors, on hustings, and on public platforms, and also in the Press, do not hesitate to profess a deep interest in that great Indian Empire which they boast of as being the brightest jewel in the crown of England, &c., &c. But when the Indian Budget comes before the House—a Budget dealing with millions of money and concerning the welfare of millions, and the very stability of our Power in the East—there is a beggarly account of empty benches, and the friends of India are conspicuous by their absence. But worse than this. Mr. Bradlaugh told the House, and he was not contradicted, that it was not even certain that the Secretary of State for India exercised any control whatever over Indian affairs, because he apparently did not possess sufficient information to enable him to answer accurately questions addressed to him in that House on Indian subjects! If this be true, the fact would be "disgraceful to the Government of this country;" but we are charitable enough to believe that the statement was somewhat exaggerated. The Secretary of State for India has no sinecure office, and it is to the credit of those who have held that post since it was created that they have endeavoured to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the work they are supposed to do, and have always, no matter to what party of politics they belonged, displayed an intelligent and warm sympathy with the peoples of India. Mr. Bradlaugh's regret at the postponement of the Budget statement to so late a period of the session was chiefly founded on the supposition that a discussion was thereby prevented on the subject of Indian grievances. The Natives of India, he said, felt that they had serious and real grievances which ought to be considered by that House. The "Natives of India" is rather a wide expression, but Sir J. Gorst also adopted it, telling the honourable member that he quite agreed that all alleged grievances on the part of the Natives of India should be able to find expression in that House, but many of them he believed, would be found to be unsubstantial. The grievance hinted at by Mr. Bradlaugh was the want of representative institutions in India. "The Indians," said he, "claimed that if they had representative Government they could remove some of the miseries and hardships under which they now suffered." Mr. Bradlaugh evidently does not know much about India, but in this he is not singular amongst his Parliamentary colleagues. He had, however, picked up some crumbs of information regarding the admission of Natives to the Civil Service, the sale of lands in Burma, and the Ruby Mines, and these crumbs he scattered about the House. In the desultory debate which followed little or no attention was given to the Budget itself, dealing as it did with enormous items of revenue and expenditure, and affecting questions of taxation of the highest importance. No honourable member seemed to think that these questions were of the slightest consequence compared with the question as to whether Messrs. Streeter had or had not got a lease of the Ruby Mines. Even Sir Richard Temple could only find words or time to say that he believed that the finances of India were, on the whole, satisfactory, and the taxation light, and that if we managed India well we should find that we had secured the largest market in the world. Sir George Campbell thought that extravagant expenditure should be reduced, and Mr. Cossman expressed his belief that the people of India could bear very little more taxation. Sir J. Gorst, in closing the debate, said that he thought the Government might very well be satisfied with the discussion which had taken place. If so we can only say that the Government is very easily satisfied indeed. One admission, however, he made—that it was possible to make the Indian Financial Statement in June, and he added that he had no doubt that the Secretary of State for India would do his best to have the Indian Budget brought forward in future at an earlier period of the session.

This is so far well; but if honourable members will not interest themselves in the matter the change of date will do little good. It will affect Indian interests little whether they are brought before an empty House in September or an empty House in June. The remedy lies only with honourable members themselves.

161 Indian coolies, including children and infants, returned from Jamaica to India at the end of last year. Before sailing from Jamaica 145 of them bought treasury bills on India of the aggregate value of £2,875 6s. 8d, or an average value of £63 17s. 11d. for each depositor. The largest deposit lodged by one family was £432 13s., and there were six lodgments of over £100 each. A large quantity of valuable jewellery was also worn by the women and children. The total number of coolies in Jamaica on the 31st of last December was 13,850, less than half of whom were Chinese.

A NEW electrical invention, called The Writing Telegraph, is likely to supersede the telephone in many ways where it is difficult to use the latter instrument with success. It transmits promptly and silently a message in the actual handwriting of the subscriber, thus giving a record which cannot be disputed, for there is the original writing at one end and a facsimile of it at the other end of the wire, and neither can be altered without detection. The operator writes with a pen upon a strip of paper which moves steadily beneath it, the movement of the pen in writing sending varied currents into the lines which actuate the receiving instrument and causing the pen thereof to reproduce each letter as fast as it is made. Common writing paper and ink are used. This very clever invention has been introduced to this country by the Writing Telegraph Co., of New York, and can be seen in operation at the American Exhibition. Mr. John Morgan Richards is the Managing Director of the Company in London, and the London office is at 46, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.

THE HINDU AND MAHOMEDAN PRESS.—The Madras Times makes a comparison between the Hindu and Mahomedan Press in this country. "No one," says our contemporary, "whose attention is directed to what is going on in India can fail to notice the marked difference between the tone and feeling of the Hindu and the Mahomedan Press, or to be struck by the rapid increase during the last few years in the number of meetings at which a section of 'educated Hindus' deliver themselves of inflated, ridiculous harangues devoid of moderation, good sense, and forethought, but plentifully flavoured with scurrilous and even seditious nonsense. The Mahomedan newspapers (it is true they are not numerous) manifest, practically without exception, a feeling of good will and loyalty to the English, diametrically opposed to the windy, malignant outpourings of no inconsiderable portion of the Hindu Press, which reeks with constant gross and violent attacks on Englishmen—private persons as well as officials. In the same way Mahomedans give evidence of their friendliness to the British Raj by abstaining altogether from meetings such as a certain number of so-called 'advanced' Hindus delight in holding, and at which they cackle on questions social and political."

THE "Robinson New Victoria Hansom" is gaining, as it deserves to do, in public favour, and will, no doubt, soon supersede the old-fashioned clumsy and uncomfortable vehicles with which London has hitherto had to put up. From their works in Newman-street, the Company, of which Mr. J. C. Robinson is the able and energetic manager, are turning out a considerable number of their light, elegant, and well-appointed cabs, which make either a Hansom or a Victoria, according to the weather or the will of the hirer. These cabs are being greatly patronised, and the Company is reaping the reward of their enterprise in a rapidly-increasing and profitable business.

THE BROAD ARROW AND NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxio to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy :—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19, 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE

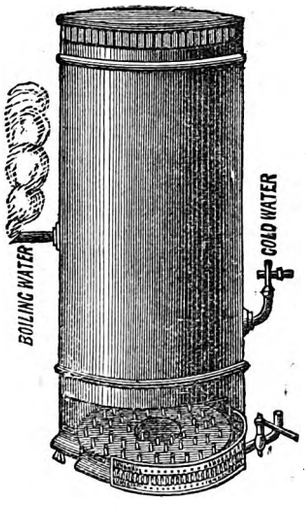
COUGHS. COLDS. ASTHMA. BRONCHITIS.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.

DIARRHŒA, GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London. REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. DR. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London. DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.



DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 Gt. Russell St., W.C.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name —J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[By Overland Mail.]

The Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 30th August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 28th August; and from Calcutta to the 27th August.

The reality of the collapse of the rebellion in Afghanistan is shown by the fact that two thousand Takari and Andari Ghilzais, flying from the Amir's vengeance, have just crossed the border into Toba and Peshin.

Tamur Shah Khan, leader of the Herat rebellion, has been stoned to death at Kabul by the chief officers of the army, after having his beard plucked out.

The Hotaks to the west of Kelat-i-Ghilzai are reported to have returned home, declining to continue the rebellion.

A Native correspondent writes that a letter from Nur Mahomed to some Afghan refugees in British territory has been intercepted by the authorities at Peshawur. Other letters addressed by him to a relative at Kabul, who is a General in the Amir's army, are also said to have been intercepted at Kabul.

Reuter's telegram as to the Amir's health is proved to be incorrect.

In a letter from Kabul, Mr. J. S. Pynes, who has been superintending the construction of the Amir's workshops, it is stated a triumphal arch has been erected there with the heads of 200 rebel prisoners.

The Ghilzai refugees—about 200 families—have reached Khushdil Khan, north of Quetta.

Details of the escape of Ayub Khan from Teheran are to hand. It appears that about the middle of August he was reported to be ill in his harem, and a sham correspondence was kept up with the Persian Minister. The suspicions of the Secretary to the British Legation being aroused, he had the house searched on the 23rd, when it was discovered the Sirdar had fled.

Reports have reached Allahabad that twelve Russian soldiers have been murdered at Chaharjui, having dishonoured some Turcoman women.

Although the details of the Viceroy's tour have not yet been arranged it is understood that his Excellency will proceed as far as the Khawaja Amran Range, whither the railway is to be eventually carried, and that he will afterwards proceed to Kurrachee, whence he will come to Bombay.

The Viceroy during his tour will see the whole of the frontier railways, and practically do most of his journey by rail, riding to such places of importance off the line as he considers necessary. He opens the Benares Bridge about the second week in December, arriving at Calcutta most probably on the evening of Saturday, December 17th.

The Commander-in-Chief will make a trip through the hills to Dehra before beginning his plains tour. He will accompany the Viceroy over the frontier, spending Christmas at Lahore.

We hear that his Excellency the Governor-General of Goa intends paying a visit to Lord Reay at an early date.

Heavy floods have occurred in the Bolan which have destroyed the railway for a distance of four miles. The damage, it is estimated, will take half a lakh of money and a month's time to repair.

It is understood that, as there will be difficulty in finding suitable employment for the Engineering staff now engaged in the Nellore-Tirupati section, after its transfer to the S. I. Railway, that company is to be asked to take over the staff in their employ.

Rs. 13,000 has been collected in India for Lady Roberts' fund for the Nursing Sisters.

The question of raising United Burma to the status of a Lieutenant-Governorship has been shelved for the moment.

Restrictions have been placed on travelling in disturbed parts of Burma.

The new Minister of Hyderabad being opposed to the proposed appointment of two Chief Secretaries the Nizam has postponed any action in the matter.

The widowed daughter of an officiating Marathi Brahmin has been married to a Guzerati Kapole Bania at Bombay.

Mr. Macauliffe has been reinstated in his appointment at Sialkot, being exonerated of the charges preferred against him.

Under new rules just published the pensions of Uncovenanted Civil Servants will count after thirteen years' service, instead of fifteen as formerly, and cumulative pension will be allowed for each year up to the maximum limit of Rs. 5,000.

There has been quite a crop of military tragedies in India of late. It was only the other day a double murder and suicide took place in Bangalore the other day, and now the suicide is reported of a disappointed European soldier-lover at that station. The unfortunate man belonged to the 2nd Battalion Oxfordshire Regiment.

The French Government have addressed the Madras authorities, suggesting that the Pondicherry Railway Company be permitted to run a night train from Pondicherry to Villiapuram, and one vice versâ, in connection with the night train on the South Indian Railway that runs from Madras to Tanjore.

Sir Charles Turner, after completing the Madras report, goes to Simla. The entire Public Service Commission under Sir Charles Aitchison re-assemble finally at Allahabad in November.

The latest official report from Assam states that scarcity has been experienced in some parts of Kachar, and complaints have been received from parts of Sylhet also.

Quarantine has been established at Aden against vessels from Bombay, the duration in the case of vessels in good hygienic condition ranging from six days after a voyage of eight days to twenty-four hours after a voyage of thirteen days and upwards.

The Hon. Dayaram Jethmal, member of the Bombay Legislative Council, died on the 21st August at Hyderabad.

Lieut. Flood, of the Queen's Bays, has died from cholera at Ambala.

An address of congratulation on his Knighthood has been presented to Sir Henry Morland by the Freemasons of Bombay.

The Beloochi sepoys are said to have recently become so riotous that it is unsafe for respectable ladies to appear outside their own houses. There have been several conflicts between the sepoys and the residents of Hyderabad (Sind), and the interference of the Commissioner has been invited.

In a rifle match recently played the Commander-in-Chief's team at Simla made 437; the officers and non-commissioned officers, 2nd Punjab Volunteer Rifles at Murree, 427. The conditions were seven shots at 200, 500, and 700 yards.

From the report of the Government chemical analyser of Bombay, there were during the year 159 cases of suspected poisoning, and in 89 cases poison was detected. These included the poisoning of 128 persons. It is believed that these form only a small percentage of attempts to poison.

NOTES.

AYOUB KHAN, according to the latest intelligence received by telegram, is still at large. The reports are very conflicting regarding his escape from Teheran. It is stated that he slipped away whilst the Shah and his chief officials were absent from the Capital, but he could hardly have done so without the connivance of other officials who remained, and that he could easily have been captured had any real attempt been made to do so cannot be doubted.

THE story given in the Indian papers to hand, explanatory of how he managed to escape, does not say much for the vigilance of any one concerned in looking after him. The tale as told is to the effect that about the middle of August, the Chief was reported to be ill in his harem, and a sham correspondence was kept up with the Persian Foreign Minister. The suspicions of Mr. Arthur Nicholson, Secretary of the British Legation, were aroused, and he had Ayoub's house searched on the 22nd August, when it was discovered the Sirdar had fled, having left the capital about the 14th or 15th. The Persian Foreign Minister and the Secretary to the British Legation must be persons of much faith in Native character, or of little experience in Eastern intrigue.

IT was only according to his invariable custom that M. Vambéry should write a letter to the Times to show that Russia is at the bottom of all the mischief. Here is the opinion which he sends to the editor of that paper:—

> The fact that such an important factor in Central Asian politics has got the means to escape from a dearly-paid and anxiously-guarded custody cannot but be ascribed to the machinations of that very Power whose peaceful intentions, and whose readiness to live in amicable neighbourhood with England, were of late so much spoken of in official circles. The escape of Ayoub Khan has certainly been weeks ago premeditated by Prince Dolgorouki, who is anxious to show his superiority over M. Melnikoff, his predecessor, who was constantly abused by the Russian Press, and if the undoubted skill and unrelenting activity of Mr. Nicholson were unable to prevent the carrying out of the plan of his rival we can pretty safely assume that the Persian Government had to lend reluctantly its assistance, or at least tacitly connived at the newest political trick of your continually stirring rival.

We agree that the custody was "dearly paid," but it does not certainly appear to have been "anxiously guarded." But on what authority does M. Vambéry make the very definite assertion that Russian intrigue and Russian gold have helped in the matter? Surely if this were so some better arrangements might have been made for the fugitive's safety, for according to the latest reports he is wandering in desert plains with a few followers, suffering from want and thirst.

IT is much more likely, as the Quetta correspondent of one of the Lahore paper reports, that discontents in Afghanistan have been for a long time intriguing with him, and that his appearance in Afghanistan would foment rebellion. But, as we pointed out before, the Ameer is strong in men, money, and guns, and it will not be an easy matter for a rival without the two latter to take Afghanistan from him. He may be unpopular, but he is all-powerful.

THE report that Abdurrahman is dangerously ill has been officially contradicted. He has written, it is said, in cordial terms to the Government of India, thanking it for its services on his behalf regarding the Frontier Boundary question, which he has accepted as satisfactory, and likely to be productive of good results in settling the matter on a permanent footing.

THE Times of India, says a military contemporary, is very much exercised over the Nepaulese mission to Pekin with the usual quinquennial offerings of homage. But the advice it gives to the Indian Government to come to "a clear understanding with China as to these frontier States" is one to be carefully eschewed, if feasible, which it is not. Quieta non movere is a good motto for rulers, especially in India. One Afghanistan at a time, if you please. Our contemporary seems quite astonished at the relations between Nepaul and China. They are well known, however, to the Indian Government, little as the Goorkhas will allow us to know of their country, where our Envoy is a sort of prisoner within the rules. When Sir Jung Buhadur received the Prince of Wales in Nepaul he wore a mandarin-button and peacock-feather instead of his British decorations, and acknowledged that he regarded China as the protecting Power of his State, although he professed the greatest attachment to the British Government, and was desirous of the most friendly relations with the Government of India, with which the Court at Katmandoo was in strict alliance. It would be most unwise to excite the suspicions of China with regard to our ulterior policy in the buffer States between the two Empires.

THE Moscow Gazette of September 17 publishes an article expressing sympathy with Dhuleep Singh's claims, and declaring that the people of India believe that Russia will sooner or later liberate them from the British yoke. So says a Reuter's telegram which is going the round of the London Press to-day. If it pleases the Moscow Gazette to say this, it does no harm to anybody here or in India to laugh at it. The "people of India," whatever be meant by that phrase, know better than to desire such a change of masters as the Muscovite organ indicates.

THE Native newspapers throughout India have nearly all had their remarks regarding the supposed slight put upon Holkar, and to their credit be it said that the majority of them have condemned the action of that prince in hastily quitting England. The Rast Goftar says that "beyond all manner of doubt the Native Princes who visited England to witness the Jubilee tamasha" received all round royal treatment, and it holds that "Holkar was not justified in leaving so abruptly, and thereby becoming disrespectful to Her Majesty the Queen-Empress, who was all kindness and courtesy to the distinguished visitors from India." But this journal attempts an explanation of the cause of any little heart-burnings that may have taken place amongst the Native Princes, and this is the explanation offered. It was "the result of the indiscreet conduct of the 'fussy' Mr. Fitzgerald, of the India Office." This is cruel.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs from Calcutta that the Revenue and Agricultural Department propose to arrange rooms at the Brussels Exhibition for the free issue of Indian tea, coffee, and tobacco. The rooms will be suitably furnished, and visitors supplied free with cups of tea or coffee and with cigars. This is almost too good to be true; but if the Department named has been permitted by the Government of India to display such extraordinary liberality, and has been provided with funds to do so, it is a step in the right direction to aid the Indian industries in question. It is a pity, however, that the attempt was not made during the Colonial and Indian Exhibition here.

BUT other exhibitors are on the move also. The Russian mercantile house of Konshine, which established a branch at Teheran in 1884, has appealed to Russian manufacturers to contribute to an exhibition which they are organising in the Persian capital, and which is expected to be opened at the beginning of the new year. The Moscow Gazette declares that the undertaking is worthy of general support in Russia, because Persia occupies a prominent place among her natural markets, and also because she produces articles, such as cotton, silk, and dried fruits, used for Russian manufactures, which it is much more advantageous to purchase by means of manufactured articles than by cash. Formerly Persia was mainly supplied with all her requirements by Western Europe, but this was due to Russian want of initiative, and to Persian ignorance. Messrs. Konshine's exhibition conceived on a sufficiently large scale will do much to dissipate the prevailing uncertainty. The exhibits are to be divided into five classes, and those not sold are to be returned to the exhibitors. Messrs. Konshine also promise to advise exhibitors by the result of the exhibition how they may best adapt their wares to the tastes of the Persian public. There was a time when perhaps Persian tastes might have been consulted by English and Indian exhibitors, but this would appear to have past and not likely to return.

IMITATION is the sincerest flattery, and instead of rumours from India of warlike preparations and Afghan scares it is more pleasant to read that part of the Times correspondent's telegram this morning which tells of the meet of the Hyderabad Coaching Club. Under the presidency of the Nizam himself twenty-one coaches appeared. At five o'clock the procession started for the Bolaram Residency, where the Resident had invited a large party to meet the members. His Highness led the way on a yellow drag with a splendid team of bays. There were present with their respective teams the Nawab Afzur Yung, Mahbub Yar Yung, Saseri Yung, Doolay Khan, Lack ud Dowla, Saef ud Dowla, and many other Hyderabad notabilities. The team of the 7th Hussars was also present. This is the only coaching club in India.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 18.

Under orders from the Queen the Duke of Connaught held a Chapter at Poona on the 14th for the purpose of investing the Governor of Bombay with the insignia as Knight Grand Commander of the Order of the Indian Empire.

Subsequently the Secretary to the Government advanced to the daïs and read the Queen's reply to the address from the inhabitants of Poona as follows:—

"I am grateful for the kindly expressions of loyalty and affection to my throne and person contained in your address. The Presidency of Bombay has been blessed with almost unbroken peace throughout my reign. Its general progress and the well-being of its people are a source of great satisfaction. I have read with especial pleasure that portion of the address which relates to the visits of my sons to India, and to the appointment of the Duke of Connaught as Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in the Bombay Presidency."

A revolt took place in Manipore on the 13th, but was effectually suppressed. Manipore is a small Hindoo State on the borders of Upper Burma. The cause was the political authority of the Assam Government. The present Maharajah, who usurped the chief authority in 1851, rendered valuable assistance to the British force in the Naga war in 1879. On Monday last one of the higher officials raised the standard of revolt. After nightfall the rebels attacked the palace, and almost succeeded in penetrating the inner apartments. Subsequently, however, the attack was defeated, and the leader was captured and shot next morning. The rebels lost nine killed and many wounded.

An Allahabad paper, under the heading "The Mischiefs of a Native Press," comments in strong terms on the pernicious effect which accrues from the persistent, systematic, and malignant vituperation with which Government measures and Government officers are scandalously assailed. The article points out that every endeavour is made by the Native Press to render the masses disloyal, and at the same time to intimidate Government officers, both European and Native, by gross personal abuse, so as to render the honest and independent discharge of duties a matter of constant difficulty, especially in those cases where local interests are antagonistic. The article urges strong reasons for Government interference.

The Times of India, in commenting on the Secretary of State's despatch in the Wilson case, urges that an alteration should be made in the mode of investigation of the conduct of public officials. It points out that the procedure under the Act 38 of 1850 is totally inadequate and unsatisfactory. It suggests that the Government should be clothed with the power of referring cases of this important character to the High Court, that a special Court should be formed with a High Court Judge as president, and that the Court should then report for the consideration of the Secretary of State. Had some such procedure as this been possible the deplorable injustice arising out of this case would have been obviated.

A telegram from Kurrachee reports the rapid progress at Manora of the defence works. The new battery will be masked from an enemy approaching from the sea. The guns will be mounted on the Moncrieff system, by which, with the aid of hydraulic power, they are elevated at the time of firing, the recoil carrying the gun back under shelter for re-loading. The new battery will be finished and ready to receive the guns now on the way from England before the close of the year.

At a meeting of the leading members of the Uncovenanted Civil Service, held on the 15th at Allahabad, it was resolved that thanks should be conveyed to Mr. King and other members of Parliament, and to the committee of the Indian Uncovenanted Civil Service for their efforts on behalf of the service, and that it was desirable to form branch associations for the payment of pensions at par. The main point is that this would only involve the expenditure of £20,000, or 1 per cent. on the total expenditure of India. A Pensions Permanent Association has been formed at Allahabad.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

OUR RAILWAY DEFENCES.

The Pioneer has the following:—

It should be remembered that the great scheme of strategical railways in the Indus Valley and Biluchistan is part and parcel of the plan of frontier defence; and the completion of the Sind-Sagar, Bolan and Sind-Peshin lines has materially simplified the position towards Afghanistan. The making of strategical roads, too, is complementary to these railways being actively proceeded with; and on certain sections just within our Derajat frontier an important point has just been conceded. This is the building of the bridges of strength sufficient to carry a railway line, if, in the future, it is found advisable to convert the roads into railways. When piers have to be sunk and iron girders used, the extra expense incurred in having both piers and girders of a pattern that will satisfy railway requirements is not very great, while the advantage thus secured cannot well be over-estimated. Take the case of Bannu, for instance. It is admitted that a railway must very soon be built to that important outpost which commands the most direct route (the Tochi) to Ghazni, and it is obvious that once the railway reaches Bannu a line must be run southwards to Dera Ismail Khan, so that troops could be rapidly concentrated on the border. Dera Ismail is to the Gomal Pass to Ghazni what Bannu is to the Tochi; and the strategical advantages of having a railway west of the Indus, to facilitate an advance or to guard the embouchures of these two important Passes, can be seen at a glance. The moral effect of these railways upon the warlike tribesmen who hold the country between Ghazni and our present frontier is also an important factor to be considered; for, as we have often pointed out, our great aim must be to win the tribesmen to our side in view of the Afghan Question having, through Russia's aggressive action, to be settled by an appeal to the sword. The chief Passes which lead from Afghanistan to our outposts are the Khyber, the Kurram, the Tochi, the Gomal, and those of the Khwaja-Amran Range. At the present moment our railway termini are, on the North and South, within a few miles of the Khyber and the Khwaja-Amran Passes; when the line has been laid to near the entrance of the Tochi and Gomal Passes we shall stand in the position of being able to concentrate troops at four points, and thus pour them into Afghanistan on different lines or hold them on the defensive, according to the exigencies of the case. The Kurram route is never likely to be used owing to the difficulties which the Shutargardan prevents. What defensive works may be necessary in and about the Passes may well be left to military experts; that such as are laid down as necessary will be provided we are absolutely convinced, for the "defence policy" which Lord Salisbury's and Lord Dufferin's Governments are so strongly bent upon is not one of a piecemeal kind.

THE GWALIOR HOARDS.

A correspondent of the Pioneer gives the following account the wealth hoarded by the late ruler of Gwalior:—

At the present moment any mention of Gwalior is naturally intimately associated with the last Government of India Notification inviting tenders for the Public Service Loan of 5½ crores, in consequence of the fact that the greater portion of that loan was taken up by the private tender of the Gwalior Durbar, who offered 3½ crores. With respect to this transaction, several misconceptions are afloat both in England and India, which it may be well to put an end to once for all.

That the late Maharaja Scindia had hoarded money was a fact well known here; but where it was or how much it amounted to were secrets which remained undivulged. The general idea seems to be that, on the Maharaja's death, Mr. Westland was deputed by the Government of India to investigate the matter; and, so successful was he in his efforts, that in the space of three days (which was the limit of his visit to Gwalior) he not only discovered the secret hiding-place of the treasure, but, in a manner that would have put the labours of Hercules in the shade, he contrived—vide the Times—to dig up, shovel into bags and carry off, in instalments of eighty lakhs each, the enormous amount of 35,000,000 rupees!

As a matter of fact Mr. Westland's share in the transaction was confined merely to his visit to Gwalior to finally settle the term of the 3½ crore loan, which had been previously offered at the sole instance of Sir Gunpat Rao, with the cheerful consent of his colleagues in the Council of Regency. The task of discovering the vaults and unearthing, counting and registering what subsequently proved to be a vast treasure amounting to Rs. 62,500,000 devolved on Colonel Bannerman, the then Resident at Gwalior, whose labours, commencing in October, 1886, were not completed till the middle of May, 1887. How he discovered the various and ingeniously contrived hiding-places of the treasure is immaterial: suffice it to say that the clue, when once obtained, was not lost sight of until Colonel Bannerman brought to light the amount now known to be in existence. It is quite possible that there may be still further and more extensive hoards.

When Sir Gunpat Rao and the Council of Regency were assured of their possession of at least 6¼ crores, their anxiety for the welfare of the State committed to their charge, their honest regard for the true interests of the young Maharaja, and their desire to cement, in some substantial manner, their friendly relations with the Government of India, impelled them to come forward and offer a portion for investment, the acceptance of which by Government has inflamed the more discontented Native papers. Sir Gunpat Rao and his colleagues' measure was the outcome of serious, statesmanlike consideration on the part of as capable a body of State officials, comprising members of the Maharaja's family, as it would be possible to collect to represent a Chief during his minority. That the Council of Regency were influenced in their action there is not the shadow of a doubt; but this influence did not emanate from the quarter indicated by the Native Press and echoed by one of the papers at home; it was brought to bear by Sir Gunpat Rao, the Executive Minister of the Gwalior State. Then, having formed their determination, the Council of Regency sought the advice of the Resident, and the negotiations were completed, Mr. Westland giving the finishing touch. The Council of Regency having acted with so much deliberation, it is unreasonble to suppose that their care for the State failed to suggest their making provision for the ultimate repayment of the loan. The 3½ crores lent by Gwalior are to be repaid by annual instalments, commencing within a year of the Maharaja attaining his majority.

The late Maharaja kept the most minute accounts of his savings, and when the checking of the contents of the various vaults with the Maharaja's private ledger had been completed there was a deficiency of about Rs. 800 only; this sum having, it is believed, been stolen by an individual who had been employed to carry the money-bags to their place of reception. The thief might with justice say, as Lord Clive did during his impeachment: "My God! when I come to consider the opportunities I had, I stand astonished at my moderation."

In addition to the hoards of coinage there is an almost inestimable quantity of jewels. Scindia's collection of diamonds, pearls, rubies, emeralds, &c., is probably unique, and beyond the conception of even the fabled Aladdin. The Native papers maintain that the Indian Princes are poor; but the case of the late Maharaja Scindia is certainly not an example. No doubt in 1878, when his Highness appealed for and obtained from Government an urgent loan of 50 lakhs to enable him to meet the vicissitudes of a famine, the impression amongst Native politicians of the scribbling class was that Scindia had fallen into poverty. Recent events show that at that time he had a wealth of rupees and jewels which could have paid off a considerable portion of the public debt of the country. Scindia preferred to borrow what to him was a petty sum, and pay 5 per cent interest thereon, rather than dip his hands into his hoards and so run the risk of affording the slightest suspicion of his wealth to the outside public. In 1878 he had in his vaults silver coins which could be counted by millions, magnificent pearls and diamonds by the tens of thousands, rubies, emeralds and other gems by thousands, and wrought and melted gold by maunds; yet so jealous was he of his fabulous wealth, and so fearful lest it be discovered, that he chose to approach the Government it was his constant policy to keep aloof from and beg a favour of it. How many more, Indian Princes, whose "poverty" has stirred the Native papers into a sympathetic and seditious frenzy, may there not be in India?

THE COVENANTED CIVIL SERVICE.

(Englishman.)

Among the several causes which have mainly contributed to the immense progress made in the development of India during the present century, the efficiency of the administrative officers may well be reckoned as holding a high place. Again, without Anglo-Indian energy, directed and supported by official sympathy, it is not too much to say that the country would have remained in a more backward state than the wildest parts are in at the present day. It is, therefore, that we regard with the utmost apprehensions any indication of a change in the attitude of Government towards its servants which may have the effect of checking their ardour, or of driving away Anglo-Indian enterprise and capital. There is, we believe, a feeling abroad that the action of Government in certain cases which have lately occurred is likely to do considerable harm in unnerving the rising generation of its officers, and in unfitting them to take up positions of responsibility, the result of which will inevitably be to lower the standard of executive vigour hitherto expected and obtained. In Mr. Beames's case we have had the spectacle of an official of acknowledged ability and of great experience sacrificed for the infraction of an old and obscure Regulation, to the malignity of the Native Press, whose feelings he had offended by his outspoken evidence before the Public Service Commission. He may have been technically liable to dismissal, but in the absence of the slightest proof of corruption no discreet Government could have inflicted such a penalty. In the Meherpur case we have seen a young officer zealously performing what he considered to be his duty in defence of the rights of property for the preservation of the public peace, and for the maintenance of his authority, but for a want of discretion in the nature of the punishment imposed he is to be made an example of and thrown over to the Native papers to worry without mercy. What, again, was the moral of the Rungpur Deer Case? It was a matter of no real importance. There was conflicting evidence as to the ferocity of the deer, and there was no necessity whatever to take the serious notice that the late Lieutenant-Governor thought fit (though we understand that he subsequently acknowledged his error) to take of the conduct of the District Magistrate. The general deduction we draw is that nowadays whatever he may do or not do, an Executive Officer is subjected to the lynx-eyed vigilance of a hostile phalanx of Native editors, actuated by race feeling and restrained by no regard for truth or decency, who are not slow to see from such examples as we have furnished that if they only throw enough dirt the inevitable call for explanation from some official superior will ensue. If a primâ facie case is made out, it is much easier for Government to throw over its officer than to stand by him loyally. The Native editors know that the mouth of the officer is shut, partly by the rules of the service, partly by the prohibitive cost of legal proceedings; whereas, on the other hand, non-compliance with the howlings of the Native Press will lead to questions in Parliament and despatches from the Secretary of State. Many years have elapsed since Sir George Campbell called attention to the terrorism exercised by the local journals over the Native judicial and executive service in the Mufasal, and there are not wanting ominous signs that the deficiency of administrative vigour for which the Native staff are conspicuous is appearing in quarters where formerly the true British qualities might have been relied upon. We can hardly suppose that, in these days of competitive and endless examinations, the executive services are less informed of their duties, or that they are less energetic than men of the Haileybury period. The new factor in the case is the development of Native journalism and its mischievous influence in directions which all true friends of the Public Press most deplore. It is no new thing for individual Englishmen to seek a bubble reputation by posing as the champions of supposed rights and the avengers of alleged Native wrongs. Lord Ripon is the most recent example, but we believe it is a new departure for our rulers to be actuated by a regard for the possible future criticisms of the Native newspapers, and to endeavour by concessions to anticipate their attacks.

PAPER MANUFACTURE IN INDIA.

(Bombay Gazette.)

It is disheartening, at first sight at all events, to those who are interested in the success of paper manufacture in India, to see the statement of profit and loss of the Indian Paper Mills Company, Limited, on its first year's working. The company was promoted by Mr. John Macfarlane and Mr. Shaikh Adam Yoosoofbhoy, to work paper mills at Poona. The capital was four lakhs, divided into 400 shares of Rs. 1,000 each, of which three-fourths were taken up, and Rs. 600 were paid on each share. The first year's working shows a debit of Rs. 31,944 3-2. The quantity of stores purchased was Rs. 49,590-8-3, for the year ending 31st March, 1887, of which the accounts were examined and found correct on 15th June. Stores valued at Rs. 19,072-6-11, were still in hand, showing a consumption of stores of the value of Rs. 30,578-1-4. The wages account was Rs. 9,326-3-4, office allowance and directors' fees, Rs. 5,420, petty expenses—exclusive of travelling, stationery, stamps, hamalage, &c.—Rs. 3,415-6-10. The total expenditure amounted to Rs. 53,337-7-2. On the credit side we learn that the paper sold brought Rs. 14,170-15-9; the paper in hand represents Rs. 7,168-3-0, the balance against the concern on the year's working being Rs. 39,944-3-2. This unsatisfactory result is set down to the various difficulties which generally come in the way of a new industry, the foremost of which was that of obtaining cheay fibre suitable for making paper. It is asserted that "at last a fibre has been obtained which, the manager reports, will answer our purpose, and the use of which will necessitate a slight addition to the present machinery, in order to work as economically as possible, and to increase production." It is to be hoped that the manager's opinion that the new fibre will answer the purpose, and that the directors' hope that a slight addition to the present machinery will suffice, will be justified by the result. The holders of the 305 shares issued would be wise, before consenting to pay up the remaining Rs. 400 per share, to make sure of their ground. The first step in a matter of this kind is to ascertain the quality of the machinery employed, and to make sure that it is equal to the present demands made upon the productive powers of manufacturing concerns. It is a dismal thing to plunge into a new business, and find that for an outlay of Rs. 30,518 on stores alone, and of Rs. 22,819 for wages, fees, &c., the outturn is represented by Rs. 21,339 of paper sold and on hand. Such an unexpected result suggests an inquiry into the fitness of the machinery employed, and shows how incumbent it is on those investing their money in limited liability companies, which undertake to introduce new industries, to make sure in time that the proper machinery is obtained, and that it is placed in the hands of men who have some special knowledge of the work to be done. The board of directors of the Indian Paper Mills Company, Limited, consists of two solicitors, Mr. Cumroodin Tyebji and Mr. H. J. R. Hemming, Mr. Khimjee Jeewa, an iron merchant and broker. Mr. Shaikh Adam Yoosoofbhoy, secretary and agent, is also a director, and he possesses experience in paper making, he being one of the vendors of the machinery with which the company started. The result of the year's work of this unlucky company is certainly disappointing; but it is no reason whatever why the endeavour to supply the Indian market with Indian paper should not be persevered in. Every sheet of paper printed in India comes out through the Suez Canal; the supply always costly, and often precarious. The market for paper is vast, and the demand is daily becoming more considerable.

THE HILLS EXODUS.

There has been a good deal said lately concerning what the Government of India thinks about the annual transfer of its headquarters to Simla. The following, says the Pioneer, may be trusted as a summary of the final conclusions as sent home to the Secretary of State:—

1. That it is essential that the Viceroy should spend a portion of the year on tour in the Indian provinces.
2. That it is impossible to separate the Council from the Governor-General, except during the period of this tour.
3. That the duties of the Government of India to the Empire as a whole will be best discharged by appropriating the year (a) to residence at Calcutta during its busiest season, for a time adequate to the importance of its interests and those of Bengal, and sufficient for the legislation which is most appropriately undertaken there; (b) to movement among other provinces as circumstances may require; (c) to residence at a hill station, where, at a season when heat and rain render residence in the plains unfavourable to administrative vigour, the Government of India may exercise its control of all local administrations, may be in contact with Army Headquarters, may carry on the preliminaries of its legislative business, and enact such laws as may best be dealt with at such residence.
4. That the permanent location of the Government of India at any Presidency town would be adverse to efficient supervision of the interests of the Empire as a whole, and would establish a disproportionate provincial influence at the seat of Government inconsistent with impartial and well-balanced rule.
5. That while in regard to facility of communication and proximity to the localities of greatest political interest a summer residence in Northern India is preferable, the fact that a large expenditure has been incurred in adapting Simla for that purpose is adverse to any change which is not recommended by an indisputable superiority on the part of any other hill station; and finally
6. That the recurring annual expenditure incurred in the movements of Government and its residence at Simla is to a great extent inseparable from any movement, and therefore inevitable unless all movement is to be abandoned, and that the cost is inconsiderable compared with the great advantages thereby secured to the administration of the Empire.

BORROWING MONEY BY CIVILIANS.

"Poor but Pure" writes to the Englishman:—

I follow Shakespeare when he says
"Neither a borrower nor a lender be,
For loan oft loseth both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry."

The Bengal civilian loses his appointment into the bargain, and this leads me to inquire under what section of Reg. VII. of 23 has Mr. Beames been punished. If I understand the case, he did not borrow from any officer under his authority (Section II.), or from any person officially accountable to him.

Section III. does not include Commissioners of circuit, and if it does, Mr. Beames did not borrow from any one in his district or division.

Section V. does not apply, since Mr. Beames was not in debt, as far as we know, in 1823.

Under Section VI. the penalty for omitting to report a debt applies only to such debts as he is aware of at the time of entering on the duties of his appointment. It is nowhere enacted that he is to report, if at any time subsequent to his entering on those duties he becomes aware of the presence of a quondam creditor. No doubt it would be right and proper to do so, but that is not the point. He has not disobeyed any instruction of the law if he fails to do what is right and proper. I don't seek to defend this omission, but if he is punished under the law, by that law let him be judged. If he is not liable under the terms of Section VI., there is no section applicable to his omission.

Admitting that he is guilty of illegally borrowing, I await with some curiosity, not unmixed with satisfaction, the decision of the Supreme Government on the lender under Section IV., which, as it may not be known to your readers, I will now proceed to transcribe:—

"IV.—All persons are prohibited from lending money or otherwise becoming in any way creditor to any officer of Government, being a covenanted civil servant, in contravention of the above rules, and any person lending money or in any way becoming creditor to any such public officer in breach of this prohibition, shall forfeit to Government a sum equal to the amount for which he shall so illegally have become a creditor."

The same law for both you see; and of course a similar decision.

"IN DESPATCHES."

"The Burma honours have still to come."

—Pioneer, July 19.

Were rewards thus thickly scattered
When the century was new?
When the might of France was shattered
On the field of Waterloo?
When of old the King of Ava
Braved our army in his pride;
When the Russ at Balaclava
England's might in vain defied;
When at Delhi desperate driven Fought and fell the mutineer;
Did despatches fill up seven
Columns of the P—n—r?

Ev'ry bullet's sure to have it's
Billet, so they say, in war;
Now all billets carry brevets;
So mutantur tempora.
Bring the medals in on dishes,
Print off brevets by the score,
Share alike the lo. .s and fishes,
Shed ink if you can't shed gore!
Thus the epidemic catches,
Thus our honours now are won,
Thus were mentioned in despatches.—
Pardon; Shade of Wellington! EARL.

M. NOTOVICH IN INDIA.

(Behar Herald.)

The presence of the Special Correspondent of a Russian journal in India is a remarkable sign of the times, which will be interpreted variously by various people according to the colour of their politics. We see in his presence in India the indication of a decided effort on the part of Russian journalism to shake itself clear of the fetters forged for them by their Government on the one hand and by the savage conservatism of their country on the other, and thus to adopt those means and methods of progress which may be suggested by the exigencies of the times. This is our general view of the case, and as to the possible effects of M. Nicholas Notovich's visit to India, if he is an honest man and a patriot it is within his power to render a decided service to the cause of peace and progress by telling those of his countrymen who ever and anon cast longing eyes on the rich plains of India that the foundations of the British Government in this country are deep laid in the affection of the people, who desire no change beyond what may be suggested by experience in the details of the Indian Government. On the other hand, it is not beyond his power to do a world of mischief by sending exaggerated accounts of the state of Native feeling with regard to the British Government, and thereby induce his countrymen to believe that the Natives of India are waiting in all eagerness and anxiety to hail its Northern deliverers with open arms. He may also make light of the military and strategical strength of the Indian Government, and paint it as lying at the mercy of a Russian coup d'etat. The true Russian patriot, we are sure, is not quite in a hurry to see Russia and England engaged in a mortal conflict with each other. What with an exchequer in a chronic state of indebtedness, her credit the laughing stock of Continental bourses, and secret societies and open discontent all over the country, Russia has a very bad time of it at home, and to think of an invasion of India at present from that quarter is madness. At any rate, if Russia adopts any decidedly aggressive policy towards India we are of opinion that her stakes would be immeasurably higher than ours in the conflict, and we are therefore content to let M. Notovich write anything he likes of India. We have certainly no patience with the suggestion thrown out by a contemporary that M. Notovich should be sent bag and baggage out of the country in the most approved way of Russian statecraft, or that he should be placed under a sort of mild police surveillance if he at all is tolerated in India. If M. Notovich is a dishonest man we are sure he will do more harm to his country than to ours

CLAIMS AGAINST THE BURMESE GOVERNMENT.

(Mandalay Herald.)

A great deal has been said and still more published in the Press, in India and in Burma, about the claims on the late Burmese Government which have been preferred to the British Government of India for settlement. It is but natural that the persons who trusted a reigning and powerful monarch like Theebaw, when that misguided and unhappy young man was still paramount possessor of Upper Burma, and lent him large sums of money and supplied him with a variety of goods, and chattels of the costliest description, should be anxious to receive some portion at least of what they so readily advanced, and imported into the country at the late king's command. The reports of the Commissioner of Claims on the claims are now in the hands of the Government of India, and claimants must now, therefore, look to the latter for a final settlement. But, though there may not be any intention on the part of the Government of India to repudiate any of the claims, there is a strong general report to the effect that it intends to make a distinction between the ex-king's "public" and "private" debts, and on this ground disallowing the claims which it may please to classify under the latter. If this be the modus operandi of the Government of India in settling disagreeable demands upon it, then we have no hesitation in saying that not only would such a procedure be unjust and inequitable, but the Government would be acting in the face of a fact perfectly well known to it, the fact, namely, that, under the late king's Government (such as it was) there was no distinction between public and private debts, as such are well understood and acknowledged by the sovereigns of Europe, and the princes and chiefs of India. From the distinction between the king's public and private debts now sought to be drawn, one would think that the Government of India believed in the late "Burmese Government," as it believes in the Governments of the Mahratta princes, the princes of Baroda, of Mysore, of Travancore, or Cochin; but the Government of India knows as well as anybody else that there was no such Government in Upper Burma; that Theebaw was an absolute monarch; and that he extorted and spent money without advice, and, indeed, against the advice of his ministers; and that he himself was a slave to the whims and caprices of his favourite queen, who was as much lady of his treasury as he was lord of it. It is of the rich and productive country of such a king as this, it is of all his personal wealth and treasures that the British Government of India has taken possession, and with the possession natural justice and equity should teach the Government of India that it took upon itself the debts incurred by the king, whether with his own subjects or foreigners, whom commerce and trade and industry attracted to the country; and in the case of the foreigners, European and Native, most of them came to the country by the king's invitation. It appears to us, therefore, that the Government is putting forward a poor and weak plea (and that, too, at the eleventh hour) when it proposes to make a distinction between Theebaw's public and private debts. What ought to be done clearly is, that the Government should frankly admit all claims that have been proved by reasonable evidence produced before the Commissioner, and refuse to pay only those of which there is no satisfactory proof.

WILD ELEPHANTS IN TRAVANCORE.

The Madras Times writes:—

That wild elephants have for some years past been steadily increasing in numbers in Travancore is a fact well known to all those who, for their sins doubtless, are constrained to dwell in what has been appropriately called the Garden of South India, and to have their habitations amongst the lovely mountains of what has been similarly designated the Model State.

The cause of this steady increase is not far to seek. Following the example of the British Government most stringent orders were issued some years ago for the preservation of these noble beasts, a heavy fine or imprisonment being the punishments awarded to anyone found guilty of wilfully destroying an elephant unless in self-protection or with a permit from the Government.

For some years these permits to shoot an elephant were seldom, if ever, refused, and not a few sportsmen have had the satisfaction of killing their Tusker, and, with the sanction of Government, have had the pleasure of securing a handsome trophy in the shape of a pair of tusks, though this pleasure has not perhaps been enhanced, when the lucky sportsman has found out that the tusks are only granted, except in very special cases, on the payment of their market value into the Sircar Treasury. But, of late years, these permits have been, we hear, somewhat grudgingly granted, and whether in consequence of this or not matters but little—the fact remains that fewer sportsmen have visited Travancore for Elephant Shikar, and elephants have undoubtedly been in much greater evidence than formerly.

So far as the preservation of elephants therefore is concerned, the plan adopted by Government has been a perfect success; but cui bono?

Some years ago there was a great talk of "Kheddahs" being started in various parts of the country, and several not unsuccessful attempts have been made in the Quilon division, and some elephants captured; but what is the use of one "Kheddah" in a country like Travancore, that simply swarms with elephants? In the Cardamom Hills, for instance, they simply jostle one another, and herds of them may any day be seen, by walking a few hundred yards, so to speak, from the Superintendent's bungalows.

In the Peermaad District, they are almost as numerous as crows, and more than one Planter has suffered heavy losses from their devastations.

In the Periar District, an elephant has lately been amusing himself by upsetting buildings of sorts, and on one property, damage to the extent of upwards of two thousand rupees has been done during a series of years. Only the other day an account appeared in the Madras Times of serious damages done by a pair of Tuskers, entailing a loss of some five hundred rupees on a planter. Not very long ago we noticed an extract from a Travancore paper, giving an account of the vagaries of an elephant, who has apparently for some time been the terror of the Southern Districts. Many other instances might also be adduced in proof of our assertion that wild elephants have largely increased of late years, and we are decidedly of opinion that the Sircar should, without further delay, commence Kheddah operations in a thoroughly systematic manner. There would, we fancy, be but little difficulty in finding some one capable of managing the operations. A knowledge of the country people and language would, of course, be a sine qua non; and, in addition to this the selection would necessarily fall upon some one well known to be the possessor of both pluck and energy. Cela va sans dire. Should it be deemed advisable—and we consider that the perfect success of the operations would thereby be ensured—the temporary services of Mr. "Wild Beasts" Sanderson (as a writer in the Asian calls him) might doubtless without much difficulty be obtained with the sanction of the Supreme Government.

That the undertaking would be a financial success we have no hesitation in prophesying; but if the Travancore Government do not see their way to adopting our suggestion, it is absolutely necessary that the rules now in force, prohibiting destruction of wild elephants, be, if not rescinded, at any rate considerably modified without further delay.

BENGAL.

THE indigo brokers' estimate for the indigo crop in Bengal this season amounts to 20,300 maunds, as against 23,352 maunds last season. The falling-off has occurred principally in the Bhagalpur, Purnia, and Rungpur districts, for Jessor, Krishnaghur, and Rajshahye show a satisfactory increase. Manufacture from first cuttings in Behar is now nearly finished, and the outturn is expected to be about 51,000 maunds as compared with 66,080 maunds last season. The Koonties in Tirhut and Champaran as well as in the rest of Behar are not likely to turn out so well as was at one time anticipated, owing to heavy rains and absence of sunshine and the attacks of caterpillars. The weather has somewhat improved of late, which may improve the produce from the Koonties, and make the total above the estimate now given. Manufacture has commenced in Benares and other parts of the North-West Provinces, but the outturn, owing to the late unfavourable wet weather, is not expected to exceed that of last year, though in some places the plant is said to be cutting out well.

MADRAS.

THE section of the Cuddapah-Nellore State Railway from Tirupati to Nellore, which is to be opened for public traffic on 1st proximo, is 83 miles in length—a distance necessitated by the circuitous route that had to be adopted to serve the zemindaries of Calastry and Vencatagherry and the town of Godur—runs in a north-easterly direction from Tirupati to Nellore, crossing the Madras Railway by an overbridge at Renigunta, and having ten stations on the line. The country through which the line passed is wavelike in formation and poor in soil, more than 5-8ths of the railway passing through waste lands and low jungle. Two large valleys, those of Ramdos and Godur, each about three miles wide, are crossed by the railway, thus necessitating much bridging and waterway to carry off the large volume of water that accumulates in, and runs down these valleys. The country is much interspersed with tanks, many of which have to be crossed by the line, thus causing heavy embankments and steep gradients, notably that of the Monobole tank, in which there is more than a mile of railway bank. For the same reason much pitching has to be done. There is a temporary diversion of more than 1½ miles in the Godur valley at the 22nd mile, it having been decided to rebuild on wells two of the piers of the seventeen forty-feet openings at this spot. The stock to work the traffic of this line consists, at present, of 10 engines, 100 covered goods and 100 low-sided waggons, 1 third-class carriage, and 3 brakes. Two local trains, one in each direction, will run between Tirupati and Renigunta junction, while one through train, leaving Tirupati early in the morning, will arrive at Nellore at noon; another, leaving this latter station early in the afternoon, will reach Tirupatri just at sunset. There will be no night running of trains on account of the unfenced condition of the line.

DURING the year ended the 31st of March last eight new companies, with nominal capital amounting to Rs.27,88,000, were registered in Calcutta, and four companies increased their capital by Rs 1,61,475. Ten companies, with capital amounting to Rs.37,55,000, were either in the process of winding up or were actually dissolved, and one company reduced its capital under the order of the High Court by two lakhs. This leaves altogether 230 companies actually in working operation, with a total nominal capital of Rs.11,28,75,575, and a paid-up capital of Rs.9,68,24,825. Of the companies now in existence 19 are banking and insurance companies, 31 trading companies, 29 mills and presses, 129 indigo and tea-planting companies, 12 mining companies, 5 for the manufacture of ice, 1 for making sugar, 1 brewery, and 3 miscellaneous.

BOMBAY.

THE unfortunate Sheikh who was supposed to have shot the police amin at Aurangabad in the emeuete in January last year has been beheaded. A few hours afterwards the subedar died. The superstitious Natives believe that he was spirited away by the beheaded Sheikh.

THE arrival of a pattimar at Goa on the 9th August must have given a shock to the religious belief of the people, who hitherto thought that no vessel whatever could cross the bar at Aguada before the 10th of August, the feast day of St. Lawrence, on which date the booming of a Royal salute in honour of the saint was supposed to open the passage by removing the barrier of sand which accumulated at the entrance of the harbour during the monsoon, and prevented all navigation during the rainy season. The discovery that the port of Goa is accessible to vessels before the feast of St. Lawrence will induce the port authorities to ascertain the exact period up to which the sandy bar continues to obstruct obstruction.

THE health of Bombay is not in a very satisfactory condition, there having been no fewer than 509 deaths in the three weeks ending the 23rd August, giving the abnormally high rate of 28·12 against 21·09 in the corresponding week of last year. Cholera does not seem to be increasing. In the week which just closed eighteen deaths were registered against nineteen and seventeen, respectively, in the previous two weeks. The distribution of mortality according to locality was as follows :—Fort (Northern Division), 2; Market, 1; Mandvi, 1; Chuckla, 1; Umarkhadi, 1; Dhobi Talao, 5; Khumbarwada, 1; Khetwadi, 1; Tardeo, 1; Siwri, 1; and the Water Division, 3. According to races and castes the distribution was as follows :—Brahmins, 1; Hindoos of other castes, 6; Hindoo outcasts, 2; Mussulmans, 6; Native Christians, 2; and European, 1.

ON Saturday, August 22, a general meeting of Kemp and Company, Limited—very satisfactory to the shareholders from the handsome dividend made available to them—was held at the laboratory premises in Armenian Lane. The Chairman, in reviewing the operations of the past year, congratulated the shareholders on the continued success and prosperity which had during the last six years been ensured to the company by skilful and careful management. The profits for the year ending June 30 last amounted to Rs. 1,00,769, while the capital and assets of the company had been nearly doubled. It was a noticeable fact that in a large business like the company's the bad debts stood at the low figure of Rs. 820, while in the previous year they stood at Rs. 500, showing, as the chairman remarked with satisfaction, that the constituents of Kemp and Company were thoroughly good paymasters. Rs. 35,412 were added to the reserve fund, which now stands at Rs. 80,436. A dividend of Rs. 26-4 per share, being at the rate of 15 per cent., was declared for the past year. A bonus of Rs. 3,500 was sanctioned for distribution amongst the employés of the company at the discretion of the general manager; and willing testimony was borne to the admirable way in which, by constant attention and unflagging industry since the departure of Mr. D. S. Kemp from Bombay, Mr. Bristed has contributed to the growing prosperity of the company.

THE case in which Rukhmabai and Harichand Yadowji have been charged with libelling Narayen Dharmaji, was called on August 24 for further hearing before Mr. Crawley-Boevey. Nearly the whole day was occupied with the cross examination of the complainant, with the object of showing that Dadaji was behind the present prosecution. The complainant made admissions frequently contradictory to statements previously made. The case was again adjourned.

AT a general meeting of the members of the Bombay Medical Union, held under the presidentship of Dr. P. C. De Souza, the following propositions were passed :—"I. That in the opinion of this meeting there is a necessity for a Medical Registration Act for the Town and Island of Bombay. II. That this meeting empowers the managing committee to draw up representations requesting the Governments of Bombay and India to introduce a Medical Registration Act in the Town and Island of Bombay."

N.W. PROVINCES, OUDH AND PUNJAB.

THE Municipal Board of Allahabad has lately rendered an account of its doings for the year ending the 31st March last, and the report is pronounced by the Local Government to be eminently satisfactory. Sir Alfred Lyall is pleased to learn from the Divisional Commissioner that the attendance of the members of the Board at the business meetings has been particularly good, and that Mr Lawrence is satisfied with the Administration in all its branches. The income in 1886-87 amounted to Rs. 2,63,407 against Rs. 2,46,681 in the preceding year, giving an incidence of Rs. 1-12 7 per head on a population of 150,000.

AN accident, which nearly proved fatal, happened at Delhi a few days ago. Mrs. Barlow, the wife of the bank manager, and two other ladies were bathing in the large swimming-bath belonging to the Delhi Bank. One of the ladies, Miss Fletcher, fainted in the water when out of her depth, and sank to the bottom. She rose once, but not quite to the surface, and sank again before any help could be rendered. An old ayah who was present plunged into her rescue, but she could not swim, and was extricated with difficulty by the two other ladies, one of whom dragged her out by the hair of her head, with the assistance of her friend. Their cries brought some coolies and chaprasis, but their help was not efficient. Mr. Barlow also ran to the rescue, and dived after the young lady. He succeeded in finding her, but had not strength to bring her to the surface. Before he had time for a second attempt a gentleman who was staying with him, Major Hodgson, of the Lincolnshire Regiment, hearing the cries as he was walking in the garden, ran to assist. He plunged in at once, and being a tall, powerful man he managed to get his arm under the young lady's shoulders and bring her to the surface. She was quite insensible, but came to herself in a short time, and is said to be none the worse for her narrow escape.

THE find of coins at Bajwara has been sent into the Archæological Surveyor at Amritsar, who has deciphered nearly every coin. They are nearly all of Shah Rukh, who reigned in Samarkand from 1404 to 1417 A.D. There are a few of Ulugh Beg, 1447-49 A.D.; Aboo Saeed, 1452-1467 A.D.; Ahmad, 1467-1493 A.D., and one rare one of Muhammad, 1493-94 A.D. There were three or four square silver coins of the Sultans of Kashmir. Many of the coins were counter-struck by succeeding kings. One of Shah Rukh's had Ulugh Beg's and Ahmad's name on besides. The find is interesting, as illustrative of the currency of the House of Timur. The coins must have belonged to some Tartar merchants, who probably hid them where they were found in Bajwara.

RECENT casualties and retirements are about to bring several steps of promotion in the Civil Service of the N.W. Provinces. Thus by the death of the late Mr. Crawford in June last Mr. W. Lambe becomes a second grade magistrate, Mr. E. Rose a second grade deputy commissioner, and Mr. R. C. Whiteway a third grade deputy commissioner. In consequence of the retirement of Mr. Harrison, Mr. Tracy is raised to the first grade of judges, and Mr. Mellor to the second grade, Mr. F. N. Wright becomes a first grade magistrate, Mr. Roberts a second grade magistrate, Mr. Whiteway a second grade deputy commissioner, and Colonel Pitcher a third grade deputy commissioner. By the death of Mr. Watts Mr. G. J. Nicholls is raised to the second grade and Mr. Deas to the third grade of judges.

INDIAN V. CHINESE TEA.—The following story is told by the Foochow Echo:—Indian teas have frequently been pronounced by medical men to be very injurious to the system, and they assert that it destroys the gastronomical organs. We believe there is some truth in this, as a case—which might have been a serious one—happened the other day at E-wo hong, in tasting some Indian teas. Whilst the Chaasze of the above-mentioned hong was tasting some of this kind, the well known tea-merchant Alum came in, and of course was invited to taste the tea, which he did by drinking two or three mouthfuls of it, and in less than two minutes he complained that the tea had brought on a fearful pain in the stomach; the Chaasze of course offered to call in medical aid to give him relief, but he declined it, and taking his chair went home. The pain increased so much that he was obliged to go into the first foreign hong, where, we are told, a glass of pure Cognac was administered to him by the Taipan, after which, all that nasty tea—as he calls it now—was evacuated, when he felt relieved from the fearful pain. He made a most solemn vow that he would never again taste any more Indian tea. The effect was so great that the poor man thought he had taken poison instead of tea.

Lieutenant-Colonel Henry B. Wilson, Northamptonshire Regiment, will obtain the command of the 1st Battalion, which has become vacant by the voluntary retirement of Colonel St. J. Bally. Lieutenant-Colonel Wilson served throughout the campaign of 1863 on the N.W. Frontier of India, receiving the medal with clasp. Major E. W. Herbert, 3rd Battalion King's Royal Rifle Corps, has been selected for the Adjutancy of the 22nd Middlesex Rifle Volunteer (Central London Rangers). Major Herbert served in the latter part of the Zulu War of 1879, also in the Soudan Expedition of 1884, obtaining the brevet rank of major, and receiving the medal with clasp and Khedive's star. Major Cradock served in the Afghan War of 1879 80, and was present at the battle of Candahar, obtaining the brevet rank of major, and receiving the medal with clasp. Captain W. S. D. Liardet has been selected for the Adjutancy of the 3rd Battalion Leicestershire Militia, on the completion of the term of service of Major C. F. W. Moir. The following is a record of his services:—Persian Expedition, 1857; Indian Mutiny, 1858-9 (served against insurgent Dessaies in the Sawunt Wari district and in the Mahi Kantha); Abyssinian Expedition, 1868 (medal); Arabia, 1871 (affairs of Dar-el-Kuduymir, near Aden); Arabia, 1873 (against the Vonhahie tribe, near Aden); and Egyptian Expedition, 1882.

COLONEL G. E. BLOWERS, S.C., retires from the service on a pension of £713 5s. Colonel Blower has seen considerable active service. As a midshipman in the late Indian Navy he shared the dangers of the Persian campaign, and was present at the bombardment and capture of the forts of Bushire and Mohumra. A little later he assisted in the suppression of the Indian Mutiny, taking a part in the capture of Kotah, the reoccupation of Ghendarer, the battle of Khotab-ke-Serai, the capture of Gwalior, the seige and capture of Powree, and the actions of Beejapore and Kconduye. In 1867-8 he served under Lord Napier in Abyssinia, being present at the storming of Magdala. After a long rest he was again on active service in the Afghan war in 1880, his principal exploit on that occasion being the march from Quetta to the relief of Kandahar.

A YOUNG soldier of the 52nd Regiment O.L.I., named James Pott, committed suicide at Bangalore by shooting himself with a rifle in Casuarina-street, St. John's Hill, under circumstances somewhat peculiar. From the proceedings of the inquest held on the body of the deceased it would appear that he became enamcured of a Miss Esther Xavier, residing in the street where deceased shot himself, to whom a proposal of marriage was made, but the young lady being of opinion that the deceased had not served long enough to ensure a comfortable home, she rejected his advances. The refusal seems to have preyed on his mind to such an extent that arming himself with his rifle with some half-a-dozen or more ball cartridges he went to the house of his lady-love, and there opposite to the gate committed this rash act. The deceased was about twenty-three years of age, and had three and a half years' services.

EUROPEAN MILITARY PENSIONERS.—The Government of India has ruled that European military pensioners holding civil appointments under Government are not entitled to gratuitous medical ttendance f their families while so employed.

ANGLO-INDIAN REPUTATIONS.

Why is it that the man who rules
An Indian province, who is great
In tropical affairs of State
Becomes a butt for more than fools—

Yea, even wise men jeer or smile—
When, pensioned, he is made M.P.?
How is it that we often see
The ex-Proconsul bore or rile

The Senate of his native land?
Is it by want of ready tongue,
Or dreary sentences ill-strung,
Or things they cannot understand!

"He seems to teach and air his lore,
To measure all by his own test:
He knows the East but not the West,
Confounds the two, and is a bore."

So answered one who held him cheap.
Another murmured, "Let him talk
At home where none his speech may baulk,
But in the House—why, let him sleep."

ADVENTURES OF M. BONVALOT.

The Débats publishes letters from M. Bonvalot, in which he describes his adventures in crossing the Pamir tableland. From Mastutch, June 10, he states that he and his fellow travellers quitted Ak-Basoga, north of the Pamir, on March 19, by moonlight, so as to have the benefit of the night frost, which hardened the snow. With much difficulty they crossed the defile of Taldick, sometimes sinking into the snow, which had a depth in places of 9 ft. In an intense cold for five days they travelled over the snow, the reflection from which of the sunshine scorched their faces. On arriving at the pass of Risib-Art the travellers were exhausted. Their lips, noses, and eyes were in a pitiable state. A day's rest restored them. On the night of April 1 they came across a Chinese post. This was unfortunate for them. They politely asked the way, but were ordered to retrace their steps. The officer said he could not allow them to pass without an order from Kashgar. He would suffer death if he acted otherwise. The success of the journey was at stake; so the travellers decided to defy these Chinese authorities. They invited the chief officer to drink tea with them. He came with two soldiers. "Without heeding the laws of hospitality," says M. Bonvalot, "I thrashed him with a stick, and threatened to cut off his ears if he did not supply us immediately with camels."

He gave the required orders, and M. Bonvalot watched him till his men had come back with the beasts, which were indispensable. The travellers knew that a party of Chinese had set out for a reinforcement, so they hurried on as fast as possible, determined to kill any who attempted to oppose them. Wherever they found yaks or camels they requisitioned them, and in that way they reached Ak-Tash, a place with fifty inhabitants, on the route of the caravans going from Tagharusa to Wakhan. They expected to have found at Ak-Tash a party of Chinese to arrest them, but the deep snow had effectually blocked the Tagharusa Pass and thus protected them. To escape death by starvation they were compelled to take a sheep from the Kirghiz inhabitants, for which they offered payment. The people would not accept the money publicly, as they dreaded punishment from the Chinese, who had severely punished some persons guilty on a previous occasion of selling provisions and furnishing beasts of burden to Russians.

On reaching the Afghan territory in the valley of the Oxus they engaged some yak herdsmen to take their baggage to Kundjut by the valley of Taskrupruk. But on the fourth night the herdsmen left them. They found the pass was not practicable, and had to retrace their steps, leaving behind their baggage, and losing five more horses. A caravan came up, and for f.300 offered to take their baggage to the nearest Afghan village. The travellers arrived there, but the inhabitants detained them for four days, and they had to escape without a guide, and make their way as they best could to Chitral. At Mastoudj, their horses being exhausted, they had to stop. They were threatened with death, but after a deal of talking it was agreed that two of their party, MM. Capus and Pepin, should visit the chief at Chitral. There they were arrested, and threatened. In the meantime, however, their letters had reached the Indian Government, and they were set at liberty. In his last letter, dated Gilghit, July 23, M. Bonvalot says that till they reached the Cashmere frontier they could only obtain porters and horses by using the stick and the revolver. On the 3rd they arrived on English territory, and their troubles were at an end.

LAUNCH OF THE "OCEANA."—The Oceana, the third of the additions to the Peninsular and Oriental Company's already large fleet, was launched from Messrs. Harland and Wolff's yard at Belfast last Saturday. Her dimensions are—length, 483ft.; breadth, 52ft.; and depth, 37ft. She will register nearly 7,000 tons, and her triple expansion engines are expected to develop 7,000 effective horse-power, which should drive her 17 knots at full speed. In addition to the Oceana the Peninsular and Oriental Company are also building at Belfast the Arcadia, of nearly 7,000 tons. These steamers are being constructed for the India, China, and Australian mail services of the company.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

FOOD ADULTERATION AND ITS DETECTION.*

Few technical subjects possess more general interest than the adulteration of food. It is a matter which, in some shape or form, appeals to every member of the human family. All eat, but how many of us know what we eat? Dr. Battershall's work will therefore be welcomed in many a family anxious to learn somewhat of the articles of daily consumption which are flaunted in every shape as "pure and unadulterated." And what a curious array of facts the reader will find! Bread full of alum; butter containing no butter; cheese partly lard, oleomargine, and cotton-seed oil; cocoa and chocolate little more than sugar, starch, and flour; coffee overpowered with chicory, peas, rye, corn, and colouring matter; honey mixed with glucose syrups; milk, of course, half water; olive oil made from cotton-seed; tea, our old familiar friend, often nought but exhausted leaves, foreign leaves, indigo, Prussian blue, gypsum, soap-stone, and sand; wine diluted with water, spirits, coal-tar, and a heap of other mixtures.

It were devoutly to be wished that legislation in some instances followed the lines of procedure current in the fifteenth century in Germany, when a wine "sophisticator" on the Rhine was forced to drink six quarts of his own stock, with fatal results. But the Continent seems famous for its adulterations, and we are told of another case, which happened not many years since, when a manufacturer of wine at Rheims received for his champagne a high reputation, on account of its exhilarating effects; no wonder, for "laughing gas" formed one of the ingredients of the delectable compound. As, however, heroic legislation is not in the ascendant in this country, it is at least advisable that knowledge should spread as to the nature of adulterations, and Dr. Battershall's work is admirably calculated to ensure the result. First he tells the reader what each and every article of food ought to be, and then proceeds to explain what it often is. The uninitiated will find much to learn, and the expert may also pick up many a hint. It is a pleasure and a duty to call attention to a volume replete with information, and admirably suited for the purpose which its talented author had in view.

HUNGARY IN ANCIENT, MEDIÆVAL, AND MODERN TIMES.†

It seems strange that the first story of Hungary written in English should be the work of a foreigner in the person of Professor Vambéry, long known to fame as one of the greatest writers of modern times on matters connected with the "Central Asian" problem. This is the first occasion on which he has appeared before the public as a historian, and we venture to think the verdict on his attempt will be highly favourable. As to contents there is little fault to be found; the narrative is full, clear, and connected, and we have not succeeded in tracing more than a single error. At one page it is stated that King Matthias "died without leaving a son," while at another place it is asserted that John Corvinus was "the son of King Matthias." But slips of this nature are inevitable in every literary undertaking. As regards style it may safely be asserted that few Englishmen could write their own mother tongue with greater freedom or elegance, and yet M. Vambéry is a Hungarian. The language of this country is an acquired tongue. Ex une disce omnes. It may well be supposed that the learned Professor has a great facility in mastering foreign dialects, hence his repute as one of the first living Orientalists of modern times.

In these days, when the Eastern Question embraces pretty nearly every nationality in the continent of Europe, it cannot be otherwise than desirable that all educated people should study the ethnography of the various regions drawn into the mighty vortex of discord and strife, and for this purpose M. Vambéry's volume is in every way suitable. It tells enough, and not too much. The story is interesting at times graphic, and Hungary stands forth as a land of heroes, an empire of warriors.

LADY BURTON'S EDITION OF THE ARABIAN NIGHTS.‡

The fifth volume of Lady Burton's edition of her husband's "Arabian Nights" contains some exquisite tales of Eastern life. The palm should, in our opinion, be given to Khalifah, the Fisherman of Baghdad; the humour of the scene where he mistakes the Caliph for a common thief is inimitable. Little, if any, less charming and attractive is the tale of Masrur and Zayn-al-Mawasif, the latter a woman so lovely that not a soul could see her without conceiving admiration for a creature so exquisite, a daughter of Eve so absolutely perfect in symmetry and shape. No one escaped her meshes. She had occasion to appeal to the magistrates for justice, whereupon all four sedate members of the law, losing self restraint, fell at her knees in admiration and astonishment, each in ignorance that the remaining three were in like plight. She visited a priory occupied by a monk and forty followers; the head man falling in love with her sent a messenger from amongst his devotees with sweet tokens of affection; but each in turn sought her for himself, and so on till the whole two-score had been ensnared.

There are also some fine specimens—the finest yet given in these volumes—of the rhythmical sentences, one of the many charms of the rich and glowing Arabic language. One sample will suffice:—"My wife hath the fairest face and a form all grace: smooth is she of cheeks, with eyes of liquid light, arms plump to sight, teeth snowy white, with dulcet voice dight: in speech soft and bland as she were a willow wand, her gifts are a moral, and lips are red as coral: her eyes wear natural Kohl-dye, and her sides in softness lie." Even from an English point of view this is fine language and sweet diction.

We gladly welcome this further instalment of Eastern pictures, and congratulate Lady Burton upon the successful progress of her labours.

THE ALLIANCE BANK.—In submitting to the proprietors the balance-sheet and profit and loss statement for the half-year, the directors of the Alliance Bank of Simla draw attention to the satisfactory progress made. The working capital of the Bank, which on the 31st December, 1886, stood at Rs. 53,22,000, amounted on 30th June, 1887, to Rs. 58,25,800. The increase has, therefore, been Rs. 5,03,800. The gross earnings, including a small balance brought forward, amounted to Rs 2,19,539-3-4. Deducting therefrom depositors' interests Rs. 93,820-11-7 and working and other expenses Rs. 65,417-9-2, there remained a net sum of Rs. 60,300-14-7. This result equals a net profit of over 24 per cent. per annum on the Bank's capital. The amount has been disposed of as follows:—(1). To dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, Rs. 25,000; (2) to reserve fund, raising that fund to Rs 2,30,000, Rs. 20,000; (3) to bad and doubtful debt fund, Rs. 10,000; (4) carried forward to next account, Rs. 5,300-14-7.

THE Bombay Gazette says that whatever may have been the experiences of his Highness Holkar during his tour in Europe, Sir Pertab Singh, who has returned to India, thoroughly enjoyed himself, and cordially acknowledges that he was most hospitably received in London and elsewhere. He visited Cairo, Constantinople, Vienna, and Paris. At Constantinople he was present at the procession of the Sultan to the mosque, the occasion being marked by the presence in the streets of a large number of Turkish troops. In Vienna he was fortunate in the time of his visit, which enabled him to see a review of some thirty thousand Austrian soldiers. With England he was best pleased, for he was everywhere welcomed, and to his great pleasure he found that he was welcomed on a footing of equality. It was perhaps fortunate for him that he was not encumbered with the susceptibilities which a reigning prince, jealously on the watch for any semblance of forgetfulness of his status, cannot always subordinate to the desire to enjoy the passing moment. When Sir Pertab cantered in Hyde Park he was honoured by the applause of little boys, who called out to him, "Well done, Merry Hampton!" and "Bravo, Archer!" in a way that amused him much, and did not offend him in the least. At Windsor he was very graciously received by Her Majesty, whose hand he kissed. Another distinguished Indian personage, when the Royal hand was extended to him for the usual homage, misunderstood the ceremony, and shook hands with the Queen-Empress very heartily. Sir Pertab knew better; in this as in other trifles conforming himself to Western usages. He was much helped by the genial and experienced Captain Bruce Hamilton, who accompanied him everywhere. The Rao of Cutch and Sir Pertab were, according to the consensus of those who saw most of the Indian notabilities, the most personally popular of them all, their pleasant manners and desire to please being aided perhaps a little by the handsome costumes which they had the good taste and good sense to wear. Some of the Indian visitors made the mistake of taking literally the assertions so mendaciously made that the European eye likes plainness and abhors colour. Neither his Highness the Rao nor Sir Pertab would have been subjected in the French capital to the experience of a distinguished countryman of theirs who asked his interpreter, "What is 'quelle bête?' A lady passing in her carriage looked at me and said 'quelle bête?' What did she mean?" The interpreter told a lie on the spot, said the lady spoke German, and he supposed "quelle bête" was Teutonic for a Prince from India. When travelling in foreign parts it is well to remember that the apparel oft proclaims the man.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THE NATIVE PRESS.

THE attention of the Government of India has, it is said, been again called to the tone of the Native Press in persistently vilifying Government measures and Government officials. The Pioneer, which is (rightly or wrongly) credited with inspiration from "high latitudes," is reported to have published an article commenting in strong terms upon this matter, pointing out that every endeavour is made by the Native Press to render the masses disloyal, and at the same time to intimidate Government officers, both European and Native, by gross personal abuse, so as to render the honest and independent discharge of duties a matter of constant difficulty, especially in those cases where local interests are antagonistic, and the article urges that Government should interfere. The complaint is no now one. We have frequently in these columns touched upon the same subject, but we have not suggested the same remedy. The writings to which the Allahabad journal refers are doubtless those which find publicity in the columns of the vernacular papers of lower Bengal, where the young Native gentlemen who have graduated at the Calcutta University display their gratitude to the Paramount Power for the education they have obtained by doing all they can to misrepresent the motives of English officials, and to bring English rule, if possible, into contempt. We have only ourselves to thank for the result of a foolish and vicious system of education, which has produced this Frankenstein horror. What was going to be the outcome of that system of shams which the Calcutta University and its Vice-Chancellors so carefully fostered was prophesied long ago, but the prophets were treated as Cassandras, and the budding Bengali Babú was told by those in authority in an annual speech on the day of conferring degrees that he was on a royal road to learning, and was eating wisely and well of the fruit of the tree of knowledge. It would be an interesting study of shams to compile together the speeches of the several Vice-Chancellors who have once a year acted as the guides, philosophers, and friends of the youth of Bengal who condescended to accept an English system of education. The result of the platitudes and flattery told to these apt scholars is to be found in the tone of the Native journals of Bengal to-day. "It matters not," wrote Sir Lepel Griffin lately, "how honourable the intentions or how pure the policy of the Government may be, for this infamous portion of the vernacular Press to denounce it as brutal, selfish and wicked. No distinction in the public service, no magnanimity of character or nobility of life can secure a public servant against the scurrilous attacks of these journalists of the gutter." This is true, and pity 'tis 'tis true; but Sir Lepel, like ourselves, does not hold with the English editor in India that Government should put down these newspapers. That such liberty should not have been allowed to the Native Press from its commencement is a question on which it might not be difficult to form an opinion now, only it is too late to do so. The situation must be accepted, but is there no remedy? Certainly there is. And it cannot be told botter than in Sir Lepel Griffin's own words, taken from his article on "The Public Service of India" in last April's Asiatic Quarterly. He says:—"I would not interfere with any criticism of the Government or its policy which could with any reasonable presumption be held to be honest, and I would freely permit comment which would subject the editor in Germany or Russia to instant imprisonment or banishment for life to the quicksilver mines of Siberia. What the Government should do and what, being a strong Government, it is its duty to do, is to protect its officers against false and libellous attack, and to prosecute and punish with the utmost severity the editors who, for personal or venal motives, insert malicious libels on officials in their columns." Let this remedy be tried without fear or hesitation. The result will be satisfactory.

RIOT BY ELEPHANTS.

"One of the oldest Planters of the Peermaad district," Madras has suffered from one of the newest forms of burglary and dacoity yet reported. He and his wife were in camp. They left their tents unguarded for a time, and elephants came and danced among their gear:—

"As the Monsoon had fairly set in, we decided on leaving our hot-weather camp on Saturday; but, as the coolies for our loads did not turn up in time, we were obliged to wait till the following day, and, even then, had to leave behind some 17 loads, consisting of furniture, crockery, books, clothes, &c., &c., As on previous occasions we had left a whole lot of our things all through the Monsoon and had, on our return months afterwards, found them all right, we felt no anxiety at leaving these things, especially as we intended sending for them in a few days. It took us about a week to settle down comfortably after reaching the 'Tote,' but, as we found we had left behind, in one of the boxes, something that was urgently required, we sent a cooly off to get it; and, on his return in the evening, heard, to our intense disgust, that our camp had been simply wrecked by elephants. Every box had been smashed to pieces, and the contents strewn all over the place; books, papers, clothes, all helplessly ruined; coir mats torn into shreds; crockery smashed to bits; buckets, copper pots, &c., trampled out of all shape! Our kerosine cooking stove had evidently afforded the brutes much amusement; the door of the oven was found about 100 yards off; the lamps minus two of the wicks, which had apparently been reserved as a bonne bouche; and the rest of the stove almost unrecognisable. Bits of tables, a dinner wagon, chairs, all over the shop! In fact, out of the whole of the things left behind, we have only recovered two or three bits of the children's clothes, a sleeve of one of my coats, an odd sock or two, a few partially-eaten books, a pair of boots considerably damaged, and an iron cot! I fancy it will make a big hole in 500 Rs. to make good our losses. Our buildings—only grass huts it is true—had been simply levelled, an odd part or two only remaining upright. I have good reasons for believing that two well-known tuskers, who have been doing a lot of damage lately in the neighbourhood, are at the bottom of all this; for some of the Hill men have brought me in some bits of clothes and a half-digested bag of wools, which they found in a jungle about ten miles from our camp, and in the tracks of the well-known pair. The bag and the wool I intend keeping as a curiosity. One of these elephants is reported to have an enormous pair of tusks, and I live in hopes of yet coming across him, and if successful in bagging him, and if the Government—so well known for its liberality—would only present me with the tusks, I would not grudge the mischievous brutes any enjoyment they may have had while playing football with my belongings, and having a big feed off our clothes, books, and coir mats. I have reported the matter to the dewan, and hope the Government will offer a reward for their destruction; as apart from my own losses, the cultivators in the neighbourhood are making lamentations, loud and deep, at the losses they periodically suffer from these mischievous and dangerous brutes. It is rather a curious coincidence that in February, on the Indian Jubilee Day, we were first nearly blown, and then burnt, out of our huts; and now, in June, the pucka Jubilee month, we have met with this further misfortune."

WHEN it is seen Sir West Ridgeway has over six years in the rank of lieut.-colonel, his recent special promotion to the rank of colonel in the army would not appear at first sight a very great boon. As his service in the rank of lieut.-colonel has been passed entirely in the political department he has not, however, had the opportunity of qualifying for the rank to which he has now been specially gazetted.

Miscellaneous.

THE value of silver fell away early in the week with declining Indian Exchanges to 44¾ l., but after a favourable allotment of Council Bills, and the announcement that the amount offered for tender this week would be only 15 lakhs, the price improved, and the closing price is 44⅞ l. Mexican dollars have been disposed of at 43⅞d., and subsequently at 43 13-16d. There are no supplies now to hand. The P. and O. steamer Rohilla left Gravesend Thursday with £286,772 in bullion and specie, including £74,400 for Penang and £1,372 for Shanghai in dollars.

THE Indian Banks had agreed to abandon the limit of two months, in quoting in London for forward business on the East. This decision has been given force to during the current week.

THE increase in the exports of yarn spun in Bombay from India to China and Japan is going on very rapidly, as will be seen from the latest statistics published by the Department of Finance and Commerce at Calcutta :—

THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE PRESENTS.—The numerous and valuable presents offered to the Queen by the members of her family, foreign potentates, and loyal subjects in every part of the world, have been arranged in the State Apartments of St. James's Palace, where they are now on view to the public. The exhibition is in charge of the Lord Chamberlain, and his officers have been busily employed for a week in displaying the various objects in the rooms usually devoted to levees and drawing-rooms. The collection is to be on view for three months. Most of the articles are displayed in cases, from South Kensington, the same that were used in the late Indian and Colonial Exhibition. The gifts on view comprise some 300 articles, and fill five large rooms. They include examples of every form of art, trade, and manufacture, many being of extreme value, especially those given by the Indian princes. One room is entirely devoted to the gifts of the Maharajah of Travancore and the Thakore of Morvi, the ormer sending two magnificent specimens of elephants' tusks, five eet long, mounted on an ebony stand, while the latter offers a orgeous suit of horse trappings in red and green leather, heavily tudded with gold, silver, and precious stones. The Maharajah Holkar, of Indore, sends four exquisitely-finished Chowries, two in sandal wood and two in ivory, while the Rao of Cutch gives an elegant pair of six light candelabra in solid silver. Amongst the most important of the other Indian gifts are a very handsome carved ivory casket from the Maharajah of Kuch Behar, a set of silver vases, candlesticks, and boxes from Nawab Osman-Jah-Bahadur, a silver vase and cover in oak case from the Thakore Sahib of Sondal, a very exquisitely ornamented silver plate from Syud Gazunfer-Ali-Khan of Lucknow, two silver jugs and a pair of cups from the Thakore of Limri, a silver casket from Nawab Babi of Batisinord, and a portrait of the Maharanee of Travancore from the Maharajah. Among the gifts from the members of the Royal Family and foreign princes the most important are a very richly chased silver plateau, consisting of a large vase and cover, supported by figures of a lion and unicorn, made from designs by the Crown Princess of Germany, the gift of the children and grandchildren of the Queen ; a very fine oil painting (Italian school) of the Laguna of Chioggia from the Prince and Princess of Wales, a bas relief in profile of the Emperor and Empress of Germany in marble, a silver vase and cover from the King of the Belgians, and one of somewhat similar design in china from the King and Queen of Denmark, a handsome pair of chased silver gilt flagons with the names of the donors, and the dates 1837—1887, from the Duke of Cambridge and members of the Cumberland family ; a gold bangle set with sapphires and diamonds, from the Prince of Leiningen ; an exquisite necklace and earrings of quaint design and remarkable workmanship, from the Khedive of Egypt ; a plateau and sugar basin in silver gilt, from the Prince and Princess of Waldeck-Pyrmont ; a rare mosaic, representing the figure of "Poetry," from his Holiness the Pope ; a curious monogram made of feathers of the Doo bird, from the Queen of Hawaii, and a very handsome and quaint mother-of-pearl brooch from the Queen of Madagascar. The ex-Empress Eugénie sends a picture of Ophelia in oils by Herbert, and the officers and ladies of Her Majesty's Household very handsome centre-piece in polished steel, set with gold and silver ; while the servants of Her Majesty's Household, past and present, give thirteen silver dishes. Among the more notable presents of the aristocracy are a portrait of Lord Salisbury by George Richmond, R.A., presented by the noble marquis ; a round locket in red and enamel, set with a miniature of Queen Elizabeth, from the Earl and Countess of Rosebery ; a very large centre bowl jardinière, standing on claw feet, from Lord and Lady Rothschild ; an old ivory fan, from Lady Holland ; eighteen photographs of Roslyn Chapel, from the Countess of Rosslyn ; a blue silk pillow, from Lady Dunbar ; an exquisitely-painted miniature, from Lord Rowton ; and an illuminated card, done by herself in her ninety-second year, from the Dowager Lady de Ros. Among the many objects of striking interest in this unique and historic collection we may briefly mention the exquisitely-finished gold casket made from 30 ounces of fine gold nuggets found in West Africa, the gift of the Governor of the Gold Coast colony ; a magnificent pair of white ostrich feather screens, six feet high, from the Government of the Cape ; a water-colour painting by Werner, representing the presentation of Prince Henry of Prussia and the Princess Irene of Hesse to the Emperor of Germany on his ninetieth birthday, from the German residents of Great Britain ; three water-colour drawings by M. Chevalier, representing "Morning, Kensington Palace," "Afternoon, Buckingham Palace," "Evening, Windsor Castle," from the artist ; an embroidered quilt from the women of Macclesfield ; two vases and plaque of Crown Derby china, the panels containing heads allegorical of painting, sculpture, poetry, and music, the centre of plaque containing a bust of the Queen, from the ladies of Derby ; a footstool, from the Children's Theatrical Mission ; a portrait in oils of Lord John Manners, from Miss Victoria Manners ; and among other miscellaneous objects sent anonymously, a grey woollen shawl, a white silk handkerchief, a crimson silk pin-cushion, and a pair of red worsted stockings. In addition the throne room and exit corridors are nearly filled with jubilee addresses, odes, pieces of music, and publications of various kinds issued in honour of the conclusion of the fiftieth year of Her Majesty's reign. They include much that is interesting, notably the tributes from the women of Great Britain and Ireland, the one containing three million signatures, the other over 150,000. The addresses, most of which are beautifuly emblazoned and illuminated, comprise testimonials of loyalty from well-nigh every town in the United Kingdom. Among tributes from more distant lands are to be found addresses from the inhabitants of Boston, United States, the ladies of Tasmania, the women of Ceylon, the inhabitants of Queensland and Brisbane, the members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, the Maltese nobility, the British subjects in Austria, the people of British Columbia, the Begums of Madras, the Khan of Nagpura, the residents of the town of Niagara, and the inhabitants of Nourgong. A voluminous address is also in evidence from the loyal citizens of Dublin.

A MOST regrettable incident has, according to a correspondent of the Lahore paper, just taken place at the United Service Club, Allahabad, which will be likely to lead to a good deal of unpleasantness. It appears that a young departmental officer, not long in the country, and against whom there could be no possible ill-feeling, was put up for membership, and black-balled by a small clique led by a military officer, who openly stated in the club he would have the departmental officer in question rejected. The matter has been very warmly taken up, and all those who voted for the young officer's admission have come forward and said that they did so ; so the names of those put in the black balls are thus identified. The matter has been reported officially to Sir Thomas Baker, who commands the Division, and the conduct of the officer who led the clique has been made known to him. The Club Committee has also taken the matter up, and it is believed the candidate in question will be either elected by the committee or put up for ballot again at once. Incidents of this nature are happily rare in this country, and when they take place they should be repressed with firmness, or all good fellowship among officers of the different services must come to an end.

THE Pioneer says that a "distinguished and lately-decorated ex-member of the Punjab Commission, who always flies at pretty high game, having not long back applied to the India Office for the succession to Sir Theodore Hope, as Public Works Minister, was informed that no decision had yet been come to about filling up the appointment. Within forty-eight hours the Times came out with the news of Sir Charles Elliott's selection."

HIGHLAND REGIMENTS IN INDIAN STATIONS.—A "Suffering Highland Laddie" writes:—"Highland regiments in Indian stations are not fairly dealt with. When regiments are sent to tropical climates each man is served out with six suits of white cotton clothing for the first two years' wear, and three suits annually. Highlanders would like to know what white clothing is served out to the troops, for as it is very seldom used, for every parade is done in the kilt—even a portion of guards are performed in the kilt. It is now the hot weather coming, with heat averaging from 70 to 130 degrees, which is not at all pleasant; but the poor Highlander, who has been used to the snow and ices of his native heath, has to parade at six A.M. and five P.M. on every day in the week, except Saturday and Sunday, with the thick kilt, which consists of five yards of tartan wrapped round his loins. It is becoming injurious to the health of the soldiers, who commence to feel the heat very oppressive. All men sent out to regiments are trained soldiers; it is very hard for them to have the same old drill over and over again, from Monday morning to Friday night (like a squad of recruits). If it was any new drill it would be different—every day manual and bayonet exercises! What would be more useful and interesting to the men is field works and skirmishing, which we never hardly get, but which is most needed for active service."

A QUESTION was recently raised in the Madras Presidency as to whether an officer of the Indian Medical Service in receipt of a good service pension should be required to forfeit this if he accepts the "special pension" created last year as a compensation for the withdrawal of the rank and privileges of a deputy surgeon-general, hitherto conferred on officers of the Indian Medical Service holding the appointment of sanitary commissioner. The question was raised in reference to a brigade surgeon; but it might conceivably affect also officers of the rank of surgeon-major or deputy surgeon-general, and, as retired officers are not altogether ineligible for the good service pension, it might also be asked whether an officer of the Indian Medical Service, who has already obtained the "special pension" on retirement, must be considered eligible or otherwise for the good service pension. The Secretary of State has now decided that there is nothing in the letter or spirit of the rules affecting the grant of good service pension, nor in the conditions under which the "special pension" of £130 a year was created, which should prevent a medical officer holding both pensions simultaneously.

THE constitution of the late expeditionary force to Burma, which will henceforth rank as a divisional command, with Sir George S. White as its present head, is to consist, until further orders, of four brigades, under the respective commands of Brigadier-Generals G. B. Wolseley, C.B.; A. T. Cox, Madras Staff Corps; Henry Collett, C.B., Bengal Staff Corps; and R. C. Low, C.B., Bengal Cavalry. It will thus be seen that three out of the four brigades are reserved for officers of the Indian army, an arrangement that we presume should meet with general approval. A "Queen's officer," in Colonel A. B. Morgan, C.B., late of the Norfolk Regiment, remains in Burma as Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, his department being completed with the following officers, viz., Captains A. W. L. Bayly, Bombay Staff Corps; G. H. More-Molyneux, Bengal Staff Corps; S. A. Hickson, Royal Engineers; R. L. Milne, D.S.O., Liverpool Regiment; R. A. Pearson, Bombay Staff Corps; and B. E. Spragge, Yorkshire Light Infantry.

THE BOLARUM CHAPLAINCY.—The Bishop of Madras has appointed the Rev. H. C. Parker, M.A., acting Chaplain of Bolarum, to the vacant incumebncy of Mysore, with charge of the Chaplaincy of Mercara. The Rev. W. Scott, B.A., who has just returned from a two years' furlough to Europe, has been nominated to fill Mr. Parker's place. Mr. Scott has been promoted to the rank of Senior Chaplain since he went on leave.

MEDICAL ATTENDANCE ON UNEMPLOYED OFFICERS.—It has been ruled that officers who have been transferred to the Unemployed Supernumerary List, and who reside in India for their own convenience, cease to have a claim to a medical attendance gratis for themselves and their families.

THE BETHUNE SCHOOL.—The undermentioned gentlemen are appointed to be members of the Committee of Management of the Bethune School, Calcutta:—The Hon. Mr. Justice L. R. Tottenham, Judge of the High Court, Calcutta; the Hon. Mr. Justice J. F. Norris, Judge of the High Court, Calcutta; the Hon. Raja Peary Mohan Mukerji; Dr. Prasunno Coomar Ray, Registrar, Calcutta University; Babu Umesh Chunder Dutt, and Mr. J. Ghosal.

OBITUARY.

GENERAL SIR JOHN DOUGLAS.—The death is announced of General Sir John Douglas, G.C.B., of Glenfinart, Argyleshire, which happened on the 8th inst. at Ardentinny, on Loch Long, after a brief illness. He was a son of the late Lieut.-General Sir Neill Douglas, K.C.B., by his marriage with Barbara, daughter of Mr. George Robertson, and was born in 1817. He was educated at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, and obtained his first commission in 1833. He commanded the 79th Highlanders in the Crimean campaigns of 1854-56, and also in the Indian Mutiny of 1857-59, and for each had received the medal, and had been publicly thanked in the despatches sent home. He subsequently held for some years the command of the forces in North Britain. He was made a Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath in 1859, and promoted to the Grand Cross of that Order in 1877. He was also a Magistrate and Deputy-Lieutenant for Argyleshire. Sir John Douglas married in 1843 the Lady Elizabeth Cathcart, daughter of the second Earl Cathcart, who survives as his widow. His eldest son, Captain Neill Cecil Frederick Douglas, of the Grenadier Guards, died in the early part of the present year.

GENERAL DAVID SIMPSON.—General David Simpson, late of Her Majesty's Bengal Army, who died on the 1st inst. at Harrogate, was the youngest son of the late Mr. David Simpson, of Teviotbank, Roxburghshire. He entered the army in August, 1819, and afterwards served in command of a force against the rebels in the hills north of Jullundur in 1848 and 1849, and was present at the storming of the heights of Umb and the subsequent occupation of the fort of Oonah. For his services he received a medal with clasps.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL HERBERT LIONEL GWYN.—Lieutenant-Colonel Herbert Lionel Gwyn, Royal Artillery, who died on the 1st inst. at St. Aubyn's, West Brighton, aged forty-eight, entered the army in December, 1857, and afterwards served in India with the Okamundel field force, and was present at the capture of the fort of Beyt and the siege and fall of Dwarka. He served with the column under Brigadier-General Ross, in command of No. 3 Battery, 5th Brigade, throughout the operations in Perak in 1875 and 1877. He received for his services a medal with clasp.

MAJOR EVANS BELL.—Major Thomas Evans Bell, the well-known writer on Indian questions, died on Monday morning last, after a somewhat long and painful illness, at 9, Addison-road, aged sixty-two years. A meeting of Anglo-Indians and Natives of India was held a few weeks ago at the Westminster Palace Hotel to express sympathy with Major Evans Bell, and to thank him on behalf of the Princes and the people of our Eastern possessions for his valuable and disinterested services on their behalf. His writings in defence of the rights of Indian Princes and against annexations of territory, earned for him a well-deserved reputation as the friend of those Princes amongst whom the late Maharaja of Myene and the late Maharaja Holkar, were not the least who were indebted to the persistent energy of his pen. We did not always hold the same opinions as the writer in regard to several questions of Indian polity, but we agree in the eulogy which one who evidently knew him intimately has given to the Press that "there was plenty of the true Englishman in Evans Bell to afford scope for the generous recognition of an opponent." His sad and untimely death, owing to a cruel malady, will be heard of with unfeigned regret in India amongst his many friends, Native and European, there; and his loss will be mourned by a large circle of friends in England who recognised his thoroughness of purpose, his uprightness of character, and his kindliness of heart.

MAJOR-GENERAL W. J. F. STAFFORD, C.B., late Bengal Staff Corps, died last week. He served throughout the Indian Mutiny campaign in 1857-58, and during the China expedition of 1860-62, when he commanded the 11th Punjab Infantry throughout the operations against the Taeping rebels in the vicinity of Shanghai in 1862, including capture of stockades on April 4, capture of stockaded village of Tserpoo, stockades near Nanksiang, capture by escalade of the walled towns of Kading, Tsinpoo, Najow, and Cholin, and repulse of a very superior force on May 25; commanded a mixed force at the relief of Tsinpoo. He also served throughout the Looshai campaign of 1871-72. He was frequently mentioned in despatches for his gallantry in the field, was created a Companion of the Bath in 1872, and retired from the Service in 1878.

SIR PERTAB SINGH has been interviewed by a representative of the Times of India. He said he was greatly pleased with the trip to England. Kindness was shown to him by the Queen, the Prince of Wales, and the nobility. He was most favourably impressed with what he saw during the Jubilee celebration. The arrangements were perfect, and everything went off as merry as a marriage bell. As far as he was aware no Indian Prince was insulted; the authorities did all in their power for their comfort. With regard to Holkar he was very reticent, remarking that Holkar had his own views. In certain matters he was, however, so pleased with the treatment that he intended visiting England again next year.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to an Indian contemporary:—In the distribution of honours for the Queen-Empress's Jubilee, few can have failed to notice the entire exclusion of the family of that amiable gentleman and gallant and able officer, Lieut.-General Sir Herbert T. Macpherson, K.C.B., late Commander-in-Chief in Madras, and Commanding-in-Chief in Burma, to which country he was specially deputed on account of his military abilities, for the purpose of completing the subjugation of Northern Burma, and the suppression of the broken bands of Burmese soldiery and patriots, miscalled "dacoits" by the Indian Government. If our worthy Commander-in-Chief, Sir Frederick Roberts, is to be raised to the peerage for his share in the settlement of Burma (an honour I am sure no one grudges to him), surely a baronetcy should be given to the eldest son of the late lamented Sir Herbert Macpherson; for it ought to be taken into consideration that Sir Herbert lost his life on active service as a commander-in-chief; and there is not the slightest doubt that, if he had lived, he would have received an hereditary title. I would urge still further, that not only should the title of baronet be given to his eldest son, but that a pension of £1,000 per annum should be given to his widow for the natural period of her life, and a like sum to his eldest son, in the same way it was awarded to Sir Henry Havelock's family in 1857. There are few soldiers who have been so deservedly decorated as Sir Herbert Macpherson.

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

AND

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING COMPANY'S

SYSTEMS OF

HEATING, COOLING, VENTILATING, AND ELECTRIC LIGHTING

ARE THE CHEAPEST AND BEST.

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great; as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

38, Grainger Street, West, Newcastle on-Tyne

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

(Signed) LAMB AND ARMSTRONG, Architects.

MANUAL OF COLLOQUIAL ARABIC.

COMPRISING PRACTICAL RULES FOR LEARNING THE LANGUAGE, VOCABULARY, DIALOGUE, LETTERS, AND IDIOMS, &c., IN ENGLISH AND ARABIC.

BY

Rev. ANTON TIEN, Ph.D., M.R.A.S.,

Hon. Curate of Holy Trinity, Milton-next-Gravesend; Medallist of the Roman University de Propaganda Fide; First Class Honour Man in Arabic, Syriac, and Hebrew; and Proxime Accessit in Classics. Formerly First Class Interpreter to the Allied Forces in the Crimea; K.C. of the Order of the Medjidie, &c., &c.; Author of the "Levant Interpreter" and the "Egyptian Handbook"; and Reviser of the Arabic Prayer Book, &c., &c.

"Dr. Tien's little book will be found a valuable guide to the traveller who wishes not so much to talk as to understand what he hears spoken and sees written in common Arabic. In the course of a hundred pages a clever summary is provided of Arabic grammar, which will be found sufficient for all ordinary purposes, and which may easily be made the subject of further instruction from the native teacher."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"The most useful portion of the book consists of the dialogues, the idiomatic exercises, the vocabulary, and other additions of practical usefulness, such as lists of official titles, of tribal names, and information on the divisions of time, on weights and measures, currency, and commercial, legal, and political terms."—ATHENÆUM.

"The perusal of Dr. Tien's admirable work will be of the greatest value to officers and others under orders for the East."—MORNING POST.

"Will be found very useful by soldiers, officials, students, and merchants desirous of obtaining a certain degree of proficiency in the spoken language, which is becoming in those days of increasing importance."—DAILY NEWS.

"Dr. Tien's Manual can be confidently recommended as the most simple, practical, and trustworthy guide which has yet appeared."—OVERLAND MAIL.

"The rules and explanations are clear, terse, and to the point, and we cordially recommend his book to all who wish to acquire a conversational knowledge of Arabic."—TRUBNER'S RECORD.

"The book is of a handy and convenient size, and both author and publishers have rendered important service in placing it within reach of students."—INDIAN DAILY NEWS.

"The author of the volume before us has done good service in compiling this Manual, in which the difficulties—and, it must be confessed, they are not a few—in mastering Arabic are reduced to a minimum."—BROAD ARROW.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1887.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 6th September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 4th September; and from Calcutta to the 3rd September.

LIEUT.-GENERAL HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G., &c., resumed Command of the Bombay Army at Aden on the 30th August, arriving in Bombay on Sept. 6.

THE Viceroy will spend a short time at the Cavalry Camp of exercise at Lawrencepur during the second week in November.

SIR OLIVER ST. JOHN has left for Haji Khan Killa for the purpose of interviewing the Ghilzai tribes who have fled from the Amir's territories.

THE Amir has expressed himself quite satisfied with the termination of the Boundary Question. He sees that the sacrifice of the strip of pasturage between the Kushk and the Murghab has saved an encroachment on the Oxus, which would have given Russia the domination of the Kilif Ferry and enabled her to command the Balk-Samarkand road.

ADVICES from Kabul, dated August 23rd, show that the Amir is at his country residence in the Pagman hills, and is perfectly well.

GENERAL WOLSELEY made a forced march with mounted men from Maymyo, fifty miles, on the 25th August, and captured the block houses of the dacoit Rao Moung at Loangthe and Kalagive, killed four men, captured twenty, and a quantity of arms, powder, lead, and provisions. Thebaw Sawbwan and Ram Sains' men were put in charge of the posts.

THE Afghan dinner was held at the United Service Club, Simla, on the 1st September, Sir Frederick Roberts presiding.

AT Choungwa on the 23rd August ten men of the 15th Madras Infantry, watching the food, were attacked; four of them were killed and six wounded, but the latter fought until relief came. Major Pooroosthmah repulsed the attack, killed eleven dacoits, and carried off our wounded and dead.

THE son of the Pakkan Prince, with twenty followers, was captured in Mandalay while plotting an insurrection, and is now lodged in jail.

THE probable reductions in the Burma garrison next spring will be ten regiments. The reliefs, as last year, will be in the country early in the cold weather, so as again to give a very large force to move about and undertake any operations that may be required.

IT is probable that the Burmo-Chinese frontier will be delimited in the course of next cold weather.

THE Government of India have taken up the question of making the English standard yard the standard measure of length in India. The opinions of local Governments have been asked.

A SERIOUS accident occurred on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway between Jeypore and Ajmere. A bridge pier and two girders subsided, and a goods train being precipitated into the river below, an European driver and Native fireman were killed.

SIR CHARLES SARGENT, Chief Justice, Bombay High Court, will proceed on three months' privilege leave in November.

LADY DUFFERIN has been presented with the Order of the Sun by the Persian Consul on behalf of the Shah.

IT is intended that Mr. D. Fitzpatrick shall succeed Sir Charles Elliot as Chief Commissioner of Assam.

SUBSCRIPTIONS to the Macgregor Memorial Fund now exceed Rs. 7,500.

QUARANTINE has been established at Goa, and passengers proceeding from Bombay are kept in the lazaretto, as a precautionary measure to check the introduction of cholera into that country.

THE net amount of India sea and land customs revenue, excluding the salt revenue, for the first four months of the current official year, was Rs. 3,900,000, as against Rs. 3,785,000 during the corresponding period of last year.

OVER seventeen thousand rupees have been collected among the British regiments of the Bengal Presidency for the Imperial Institute.

IT is understood that the scheme for extending the jurisdiction of the North-West High Court to Oudh will meet with no opposition at the India Office, and be left to the Government of India to carry out very much in its own way.

THE Maharaja Sir Takhtsingji is about to establish an institution for the blind, lame, and impotent of all castes and creeds at Bhownugger. It is also said the Maharaja contemplates establishing an asylum for lepers.

THE Bench of the Madras High Court will shortly be strengthened by the addition of another judge.

MR. J. H. E. HART is appointed Secretary to Government, in the Public Works Department.

A BOATING accident, resulting in the loss of three lives, occurred at Gorakpur on September 3. A party of five went on a boating excursion, and the boat capsized, with the result that Mr. Henderson, traffic superintendent, Mr. Rogers, locomotive superintendent, and a young lady named Cash were drowned.

THE Boundary Commission for marking out the revised border will assemble on the Afghan frontier on the 31st of October.

A SMALL escort of eighteen or twenty sowars, with a doctor and a Native surveyor, will be sent from India to join Major Peacock and Captain Yate by a route yet to be determined on.

A QUESTION having been raised whether an invalid officer is entitled to free medical attendance, the Government of India has decided that as an invalid officer is liable for the performance of garrison duties he does not come under the category of a pensioned officer, and is accordingly entitled to gratuitous medical attendance.

THE Bombay Medical Union have decided to represent to Government the strong necessity that exists for the passing of a Medical Registration Act for the town and island of Bombay.

OBITUARY.—Mr. Thomas Duncan, barrister-at-law, at Bombay.

THE Queen has been graciously pleased to confer the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath upon his Excellency Sir R. Morier, G.C.M.G., Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburg; a Companionship of the Bath upon Colonel Sir West Ridgeway, K.C.S.I.; and Companionships of the Order of St. Michael and St. George upon Captain A. Barrow and Captain F. de Laessöe, in recognition of their service in connection with the recent Afghan Frontier Convention.

AN order has been recently issued by the Government of India directing that all officers of the army in civil employ, for whom no political or special uniform is prescribed, should wear the uniform of the corps to which they belong when attending levées, drawing-rooms, and State ceremonials. On all other occasions they are to wear plain clothes.

NOTES.

ACCORDING to a Reuter's telegram dated Simla, Sept. 22, Ayoub Khan has been captured in Persian territory. This news, published in London three days ago, has not yet been confirmed, so it may be taken with the usual amount of salt required for the digestion of all news which is supposed to reach India from Persia or Afghanistan.

OF course the Indian papers received by the present mail are full of comments and conjectures concerning Ayoub's escape. The Pioneer says that the Indian Government may well protest against the bungling which has permitted the only dangerous rival of the Amir—Abdur Rahman—to slip away from Teheran, and against the waste of the thousands of pounds which have been paid to the Shah's Government for Ayoub's safe keeping. For several years past this money has been charged to the Indian Exchequer, and paid to the Shah, on the understanding that the Persian authorities would prevent Ayoub Khan from leaving Teheran without the knowledge and consent of the British Government. This arrangement would have expired at the end of this year, when the question of Ayoub's future was to have been re-considered. He has, however, taken "opportunity by the hand," and may yet give trouble.

IF he has been caught, as Reuter reports, it will be well to have him sent to India, to be under British surveillance. His taking refuge in Russian territory is not so likely to produce mischief as his presence would be in Afghanistan, for, as the Indian papers point out, should he be able to cross into the Herat Province or into Seistan his first aim would be to collect all the Afghan refugees now in Eastern Persia to his standard, and then to call upon his old adherents in Afghanistan itself to rise against the Ameer's authority. The revolt might not, as we have shown before, be successful, but the stirring up of strife in Afghanistan is a thing to be prevented if possible. Ayoub might make a better ruler than Abdur Rahman, but as the latter is the man in possession it is better that he should be allowed to remain so.

AN extraordinary rumour has got abroad in India that it is the intention of Her Majesty to pay a visit to that country. The Native Press have taken up the rumour as a fact, and indulge in much comment thereon. It is only just to the editors to say that the comments are all of a most loyal nature, and the Queen-Empress is assured that should she deign to pay a visit to "her remote dependency" she will receive from the millions of her Native subjects there a right royal hearty welcome.

THE news from Burma continues to be satisfactory, notwithstanding that a little dacoity still continues. It is said that the Burma-Chinese frontier will be delimited in the course of the coming cold weather, and it is hoped that an overland telegraph line linking India and China may soon be commenced, as our own telegraph is now at Bhamo, and the Chinese within some 300 miles of the frontier in that direction.

MADRAS has not yet been purged of its scandals. There is now a fresh one for the gossips to talk about. A Deputy Conservator of Forests is criminally prosecuting the Registrar of the Madras High Court—a member of the Civil Service—for adultery with his wife. This offence, which Lord Byron declares is much more common where the climate is sultry, is heavily punished under the Indian Penal Code. The lady in the present case has made a confession, but the co-respondent denies the charge, and insinuates that the prosecution is the result of a conspiracy. In the meantime the Madras papers regale their readers with full details.

BUT the Madras Press is particularly moral. It can at once detect a mote in its neighbour's eye. The Madras Times delivers itself of the following philippic concerning the tone of a certain London evening journal not unknown to notoriety:—

To the Englishman in India there are few things more distasteful than the dissemination in this country of a class of literature which, not so very many years ago, was supposed to be confined to the purlieus of St. Clement Danes Church in the Strand. And, even now, when such a widely-read newspaper as the Pall Mall Gazette has been pressed into the service of the propagation of garbage in foreign parts, the decent Anglo-Indian is irritated by the consciousness that it is competent to every English-reading native in India to find in the issues of the London Press, whether in journalistic or book form, material whereupon he may descant on the manners and customs of the English people at home. The social evils indicated by such an episode as the late notorious Cass case are about as wide spread as they can be even in the most extensive city the world has ever seen; and, no doubt, the enormous extent covered by the city has much to do with the enormous extent of the evils referred to. There is no use attempting to ignore what such an organ as the Gutter Gazette is doing its best to bring into prominence. All we can do is gravely to consider how far it is necessary for the Anglo-Indian journalist to allow judgment to go by default, and refrain from comment.

This is excellent, no doubt, only the advice given is the last thing which the Indian editor will think of following.

THE Commander-in-Chief has ordered that in future all pouch ammunition will be withdrawn from both British and Native troops. In the garrisons the ammunition will be kept in boxes in the barrack-rooms, the key being in the charge of the senior non-commissioned officer. Every sentinel, while on guard, will carry ten rounds, to be handed over from one sentry to another at each relief. On occasions when ball-cartridge is required for parades an issue of it will be made, and the unused cartridges collected after parade. In the case of the Native troops each company's ammunition will be kept in a box inside the bell of arms, or in a magazine, the key of which will be kept as before, and a duplicate key with the British orderly officer. Ammunition will be issued as before to men in camp or on the line of march.

THIS order has been issued, it is said, in consequence of certain attempts at murder which have been made by soldiers firing at a comrade or superior officer with their rifle ammunition, and the Press generally approves of the order. But surely it conveys something of a slight upon the whole army to hold that because a few scoundrels have committed a heinous crime the majority of soldiers in India cannot be trusted with balled ammunition. If the argument be carried out to its logical conclusion the rifles should be locked up too, for murder may be committed by giving a blow from the butt end or a prod from the bayonet. It does not seem to us wise to let the Natives think that British soldiers cannot be trusted with a cartridge, although we are aware that this is not the first time that such an order has been promulgated.

THE Horse Guards have represented to the Commander-in-Chief in India the difficulty experienced by them in the settlement of regimental debts of officers who proceed to England on duty or on leave, and who whilst at home retire by the sale of their commission. To prevent such inconvenience in future the Commander-in-Chief directs that, when forwarding leave or other papers of such officers to Army Headquarters, commanding officers are to certify that all regimental claims have been satisfied to date of departure. Upon this an Indian newspaper writes that the Commander-in-Chief should have added another sentence to the effect, "And the same is applicable to claims by tradesmen and others to whom such officers may be indebted." This, it is said, would be a "boon" to a great many tradesmen.

POSSIBLY it would, but it would be no boon to the Commander-in-Chief or the Military authorities to have to look after the debts and debtors in question. When a certain well-known bootmaker made a similar request to the Duke of Wellington the reply received was that "F.M. the Duke of Wellington is Commander-in-Chief of the Army but not Mr. Hoby's debt collector."—Verb. Sap

WE have been asked to remind our Indian friends who are survivors of the feat to be commemorated, that the annual Lucknow Dinner will be held at the Hotel Metropole on Monday next, when Lord Napier of Magdala will preside. "The Lucknow Dinner," says a contemporary, "is the Waterloo banquet of the Indian Mutiny."

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

REDISTRIBUTION OF COMMANDS.

(Pioneer.)

There can be no doubt that the time is more than ripe for the re istribution of divisional, brigade, and station commands in Upper India which the Government of India are recommending to the Secretary of State. The addition of some 30,000 men to the Army has, as we pointed out last year, resulted in raising the military importance of cantonments which formerly had but weak garrisons. We need only instance Ferozepore, which, at the present moment, has two batteries of Artillery, a British Infantry regiment, a Native Cavalry and a Native Infantry regiment, and yet is only a third-class Station Command. Cawnpore and Delhi have far smaller garrisons, and are yet first-class Station Commands Jullundur has now, with the exception of a garrison battery, a garrison similar to that of Allahabad. It is, however, commanded by the senior Colonel of the regiment in garrison, with one Staff Officer; while Allahabad, being the headquarters of a Division, has both a Divisional and a Station Staff. The improvement in communications by the extension of railways has caused many of the old military stations to sink into comparative unimportance, and it is extremely advisable, therefore, to redistribute the commands so as to secure a maximum of efficient administration in peace time and provide for rapid mobilisation when war breaks out. It is obvious that Jhansi, in a year or two, must become a most important cantonment, owing to the strategic advantages which it will have by being placed at the junction of four lines of railway, while the Saugor District Command will decrease, in a corresponding measure, in importance. Each of these are now first-class brigades, though in the Jhansi District, (or, as it is still called, the Gwalior District) there are now only one battery of Artillery, one British and one Native Infantry regiment; and in the Saugor District three batteries of Artillery, 1½ battalions of British Infantry, two regiments of Native Cavalry and Infantry, respectively. There must evidently be a change made here, for there is a waste of administrative strength in having two Brigade Generals within what is really one District. The anomaly, too, of Rawal Pindi with its Divisional and Brigade Staffs should not be allowed to remain. In fact, the redistribution scheme seems, on the face of it, one that has so many palpable advantages that it would be most impolitic to delay putting it into effect, particularly as it can be dovetailed into the general plan of mobilisation.

HEALTH OF THE SEPOYS IN BURMA.

(Times of India.)

There can be no doubt that Burma is an exceedingly trying country to campaign in for any length of time, par icularly for sepoys. The reason why sepoys fare worse than British soldiers in Burma is that the former do not thrive for long on rations unless the rations are supplemented by extra articles of diet. The British soldier in Burma gets his beef and beer, his bread, tea, and sugar, etc., as in India, whereas the ration of the sepoy, though exceedingly liberal as far as it goes, and including as it does good wheat-flour and ghee, lacks variety. As, of course, he will not eat tinned meats, and there are no sheep to speak of in Burma, it is found exceedingly difficult to give him the weekly meat ration to which he is entitled on field service; while he feels the total deprivation of milk a great hardship. Tea and sugar, which would be a great boon to him, especially in wet weather in the jungles, are not allowed by the regulations, which seems a pity, as a cup of hot tea after a day's exposure would do much to ward off the fever which prostrates so many of our sepoys, particularly at the present time of the year. The battalions which are leaving Burma just now must be accounted fortunate, as there is no doubt that during the next three months the jungles are at their worst. But with a well-organised medical department, and a plentiful supply of medicines, there is reason to hope that this year there will be much less sickness than there was last. And, in other respects, the whole outlook now, as compared with last year, is marvellously improved. Last rains matters were looking very gloomy. There were too few troops to do the work, and those few were still further reduced by sickness. Boh Shway and other less known leaders were active and defiant—they had a large following, and any marked success would have attracted thousands to their standards. Our troops could not move about the jungles without falling into an ambush, and in some instances they were actually besieged by the dacoits. Then the number of officers picked off in the desultory jungle fighting was a matter for anxiety, because there were already too few for duty, and it was difficult to fill up casualties. It was hoped that the arrival of Sir Herbert Macpherson would mark the turn of the tide in our favour, but his untimely death made matters appear more gloomy than ever, and not until the appearance of Sir Frederick Roberts on the scene can the horizon be said to have cleared. But now the change is really wonderful. Dogged English persistence has, as usual, overcome all obstacles, and almost every trace of effectual opposition to our arms have vanished. Boh Shway is in hiding in the Arracan Hills, and the lesser leaders are equally disheartened, and are hunted from pillar to post. The jungles are everywhere practicable, if not safe, and even the policy of ambushes appears to be given up. This change for the better has been brought about by several agencies, among which two are most noteworthy. These are cavalry and mounted infantry, both of which have done admirable work in Burma. The mounted infantry in particular has made the jungles too hot to hold the dacoits. Composed of picked men, mounted on stout, active ponies, and led by enterprising officers, this force has done wonders, and is still with untiring energy following up every trace of dacoits, and hunting them down like sleuth-hounds. To the mounted infantry is due a very large share of the credit for the present satisfactory state of things in Burma, and it is only fair that this fact should meet with fit acknowledgment.

INDEPENDENT GOVERNMENT.

(South of India Observer.)

The Covenanted Civil Service has generally been credited in the public mind with two distinct functions—it is believed to have provided officers for what may be called the mofussil administration, and to have trained men to assume the most important offices which go to make up central Governments; and we may now consider briefly how, in the event of the proposed abolition of the Covenanted Service, as at present constituted, the higher offices of the central administrations would be filled. If the instalments of decentralization which have already been given to the country may be regarded as so many promises of eventual federation—and many writers are disposed so to regard them—there is no reason why the system, which has hitherto furnished Governors to Madras and Bombay, should not ultimately be adopted in Bengal, the Punjab, the North-West Provinces, and, in fact, every Province which may hereafter be promoted to the position of an independent Government. Even in the contributions of the old Civil Service to our national stock of statesmanship, the value of Indian experience does not seem to stand very high. Law and Finance are the watchwords of Indian progress; and yet, in order to get any decent legal or financial reforms, we have always been compelled to import Law Members and Finance Ministers from England. There is a large number of persons in India who now believe that it would be perfectly safe to confirm one of the Presidency Governors in the post of Viceroy and Governor-General. Those who may hesitate to endorse this opinion will hardly hesitate to admit that it would at all events be perfectly safe, in the case of the Provinces we have named, to trust to the system of selecting Governors which has given such a ruler as Lord Connemara to Madras. There is no reason to fear that if the Provinces in question were converted into independent Governments they would not prove more attractive to English statesmen than Madras; and, judging Lord Connemara in the light of the slight experience which India has had of him, we must say that we are prepared to be reconciled to English Governors. And if the public are prepared to arrive at this conclusion, when the alternative ruler might be a man like Mr Carmichael, whose talents and administrative ability, in the abstract, have never been called in question, they have to consider what the alternative ruler is likely to be a few years hence, when routine and competition will have done their worst.

THE BURMAN AND HIS USES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The value of the Burman, as an instrument for the administration and defence of the latest addition to the Indian Empire, is a question of material importance to the Government of that Empire. In its conquered subjects our Government is wont to find the sinews of civil Rule and internal and external defence It even recruits its military forces from the independent or semi-independent States on its borders, from Afghanistan, Cashmere Nepaul, and Beluchistan. Having conquered and annexed so extensive a territory as that of Upper Burma, with its indefinite appanages on the north and east frontier, it is in accordance with traditional policy that the Government of India should endeavour to utilise as soon as possible for its own ends the governing resources of the country. It must be borne in mind that the Supreme Government, by providing adequate employ for all ranks of its newly-acquired subjects, thereby removes—at least in part—the motives that might lead them to seek other employment less conducive to peace and order. There are races in India who have very egregiously mistaken their avocation, and so bring opprobrium on the Native Army of India, such opprobrium as mayhap the Burman would never bring upon it. Let us, then, for the present be content that the Burman has a head on his shoulders, and as capable well-developed brain inside that head. The Burman i ot cringing and servile, as so many of the Natives of India are; he has dignity and self-respect; he has none of the effeminate uppishness of the Baboo; he is quiet and self-possessed in manner; he is rarely demonstrative or vociferous, sullen or morose. He does not, as a rule, keep a stock of glib promises at the end of his tongue ready to be reeled off by the yard or fathom when required. Not that the Burman is not a liar, but that he usually lies in a few words, or declines to answer at all. The glib plausibility with which Nature has endowed a certain proportion of the inhabitants of British India does not appear to have been vouchsafed to the Burman. Such being some of the mental and moral attributes of the Burman, it is evident that our latest annexation has provided the Government with material not to be despised for the future administration and development of the country.

THE HEALTH OF ANGLO-INDIANS.

(Advocate of India.)

The health of Anglo-Indians, and the best means of preserving it, have been minutely considered by Indian medical writers, but mostly in a fragmentary manner. The one great deficiency which we have observed is the absence of a chapter on the appropriate retiring age for Europeans. Because many old Indians refuse to retire at a reasonable age, Government have provided a fifty-five year rule, in order to prevent a stagnation in promotion. Doubtless this rule has caused the compulsory retirement of many old Indians in time—and just in time—to enable them to live on to a ripe age in England, and to enjoy in health the pensions or the fortunes which they have secured. But this good result is due to the accident of the Government rules, and not to the wisdom of old Indians themselves. Old age is not always to be counted by the number of years which a man has lived. Old age comes early to some, and late to others. It is all a matter of health constitution. Some old Indians pass thirty years and upwards in this country without receiving any permanent damage to any of their viscera, always maintaining active habits, good spirits, and a sound digestion. Others, again, are seriously deranged in fifteen Indian summers. When the question of the proper period of retirement is left to the persons themselves, Anglo-Indians decide in the following way. The argument is advanced that if a period of residence in India of fifteen years is passed without giving any special evidence of a break-down, acclimatisation has been reached. In nearly all the cases of death from apoplexy among people who are not of great age, and who have overworked their brains, life might have been considerably prolonged. Brain power, like muscular or digestive power, is limited in individuals. There is no healthy information so much required in India as that which relates to the brain capacity of individuals. The brain is a subtle organ, enclosed in a bony casement, and consequently not within reach of sight and touch. Its behaviour under close application is not easily discovered by the individual. But careful observation by skilled men will detect cases of weakness long before the individual himself is aware of his weakness. The writers on health in India have not placed before old Indians any views on this matter which may be easily understood by laymen. We believe that much special study of this subject is required even by medical men in India. There is a good deal of experience, it is true, but it is scattered, disconnected, or mixed up, and is not available as a guide to old Indians. The liver has been the organ which Indian medical men have studied most, and about which they know a great deal; but, strange to say, the standard works on diseases of the liver are from the pens of persons who have had no tropical experience, except in the case of Murchison's treatise. Diseases of the brain in India, as concerns Europeans long resident in this country, have been little studied, and no standard work on them has yet appeared.

HILL CAMPS FOR YOUNG SOLDIERS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

When, in 1886, Sir Frederick Roberts decided to form standing camps for young soldiers at Hill stations during the summer, Dalhousie, Kasauli and Ranikhet were selected as the stations where these camps were to be formed. At first the camp at Dalhousie was scattered about the Balun Cantonments, a tent here and there wherever a square could be found to pitch one. The inconvenience of this arrangement was obvious, and shortly afterwards the whole camp was removed from Balun, and pitched, on the Sonanatala spur, on an excellent site selected by Captain Beley, then assistant Quartermaster-General of the Division. Here the camp is now a colony in itself, complete with its schools, library, recreation rooms, sergeants' mess, canteen, &c., the whole under command of Col. Beamish, of the Northumberland Fusiliers, with Lieut. Morse, East Lancashire Regiment, as Adjutant. A visit to the Camp well repays any one; and its cleanliness and good order is surprising, considering the heavy rains this year in Dalhousie. Nearly every other tent has its garden, either flower or vegetable, and in walking through the Camp in an evening, it is quite pleasing to see the interest taken by the men in cultivating their little garden plots. Eight men are allotted to each tent, and the bed cots tidily arranged; and in a good many cases the pictures pinned to the canvas walls give the tents quite a homely appearance. Amusements, too, are not forgotten, as Col. Beamish, assisted by his officers, have inaugurated fortnightly entertainments which are not only thoroughly appreciated by the men, but also by the residents of the station, as evidenced by the crowded audiences. It is also pleasing to find that crime of a serious nature is almost unknown, there having been but one court martial in five months, which considering that of the 500 men, forming this camp the greater portion of them are young soldiers of from one to two years' service, speaks volumes, not only for the judicious command exercised over them, but for the men themselves. It cannot but be in the highest degree pleasing to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief that his experiment, so far as the Dalhousie Camp is concerned, has been such an unqualified success, and has induced the Government to sanction the erection of temporary huts for the location of the men next year—and more than all to know that the men have, by their conduct, shown their appreciation of the interest taken in them.

BENGAL.

THE Medical Branch of the Financial Department of the Bengal Secretariat is to be transferred to the department of the Chief Secretary, and the other branches of the Financial Office will also be placed under the Chief Secretary and the Secretary in the Revenue and General department, presumably with a view to abolish the post of the Financial Secretary to the Local Government, which was created a few years ago.

DURING the week ended the 10th of August there were 184 deaths registered in Calcutta, giving a death-rate of 22·1 per thousand per annum. In the previous week there were 162 deaths, and the death-rate was 19·6 per thousand.

MR. CHARLES ALLAN DICKSON, late Travelling Inspector of Accounts, Officiating Sub-Assistant Auditor, Goods Division, E. I. Railway, Jamalpore, has instituted a suit in the High Court, Calcutta, against the East India Railway Company for wrongful dismissal; damages claimed, Rs. 75,000.

OWING to requisitions made by several Native States, &c., for the supply of models representing various native tribes, the Bengal Government, at the instance of the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, is said to have sanctioned an outlay of about Rs. 2,000 for the purpose, and to have also engaged the services of Baboo Jodoo Nath Paul, of Krishnagore, the well-known modeller, who supplied models to the Calcutta Exhibition of 1884, on a salary of Rs. 100 per mensem.

MADRAS.

IT is probable that the committee of experts now deliberating in London over that knotty subject, the Madras Harbour works, will recommend the closing of the eastern entrance thereto, and the construction of a new entrance on the north-east, at a cost of, perhaps, half a million of money.

THE long pending question of the location of the Town Magistrate's Court, Madras, has again cropped up, and negotiations are on foot for its removal to the site at present occupied by the Ambulance branch of the Commissariat Department, these premises being altered and enlarged to suit the location of a Court, and the Ambulance Department moved into the premises at present occupied by the Town Police Court. Difficulties, it is said, lie in the way of this being done, as the Military Department are entirely opposed to the change.

A KNOTTY question of precedence cropped up recently at Madras on the occasion of the assembling of a committee for the purpose of finally examining a probationer for the Commissariat Department. The committee consisted of the Assistant Commissary General, a captain of the Bedfordshire Regiment, the Hon. Mr. Barlow, Collector of Sea Customs, and Colonel Saunders, the Examiner of Commissariat Accounts. The question arose as to who was the president of this mixed board; the Commissariat Examiner was the senio Military Officer, but the Collector of Sea Customs, in point of precedence, was senior to him. For the time being Mr. Barlow waived his claims to sit as president in favour of Colonel Saunders, but a reference was made to Government to lay down an authoritative ruling on the question whether, in Boards of this kind, the senior Military Officer should sit as president irrespective of the rank and standing of the Civil Officer, and whether the Civil Officer should be considered as a member of the Committee or as simply attending it. The Government, in view to avoiding, in future, the inconvenience brought to notice, have laid down that a member of the Civil Service of less than eighteen years' standing should, if possible, be selected for service on Committees convened for the final examination of probationers for appointment to the Commissariat Department. As regards the position of Civilians on such Boards, it is held that they should be considered as members, and not merely attending them.

THE Matron Superintendentship of the Madras General Hospital has, on the recommendation of the Surgeon-General, been conferred on Miss Margaret A. Scott, who has been, for some time past, holding the post of Lady Superintendent of the Civil Hospital at Rajkote. Fourteen applications, the Madras Times understands, were received in reply to the advertisement, amongst them being two from England, one of whom was Mrs. Mary Anderson, who held the appointment in the time of Sir M. E. Grant-Duff. As Miss Scott, however, has received a thorough training, and holds numerous excellent testimonials, the Surgeon-General recommended that, as local talent was available, it should be utilised. As Miss Scott does not come within the definition of a "Native of India," the appointment will have to receive the formal confirmation of the Secretary of State. Miss Scott will draw a consolidated pay of Rs. 300.

LIEUT. F. J. S. LOWRY, S.C., has been appointed Cantonment Magistrate at Jacobabad.

MR. G. W. FORREST, B.A., has been appointed Professor of English and History in the Elphinstone College.

MR. A. W. YOUNGHUSBAND, C.S., has been appointed to do duty as Assistant Collector of Satara.

WITH respect to the vacancy on the Corporation, Mr. Geary is the only candidate now in the field, so there will be no contest, as was at first anticipated.

COLONEL W. P. LATOUCHE will not after all go to Poona as Cantonment Magistrate, his appointment to act during the absence of his namesake, Colonel C. D'U LaTouche, having been cancelled.

THERE has been another drop in the cholera mortality in Bombay, only fifteen deaths being registered in the week ending the 30th ult. The death-rate for the week was 26·83 against 22·59 in the corresponding week last year, and a mean of 29·25 in the corresponding week of the previous five years.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

IN the annual report of the Simla Municipality, just issued, suggestions are made for the improvement of the water supply, at an estimated cost of two and a-half lakhs. The sum is not a very formidable one, but is quite beyond the resources of the committee, who can only fall back for assistance on the Punjab Government. That Government is itself, however, notoriously "hard up," and it would therefore seem that the Government of India will at last have to do something for the place for whose existence and requirements it is altogether responsible.

THERE are already smothered indications of ill-feeling between the Hindus and Mahomedans in the Punjab, of which there may be a possible outbreak in the coming Dusehra and Moburrum festivals. "To be forewarned," remarks the Lahore paper, "is to be forearmed;" and so appropriate, preventive and suppressive arrangements will doubtless be made in time. The local authorities will therefore not have the excuse of sudden surprise and consequent unpreparedness on this occasion; and it is to be hoped that the Police will be more effective than they were last year, in maintaining public peace and order, that there may be no need for calling for the aid of the Military.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces has paid a high compliment to the officers of the Oudh Commission in the recently issued orders on the revenue administration of that Province. In the closing paragraph of the review, Sir Alfred Lyall records "his high appreciation of the services rendered by the officers who have during the past five years been engaged in the revenue administration of Oudh. In the discussions and inquiries which preceded and led to a revision of the rent law, their knowledge of the country, their experience, and their careful collection of facts, were of the greatest use to the Government, and their ordinary duties, which are by no means light, have been generally discharged with very meritorious industry and ability."

IT is satisfactory to learn, from the Resolution of the N. W. Government on the subject, that the number of civil suits contested in the Civil Courts of the Punjab during last year was small in proportion to the total number disposed of, and that the percentage of successful institutions in such cases as were actually contested was very high; but there is less cause for complacency when one looks at the capacity shown by the Courts for overtaking their work. The number of original suits instituted fell off by 4,724; but notwithstanding this decrease the pending file rose from 16,263 at the close of 1885 to 19,135 at the close of last year, so that the Courts disposed of 7,596 less original suits than they did in 1885, and that too while the proportion of contested suits decreased. Similarly while the number of suits pending more than three months at the end of the previous year was 1,008, it rose to 1,173 at the end of that under review.

LAST year the number of civil suits instituted in the Punjab was 242,323, which was 4,724 less than in the previous year. This decrease is said to have been general, and not due to any special cause. As is usually the case, 86 per cent. of the suits were brought to recover money due on movable property, and the average value of each suit was Rs. 58.10. Of the contested suits 70 per cent. were decided in favour of the plaintiff, although the number of uncontested suits was very large. The judges of Ambala and Multan both raise objections to the system of book-keeping adopted by the money-lenders, which enables them to prove whatever they like against their victims; and the local Government is of opinion that the subject is one which demands investigation with a view either to an amendment of the law of evidence, or to greater caution on the part of the courts in the application of the law.

BREVITY is the mot d'ordre in high places just now, and a report is expected to be a record of facts and not a disquisition on them. The annual jail report of the North West Provinces possibly achieves the distinction of being the shortest on record. It contains only twenty-one pages. Crime appears to have gone up slightly during the year, judging from the number of admissions to jail. The increase is entirely in the class of offences against property. For once the report does not go on to the usual plausible platitude that does duty for a reason. The Inspector-General does not know the reason of the increase; and he says so. Discipline shows a continued improvement year by year. The provincial average of punishments is remarkably light; only thirty-four per cent. of the prisoners having got into trouble as against an average for all India of nearly three times that number; and this excellent result, it is pleasant to observe, has coincided with a still further reduction in corporal punishment, which was a misfortune which befel less than five per cent. of the convicts, and the Inspector-General looks for a still further improvement upon these very creditable results when the good work and remission system, which is now very carefully worked, has had time to tell upon the general mass of prisoners.

OBITUARY.

THE MAHARANI DHULEEP SINGH.—Her Highness the Maharani Dhuleep Sing died suddenly at her residence in Holland-park on the 18th inst. Although her Highness had been suffering in health for some time past so sudden a termination of her life was unexpected. She took a chill on Friday week, on her return journey to London from the seaside, where she had been to look at a residence with a view to taking change of air, renal complications ensued, and her Highness died of collapse on Sunday morning. The Maharani was born in 1848, educated at the American Presbyterian Mission under the personal care of Dr. Lansing, and married the Maharajah, now in Russia, in 1864. She leaves three sons and three daughters. Her eldest son, Prince Victor Dhuleep Singh, is now at Sandhurst.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL JOHN COLPOYS HAUGHTON, C.S.I.—The death is announced at Ramsgate on Saturday last of Lieutenant.-General John Colpoys Haughton, C.S.I. Born in 1817, he entered the Royal Navy at the age of twelve in the flagship of his relative, Sir Edward Colpoys; after six years afloat he passed by direct commission into the Bengal Infantry, and within a few more years was appointed Adjutant of the 4th Goorkha Regiment in Shah Soojah's service. At this period of his life he earned considerable reputation by his magnificent defence of the fort of Charakar, being left in sole command through the death in action of his senior officer. It was by the treachery of the Afghan troops that the place was invested, and the details of the siege which followed, wherein one by one the defenders were picked off, will be found in accounts published in several periodicals. Lieutenant Haughton was severely wounded in the neck and right arm in a sally. After a hasty amputation, supported on his horse by his friend, Major E. Pottinger, and a faithful Goorkha, and with a bottle of ether suspended to his neck to maintain consciousness, he rode forty miles into Cabul. There, after undergoing a second amputation, he remained until the surviving officers and their families were taken by Akbar Khan's Sirdars towards Berneau, where all were rescued by Sir Richmond Shakspeare. He held successively the appointments of Assistant Commissioner of Chota Nagpore, magistrate of Moulmein, Superintendent of the penal settlement of the Andamans, Acting Commissioner of Assam, and Commissioner of Cooch Behar and the surrounding districts. During the campaign in the Garrow and Jyntea Hills Colonel Haughton's military experience was of great value, and his judicious arrangements for the pacification and conduct of the country received the acknowledgment of successive Governments. He was superannuated in the year 1873, and from that time had lived in retirement, though to the close of his life he continued to suffer from the many injuries formerly received by him in the service of his country.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL TREVOR JOHN CHICHELE PLOWDEN.—Lieutenant-Colonel Trevor John Chichele Plowden, C.I.E., of the Bengal Army, who died at Canterbury on the 15th inst., entered the Indian Army in 1859, and, after some seven years' service in various corps, including the adjutancy of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry of the Frontier Force, was nominated to the Punjab Commission, in which he has held several important appointments. During the Afghan war he was Deputy-Commissioner and Political Agent of the Kohat district, the base of the Kuram Field Force, under the command of General Sir Frederick Roberts at the commencement of the war, and for his distinguished services in this connection he was made a Companion of the Order of the Indian Empire. Colonel Plowden had a very extensive and accurate knowledge of the Afghan language (Pushtoo), and had a singular command over the wild Afridis and other semi-independent Afghan tribes in the Kohat and Peshawur districts, where he served for so many years of his life. He was in possession of the Afghan and Indian frontier medals.

cottage, St. Andrews, N.B. He served throughout the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, for which he received a medal with clasp. He was present at the mutiny at Lucknow in 1857 and during the operations before Cawnpore. For his services in the Oude campaign of 1858 he was frequently mentioned in despatches, and was thanked by the Government, besides receiving a medal with clasp and the Victoria Cross, the last-mentioned being for various acts of gallantry performed during the defence of the Residency of Lucknow. He was made lieutenant in 1853, captain in 1861, lieutenant-colonel in 1869, and a colonel in 1876.

AFGHANISTAN.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—In thanking you for having published my letter on the impending danger of a third Afghan war, I would request the favour of your allowing me to submit to your readers a few remarks on the same subject.

The Constitution of this country, by enabling Parliament to withhold supplies for the prosecution of a war which it may consider unwise or inexpedient, guards the nation from similar perils. In the present instance, however, that wholesome check becomes inoperative, as the supplies are obtained from the people of India who may be taxed without the consent of Parliament; and the nation is thus exposed to find itself committed to aggressive hostilities without well knowing the motive or the precise object of the war. A similar condition of things is obviously full of danger for this country as well as for India. In a case like this, the Government has, in order to provide for the expenses of a campaign, to reply entirely on the already much embarrassed finances of India, and is therefore compelled to resort to abnormal and oppressive measures, at the risk of alienating the Indian populations, and creating thereby a political danger of very great magnitude. Already the preparations made for an advance on Kandahar have necessitated heavy loans and oppressive imposts, as may be seen from the two last Indian Budget statements; and, as taxation in India has now reached the point at which increased assessments bring no increase revenue, loans have become the chief resource for covering the excess of expenditure over revenue.

Referring to the Indian railways, the Finance Minister told us that in 1885 the Government ordered the construction of lines of a military character, estimated to cost £12,000,000; and that these railways were to take precedence of lines previously decided upon, although the latter were intended to facilitate the extension of internal trade which had become of the greatest importance to the revenue. It thus appears that the war preparations in India are not only adding considerably to the expenditure of the Indian Government, but are injuriously affecting a most important source of revenue.

The credit enjoyed by the Indian Government, and the consequently moderate rates at which it is able to borrow, are due, in a great measure, to a common belief or expectation that, if the Indian Government found itself unable to meet its liabilities, the Home Government would come to its assistance. It must be remembered, however, that the power of the Home Government to do so would depend on the consent of Parliament to burden the taxpayer of the United Kingdom for the relief of the Indian Exchequer. The English constituencies would surely have a voice in the matter. Is it reasonable to expect that these constituencies, which are now so largely composed of working men or poor men, would be willing to bear additional taxation for the above purpose?

GOOD NEWS FROM MADRAS.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—Many years ago Mr. Clements Markham, the editor of the Geographical Magazine, proved conclusively that the Indian Government ought to construct a work in India which would be of exceeding benefit to the Madura District.

That district might be made very fertile if it could obtain a good supply of water. Lying to the south of the rich district of Tanjore, and within ten degrees of the Equator, Madura has for hundreds of years longed for water for irrigation; the Vygah river, which flows north of the town, has but little water in it during the hot weather.

Mr. Clements Markham proved convincingly that, by the construction of a dam sixty feet high west of the village or stockade of Millayaur (9° 31′ North latitude, and 77° 20′ East longitude), the waters of the river Perryaur might be diverted into the chief tributary of the Vygah river, and thus the latter would be supplied with an abundant stream even in the hottest months of the year.

A cutting 130 feet in depth is required north of the village; the whole of the expense is estimated at 17½ lakhs of rupees, or, say, £130,000.

I am happy to write that at last Lord Connemara, the Governor of Madras, has sanctioned the construction of this beneficient work, and has made an allotment of 5 lakhs of rupees for this year. Colonel Pennycuick is to make the necessary arrangements for commencing the work; and if English public opinion would stimulate the India Office the Madura district could be supplied with water before the end of next year.

All good financiers know that by increasing the wealth of a country the public Treasury is benefited.—Your obedient servant,

September 19th. T.

CEYLON TEAS.—A comparatively new industry in the shape of tea-growing is rapidly developing itself in Ceylon, and bids fair ere long to rival both China and India in this market. The island seems well adapted for the growth of this popular plant, both as regards quality and quantity, for a crop of something like ten millions of pounds is expected to be produced during the coming season. The excellence of the teas grown there have induced the well-known firm of tea merchants, Messrs. Cooper Cooper and Co., of King William-street, to introduce it as a speciality to the English public. This firm offers selections of the best specimens at remarkably low prices, and being simply dealers, and being under no obligation to further the interests of any particular gardens, give their customers the full benefit of their technical knowledge of the article. Their great experience in the tea trade, and the facilities they have, enable them to select only the choicest sorts. Those who give it a trial will find that the decoction from the Ceylon Teas will prove equal, if not superior, to that obtained from the many others now so commonly used.

THE mania for Joint Stock Companies, which appears to have been a distinguishing feature in the Madras Presidency in the year 1885-86, somewhat subsided last year, there being only 110 companies registered as against 375 in the previous year. The Registrar-General distinctly states that the large number of companies registered in 1885-6 was purely the result of speculation, and that many of them seemed to him to be neither permanent nor stable. That this opinion was correct is shown by the fact that in 1886-87 no less than 192 companies were wound up. In the majority of these there appears to have been no capital divided into shares, as 176 were limited only by guarantees. The companies registered last year show a more satisfactory state of things, no less than 83 of them having a share capital, and only 23 being limited by guarantee, while one company is unlimited. By far the largest proportion of the new companies, namely, 81, were for banking or loans, while two are trading companies, and twenty-four are described as miscellaneous. The majority of these latter are in the form of provident or insurance companies for securing to their members sums of money to meet expenses of marriages, deaths, or other religious ceremonies, and one was to provide for the expenses of pilgrimages. A co-operative association was established at Madras to carry on the business of importers, salesmen, exporters, and general merchants; the Madras Christian College was converted into an educational company, and in Tinnevelly a company was started for the sale of salt on commission. The total number of companies at present on the register is 319, with a nominal capital of Rs. 3,86,60,240 of which Rs. 1,43,75,021 has been paid up.

DURING the year ended the 31st of March last eight new companies, with nominal capital amounting to Rs. 27,88,000, were registered in Calcutta, and four companies increased their capital by Rs. 1,61,475. Ten companies, with capital amounting to Rs. 37,55,000, were either in the process of winding up or were actually dissolved, and one company reduced its capital under the order of the High Court by two lakhs. This leaves altogether 230 companies actually in working operation, with a total nominal capital of Rs. 11,28,75,575, and a paid up capital of Rs. 9,68,24,825. Of the companies now in existence 19 are banking and insurance companies, 31 trading companies, 29 mills and presses, 129 indigo and tea planting companies, 12 mining companies, 5 for the manufacture of ice, 1 for making sugar, 1 brewery, and 3 miscellaneous.

THE Indigo Brokers' estimate for the indigo crop in Bengal this season amounts to 20,300 maunds, as against 23,353 maunds last season. The falling off has occurred principally in the Bhagalpur, Purnia, and Rungpur districts, for Jessor, Krishnaghur, and Rajshaye show a satisfactory increase. Manufacture from first cuttings in Behar is now nearly finished, and the outturn is expected to be about 51,000 maunds as compared with 66,080 maunds last season. The Koonties in Tirhut and Champaran, as well as in the rest of Behar, are not likely to turn out so well as was at one time anticipated, owing to heavy rain and absence of sunshine and the attacks of caterpillars. The weather has somewhat improved of late, which may improve the produce from the Koonties and make the total above the estimate now given. Manufacture has commenced in Banaras, and other parts of the North-West Provinces, but the outturn, owing to the late unfavourable wet weather, is not expected to exceed that of last year, though in some places the plant is said to be cutting out well.

Notwithstanding large sales of Indian Tea the market opened with fair spirit, but it has since assumed a dull tone, and prices generally show a further marked decline, especially on Pekoes. Although most of these are attractive in appearance, they lack strength and fulness in the cup, and are not in favour with buyers. This is most noticeable in Terais and Dooars, as well as some of the Assams. A few fine Kangras with full rich flavour realised high rates, while some of the Sylhets have been well competed for, as they are stronger than early arrivals from this district. Broken Teas have been in fuller supply, but on account of the limited demand are only saleable at very low quotations, which should, however, stimulate consumption, especially as it is stated from latest reports that the proportion of this class is smaller than usual. Ceylon: A comparatively small quantity has been offered, which has met with more attention, and sold at better prices. Latest advices confirm previous reports that the outturn for the season will be below the estimates, and this, coupled with reduced supplies on the market, has given more confidence. Pekoes and broken Pekoes show an advance of ½d. to 1d., and Pekoe Souchongs about ½d. per lb. During the week the following have been offered at public auction:—2,172 sold, 250 withdrawn, total offered 2,422, from which we quote some sales, with the averages obtained:—

A PROPOSED RAILWAY.—The Civil and Military Gazette says:—It has been pointed out to us that one serious blot in the project for joining Karachi to the Rajputana line viâ Hyderabad and Jodhpore is that the Bombay and Baroda Company could, and probably would, by means of local rates, effectually prevent any traffic leaving their line for Karachi; and further that the distance from Pali viâ Hyderabad to Karachi would be very little less than the distance viâ Ahmedabad to Bombay. Hence it is urged that what is wanted, to place Karachi on equal terms with its rival, is a line from Delhi across to Bahawalpur, on the broad-gauge, running through Rohtak, Hansi, Bhuteur, striking the cultivated belt on the Sutlej somewhere above Khairpore, and then on to the North-Western Railway at Bahawalpur. This line would be about 340 miles in length, and could, it is said, be very cheaply made. It would then place Karachi within 890 miles of Delhi as against the present distance viâ Lahore of 1,176 miles, or viâ Rewari-Ferozepore of 1,115 miles. The distance from Delhi to Bombay by the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway is 970 miles; so that Delhi would then be 80 miles nearer Karachi than Bombay; and, seeing that Karachi is about one day nearer Aden than Bombay, there would be good reason for making the former the port of our English mails. The proposed line would, unlike that from Pali viâ Hyderabad, place Delhi, Oudh, and the North-West Provinces in unimpeded connection with Karachi, and enable the latter to make a very good bid for the Cawnpore business. It would also enable the Bengal and Umeria coal to be placed very advantageously on the North-Western Railway, and very conveniently for the frontier lines in case of trouble. As a direct connection between the frontier and the garrisons in the North-West Provinces, and as a means of drawing direct for supplies on the richest part of India, the proposed line has, also, much to recommend it from a military point of view. This is, as we understand it, the argument, stated in brief, for the new proposal; and it makes out a strong primâ facie case, at any rate, for consideration.

THE gross ignorance and easy gullibility of the lower class of Punjabis is exemplified by a conversation between two Sikh soldiers, who, returning from worshipping at the temple at Amritsar, were heard to say that, in consequence of the receipt of news of the advent of Maharajah Dhulip Singh at Kandahar with an army of a lakh of men, the "Sirkar" (Government) had placed their High Priest, Bydee Khem Singh, under police restraint, as a precautionary measure—a bad return for the active loyalty and the good service of the "Khalsa!"

Miscellaneous.

THE FUTURE CIVIL SERVICE.—A correspondent writes to the Englishman :—"After reading all the recent articles and letters about Mr. Beames' case I have discovered one bright star of hope gleaming in that murky darkness. It is as the jewel in the head of the toad. A weapon of great power is placed in the hands of the rising members of the Indian Civil Service. The first care of the 'Shtunt,' on arrival in India, should be to study and learn by heart all the primæval Acts and Regulations yet unrepealed. These, skilfully handled, will break down the severest Government. On the one hand he will be able to choose his own station; on the other he will be able to effectually stop any schemes that the Government may find temporarily or permanently advisable. Should the prospect of leaving dear Chowringhee for Noakholly arise, the prudent young man will dutifully inform Government that he is a large shareholder in a company engaged in 'opening up the resources of the country' in that flourishing centre; and the piteous tale of a tyrannous mahajun demanding his rupees in Rungpur will prevent the possibility of his having to serve in that prosperous but feverish district. An occasional irritant administered to the Native Press will render the position impregnable. From this lofty and commanding eminence that exemplary young gentleman will look down with mingled scorn and contempt on the Lieutenant-Governor, swear at secretaries, and deride commissioners. Of course, it is evident that the same high class and expensive material will no longer be required for the making of civil officers. In deference to a much-clamoured-for reform the Civil Service Commissioners have lowered the standard of age. Let them do a little more, and lower the standard of morals also. In fact, a little lowering all round would suit the temperament of the times. Then would the rulers and the ruled meet on the same level. The apotheosis of Ripon and Ilbert as the apostles of the new dispensation would arrive with the millennium they have inaugurated amidst much tumult of the ignorant and short-sighted mob. Then will the Briton and the Bengali libel together, and no one will lead, drive, or suppress them."

A TALE OF THE AMIR.—The Bombay Gazette says:—"Some strange stories have been told of the way in which Abdur Rahman lords it over his people. There is humour in his way of playing the part of Lord Absolute which can best be appreciated at a distance, as a story which has just reached us will show. Not long ago, we are told, the Amir was sitting in durbar discussing public affairs. The 'Home' Department had gone through their work. Orders had been issued to release certain persons from the sorrows of existence when the durbar suddenly dashed into greater thing, and began to talk about the English and the Russians. A man who had lately been introduced at Court, and was not well acquainted with his sovereign's ways, remarked, 'Lord of the Earth, let people say what they like, but this humble one has been scanning the political horizon with far-reaching eyes, and the Russians are coming.' The Lord of the Earth smiled a sweet smile—some of the old courtiers who knew that smile also smiled—and turning upon him with the 'far reaching eyes,' said: bright jewel of our durbar and sun of our understanding, art thou sure of this?' 'The Lord of the Earth is omniscient and knows everything,' replied he. 'Well, to be sure, we do see things, but we are old now. Moreover, yon tree obstructs our view; however, thou art young; go thou, therefore, climb the tree, watch the cursed, Muscovite's movements, and when he is very close upon us, come and inform us. The tree is high, so that thou shall be enabled to see a long way off.' Forthwith the man was led to the tree and made to climb to the topmost branches. To keep up his courage, if he grew weary of his post, a guard with bayonets fixed was told off to remain below. It is said the young man felt considerably elevated by his master's humour, and felt very exhilarated at first; but three days' contemplation of the beauties of nature, even from such a commanding position, is apt to tire one, and so he fell. They say he got hurt and died. No one dares to raise alarms in Kabul now."

THE Railway Service Gazette states that Sir Bradford Leslie Agent of the East India Railway, has been in indifferent health for a considerable period, and in the wreck of the Tasmania he sustained somewhat severe injuries which, no doubt made him decide upon resigning, a step that he had not quite determined upon when he sailed from India.

THE Deccan Times learns that during his Excellency the Minister of Hyderabad's stay in England for the Jubilee he received on many occasions very graceful attention and courtesy from the Prime Minister and the Marchioness of Salisbury. As a mark of his appreciation of their short friendship his Excellency received direct from the Marquis of Salisbury a few days ago a present of a very handsome tea service, which is intended no doubt as a souvenir of those days. His Excellency, we learn, was both gratified and surprised on receiving the exquisite little gift. He must have thought, doubtless, that his hurried departure to take up his duties would have effaced all memory of his visit from the minds of friends who were engaged in the whirl of gaiety, ceremony, and anxiety of that busy time.

YESTERDAY afternoon the remains of Bamba Duleep Singh, Maharanee, were interred in Elvedon Churchyard, near Thetford. Prince Victor, Prince Frederick, and Princess Bamba were the chief mourners. Lord Henniker attended by command of, and to represent, Her Majesty the Queen. The India Office was represented by Mr. Neel, head of the Political Department, and by Mr. Dawkins, private secretary of Lord Cross, and also by Sir Owen Burne, of the India Council. There were likewise present Mr. Oliphant, secretary to the Maharanee, Mr. Drewitt, the Maharajah's agent, and many of the neighbouring gentry. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. St. George Walker, rector of Elvedon. Her Majesty the Queen, the Princess of Wales, and Lord and Lady Henniker sent magnificent wreaths of flowers. Upon the coffin was mounted a shield, bearing the words: "Bamba Duleep Singh, Maharanee, born July 6, 1848, died Sept. 18, 1887."

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE FAMILY PENSION FUND.—The balance of the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund, exclusive of interest upon capital, at credit of the Fund on the Government Books on October 31 last amounted to Rs. 96,21,272, an increase of Rs 435,428 over the balance at credit of the Fund at the same period of 1885. The net increase in receipts amounted to Rs. 2,625, and in payments to Rs. 7,974, while the net increase in the balance was Rs. 427,448. The subscriptions, from August to October inclusive, in the Widow's Fund amounted to Rs. 1,23,769 and in the Children's Fund to Rs. 84,160, both of which show a slight increase over the corresponding period of 1885. The payments of pensions to incumbents in the Widows' Fund during the same period, viz., August to October, 1886, amounted to Rs. 90,764, and in the Children's Fund to Rs. 62,706, while the loss by Exchange on remittances to England amounted to the large sum of Rs. 20,480. There were 1,536 subscribers to the Widows' Fund and 1,023 to the Children's Fund, while of persons receiving pensions as incumbents there were 435 in the Widows' Fund and 658 in the Children's Fund. The number of subscribers sharing the divisible surplus, viz., Rs. 59,760, amounted to 1,928, of whom 1,152 were in the Widows' Fund and 776 in the Children's Fund, showing an increase of 106 persons over the same period of 1885.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

EPISODES IN A LIFE OF ADVENTURE.*

That a work from the pen of Mr. Laurence Oliphant is sure to be readable is an assumption which savours to a large degree of certainty. His style is so picturesque, so natural, and so full of life, that page after page rolls by ere the reader has barely realised that a start has been made. High, however, as is this praise, the standard of criticism must be raised on the appearance of his most recent work, entitled "Episodes in a Life of Adventure; or, Moss from a Rolling Stone." It would be difficult to point to a single publication of late years of a similar nature which is more replete with adventure, more calculated to enlighten, more apt to amuse.

Merely glancing at localities, what a goodly array of spots on the world's surface Mr. Oliphant appears to have visited! He tells us about Ceylon, with its quaint legends, its lovely scenery, and its religious relics. Then the scene changes to Italy, at that time (1848) in the midst of the revolutionary storm which, passing over Europe, visited in its course the land of the Cæsars. A ripple, too, of the wave had touched the shores of Greece, and the reader gets a glimpse of the commotion in that, the most lovely of nature's loveliest creations. Then comes a trip across the Atlantic to Washington, where, as secretary to Lord Elgin, Mr. Oliphant was initiated into the arts of diplomacy in an endeavour to put the commercial relations between America and Canada on a better footing. To this new sphere of action succeeded an appointment in Canada, where, amidst the Indians of the frontier, the youthful diplomât put in practice the arts and secrets which a few months' experience had enabled him to command.

The century had, too, passed its meridian, and the Crimean War was dragging its weary footsteps over the sands of time. So Mr. Oliphant flitted to the scene of war, and tells some curious anecdotes which throw quite a new light upon that important but little-studied episode in the world's history. Adventures in Central America; in China during the War of 1857–59; Sporting Reminiscences in Ceylon; An Episode with Garibaldi; Experiences in Montenegro; A Struggle for Life in Japan; A Tale of Russian Aggression in the Pacific; Adventures in Albania and Italy; A Trip to Cracow in the midst of the Polish Insurrection of 1863; A Visit to the Convents of Moldavia, where he and his companions were alone amidst an array of nuns and mother superiors, which, at any rate so far as the former were concerned, would have led a hermit to exclaim, in the words of the Apostle of Arabia, "O, Lord! verily thou art a snare to mankind." Such is the menu presented to the reader. The dishes are numerous enough to satisfy all appetites, and the "cookery" is the handiwork of an expert. The repast, therefore, should be tempting to the most fastidious, and gratifying to the palate of all who love adventure, who appreciate pluck, and who regret that the end of such a mind is a wandering amidst the phantoms and mirages of the occult science.

KIDNAPPED.†

Kidnapped! Where? when? why? how? are questions which naturally and irresistibly arise from the title which Mr. Stevenson has chosen for his work. The answer is plain, simple, unpretentious. Place, Great Britain; period, anno domino 1751; the reason, family disputes; the means, a trading vessel. What trifling pegs whereon to hang a tale! Yet we venture to think that not one reader in a thousand in the wildest flights of fancy could picture a more exciting, stirring string of events that this simple plot has enabled the author to present to the public. Every peril known to man is enlisted into the service of the story. At one time the hero of the tale is in imminent danger of breaking his neck in a desolate house owing to the sudden termination of the stairs which had been left unfinished to decay and crumble into ruins; at another time he is braving peril of death from ill-treatment; a few days later he is fighting for dear life in the round house of a trading brig. Safely through this danger the ship is wrecked, and he escapes with difficulty to a barren and waste island on the S.W. coast of Scotland, where for days he lived on roots and such fish as he was able to get amidst the rocks. When at last he did meet with success it was only to find himself in company with an outlaw, and as a consequence hunted from pillar to post, in danger at every turn of arrest at the hands of King George's soldiers, albeit he himself was a Whig in favour of the Monarchy of England, and in no way an advocate of the claims of the Pretender.

Hairbreadth escapes meet the reader at every turn, sometimes as blood-stirring as if penned by that prince of blood-stirrers, Mr. Rider Haggard; but though the scenes are ofttimes unexpected they are never unreal. They are just what might, indeed, must have happened, should a person find himself in similar circumstances. Hence the book is most captivating—the more so that it throws no inconsiderable light upon the state of Scotland a hundred years ago, when half the country was in rebellion and the other half in perplexity. Mr. Stevenson is a powerful novelist; he never allows interest to flag, he never writes chapters which want "missing"; he never wearies the reader with discursive essays on discursive subjects—not a page, scarce a line, can be "skipped." Men, women, and children, each and all can enjoy "Kidnapped," and it is much to be wished that, as it is hinted, a continuation of this most eventful novel may be forthcoming to please and amuse the many who see in Mr. Stevenson a sensible observer of human nature, a pleasant companion, and a clever writer.

A TREATISE ON THE PRINCIPLE OF SUFFICIENT REASON.*

It has been said that a poor man struggling with adversity is a sight for the gods; little less glorious is the attempt of a critic to understand a book which is incomprehensible. We claim, therefore, for ourselves some amount of public sympathy, for we own that we are quite at a loss to grasp the hidden meanings of Mrs. Fitzgerald's most subtle work. First take the title. "A treatise on the principle of sufficient reason: a psychological theory of reasoning, showing the relativity of thought to the thinker, of recognition to cognition, the identity of presentation and representation, of perception and apperception." What ideas do these string of phrases convey to an ordinarily constituted mortal?

Next study the introduction. "The theory of mind which I here present to the public is that we have three fundamental and two subsidiary internal senses answering to our five external senses. First, that of perception, which is secondarily accompanied by imaginative objectification, or impersonation, and the memory of former impressions. Fourthly, that of rational apprehension of the relativity of the object to the subject as the efficient cause of affection or feeling; and fifthly, that of comprehension of purpose in all conscious activity," &c. What a hopeless array of hopeless expression; and clauses two and three, where are they?

Lastly, what says the conclusion? "The object of this work has been to show that what philosophy seeks, and always has sought, is the knowledge of truth and the whole of truth, and that the application of philosophy lies in the pursuit of 'the Best' (see Plato) for Being." Here there is somewhat to be understanded of the people; but when we proceed further the mist of obscurity envelops the footsteps in impenetrable darkness, for we learn a few paragraphs further on the all-important "necessity of conjugal spiritual union for wholeness of conception of Being"—this construed into plain English apparently means that all persons ought to marry, and marry a suitable companion. Verily, this is a curious outcome for over 400 pages of the most extraordinary array of words which it has ever been our lot to discuss.

One seems to fancy that Mrs. Fitzgerald has some notions, the adoption of which would solve many of the insoluble problems of life, but we avow our utter inability to criticise what we do not understand. We reserve to ourselves the privilege of an "open mind," wishing that our limited capacity would enable us to place before the readers of this journal the purport of a pretentious and haply well-meaning work; but the star of ignorance is in the ascendant, and we bow our heads in deep humility at our want of perception, assuring the fair authoress that the will to write kindly is ready, but the way is wanting.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"Narrative of the Celebration of the Jubilee in the Presidency of Madras," compiled by Sir Charles Lawson (Macmillan and Co.); A "Digest of the Moohummudan Law," by Neil R. S. Baillie (Smith, Elder and Co.).

WHILE the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh was in close intercourse with M. Kathoff at Moscow, just previously to that celebrated editor's decease, the Moscow Gazette refrained from even mentioning so much as the name of the discontented Hindoo Prince. It is only now, when Dhuleep Singh has sunk into mysterious oblivion, that the Moscow Gazette publishes a long article recounting the Maharajah's grievances against the British Government, and concluding with the following interesting passages:—"We have information that the rumours of Dhuleep Singh's arrival in Russia, from which country the Hindoos expect sooner or later to receive assistance in throwing off the hated English yoke, have considerably raised the spirits of the Maharajah's subjects. . . England's dealings with Dhuleep Singh show once more that that country, which boasts of its regard for justice, in reality plays the part of a remorseless plunderer wherever it can, and only mocks at justice and truth. . . . The Maharajah has decided to break entirely with the British Government, and to settle permanently in Russia. We welcome him with the assurance that he will receive among us the fullest sympathy which his fate is bound to excite."

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1887.

A DEAD MONARCH.

THE present week which ends with the anniversary of Havelock's entry into Lucknow to relieve the beleaguered Residency, carries on its record also the death of the last of the kings who once held sway in that beautiful city as rulers over many millions of people. Wajid Ali Shah, who ascended the throne of Oudh in 1847, and was deposed by the British Government in 1856, died on Tuesday last in his house at Garden Reach, Calcutta, unlamented and unhonoured even by his own countrymen. During the nine years that he was allowed to reign he proved himself to be the weakest, if not the most wicked, of the sovereigns who were lords of misrule over a province in which then tyranny, murder, rapine, and all crime revelled unchecked, but which to-day is the garden of India, rich, prosperous and happy under British rule. There are still English politicians and writers living who speak and write evil of the dead Lord Dalhousie, whose latest act of statesmanship before leaving India was to annex Oudh, and dethrone the monarch who has just died. These enemies of the great Pro-Consul hold still the theory which they have often advanced—that the terrible Mutiny of the Sepoy Army in 1857 was the result of this high-handed proceeding. It was the Nemesis, they said, which always follows upon the track of those who do wrong, whether they be individuals or nations. The annexation of Oudh, according to these purists, was an act of aggression and spoliation, conceived in the mind of an overbearing and ambitious Governor-General, and approved of and carried out by a grasping and covetous body of merchants, known as the East India Company. "The evil which men do lives after them; the good is oft buried in their graves—so let it be with Cæsar," said the friend who spoke his funeral oration; and this for years was the fate which attended the memory of one of the best and wisest of the rulers sent from England to govern India. Lord Dalhousie went to his death under a weight of reproach and misrepresentation more terrible to bear than even that of the cruel malady which laid him low. The light of truth has, however, forced its way through the clouds and mists of falsehood; and although its rays fall now only upon his grave, and can give no quickening delight to the proud and noble heart that is stilled there for ever, it is yet something to be grateful for, that before the man has been forgotten justice has claimed honour for his memory. The verdict of impartial history must be that the annexation of Oudh—for which he was taunted and reviled in 1857—was in 1887 acknowledged to be a wise, just, and merciful action. No further proof need be required to show this than the state of Oudh to-day. To those who argue that what even looks like evil must not be done on the excuse that good may come of it it may not be out of place now to recall the picture of what Oudh was before Wajid Ali Shah, who has just died, was dethroned. Writing privately from Lucknow in September, 1852, to Lord Dalhousie, Sir W. H. Sleeman, then Resident at that Court, says :—

> The King is surrounded exclusively by eunuchs, fiddlers, and poetasters, and the minister and his creatures, who are worse than all. They appropriate at least one-half of the revenues of the country to themselves, and employ none but knaves of the very worst kind in all the branches of the administration. The fiddlers have control over the administration of civil justice; the eunuchs over criminal justice, public buildings, &c. The Minister has the land revenue, and all are making enormous fortunes.

Two years afterwards there is another letter to the same effect :—

> The Minister, a consummate knave and one of the most incompetent men of business that I have ever known, has all the revenues and patronage of the country to distribute among those who have access to the King exclusively—they are poets, fiddlers, eunuchs and profligate women; and every one of them holds, directly or indirectly, some court or other, fiscal, criminal, or civil, through which to fleece the people. Anything so detestable as the Government I have nowhere witnessed, and a man less competent to govern than the King I have never known.

Sleeman was thoroughly opposed to what was then thought to be the wholesale annexation policy of Lord Dalhousie, and yet he was forced conscientiously to write to the Governor-General regarding the people of Oudh :—

What the people want, and most earnestly pray for, is that our Government should take upon itself the responsibility of governing them well and permanently. All classes, save the knaves who now surround and govern the king, earnestly pray for this—the educated classes, because they would then have a chance of respectable employment, which none of them now have; the middle classes, because they find no protection or encouragement, and no hope that their children will be permitted to inherit the property they may leave; and the humbler classes, because they are now abandoned to the merciless rapacity of the starving troops, and other public establishments, and of the landholders driven into rebellion by the present state of misrule. The people have the finest feelings towards our Government and character. All, from the highest to the lowest, would hail the advent of our administration with joy; and the rest of India, to whom Oudh misrule is well-known, would acquiesce in the conviction that it had become imperative for the protection of the people.

These letters, which were public property immediately after the Mutiny, should have disposed of the calumny that the annexation of Oudh was the cause of that catastrophe, but calumny lives long, and is hard to kill. It is not dead yet, but the news of the demise of the wretched imbecile who so misgoverned the fair Province of Oudh recalls memories which strengthen regret that truth should have still to wait for advocates and defenders.

For thirty-one years the dethroned monarch has been treated in the most liberal and considerate manner by the Power which so righteously dethroned him. He has been permitted in exile to follow all the foolish bents of his fancies to their full extent. He had no thoughts, wishes, or aspirations beyond the singers, dancers, and the menagerie which he kept at Garden Reach. It might have been a useful lesson to have taken him years ago through Oudh, and to have shown him the changes for good which followed after his evil sway had been removed; but it is possible that he would not have understood the influence to be drawn from the lesson. He was an Oriental monarch too bad to be reformed; and perhaps, after all, it was the best course to allow him to live and die as he did—in contempt of all—Europeans and Natives alike.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

At the meeting of the British Association at Manchester Mr. J. McCarthy read a paper on Siam, dealing with the natural features of the country. Mr. McCarthy spoke as follows :—

The recent English occupation of Upper Burmah, and the French occupation of Cambodia, Annam and Tong-King, is likely to bring Siam more prominently before the notice of Europeans. My description of their interesting country and people must necessarily be brief and fragmentary ; in fact I shall not be able to do more than offer a few remarks on the natural features, rivers and mountains, on the climate and the people, their social and religious condition. First, then, Siam occupies the heart of Indo-China and nearly the whole of the Malay Peninsula. It has a seaboard sweeping round the Gulf of Siam from about the 4th deg. of latitude on the Malay side to about the 11th deg. of latitude on the Cambodian side, a distance of about 1,200 miles.

A great feature of Siam proper is its magnificent system of rivers, the principal of which is the Me-Nam, Chow-Phragah, on which Bangkok stands. The river is commonly called the Me-Nam, which is, however, a generic term for all large rivers, Me meaning mother, and Nam water. At about one hundred miles from the sea there is a bifurcation of the river, both branches flowing through rich alluvial soil with a great deal of rice cultivation, the banks being well studded with villages. Towards the delta formed by the bifurcation of the river two large streams converge ; the Meklong, from the Burmese frontier on the north-west, and the Bangpakong, from the hills on the Khorat plateau, both empty themselves into the head of the Gulf of Siam. All these rivers are connected by big canals, thus enabling the Siamese to travel by boat to almost any part. The rivers and canals are always alive with boats and rafts of teak wood and bamboos. It is wonderful with what ease and confidence the smallest children can direct their tiny boats across the widest rivers ; they are, in fact, amphibious, swimming being learnt when scarcely out of the mother's arms. The country is subject to a yearly inundation, and unless the rivers overflow their banks a short rice crop is expected.

The May-Nam-Kong flows through the Northern and Eastern parts of the kingdom, receiving the waters of many large affluents, but the channel of this mighty river is so blocked with large rocks and cataracts that its navigation is very difficult, and in some parts impossible even for native craft. From the north-east of Chiengmai two ranges of mountains branch off, one running south in an unbroken chain through the Malay Peninsula to Singapore ; some of its peaks between Siam and Burmah rise to a height of 7,000 feet, one in the Malay Peninsula reaches even 8,000 feet ; the other range follows the course of the May-Nam-Kong, first running east and west, and then in a southerly direction towards Cambodia. Siam proper is mostly flat, diversified by isolated hills, and broken and jagged ridges of lime stone mountains.

Now let me say a word about the Siamese themselves. The population is variously estimated at from seven to twenty odd millions ; but I think it will be found that ten millions would be beyond the mark. The population comprises Siamese proper, Cambodians, Burmans, Annamites, Malays, and Chinese ; these latter swarm all over the country, and are specially numerous in the capital, Bangkok. The portion of the kingdom administered directly by the Central Government includes the greater part of the Malay Peninsula, and the larger portion of the May-Nam and May-Nam-Kong valley. Some Malay, Lao, and Cambodian States are tributary—that is, make offerings of gold and silver flowers to the King at Bangkok. Each ruler of these States is appointed by the King, who exercises considerable power in his own Province. The most important of the tributary States are those of the Lao, which occupy the mountainous country to the north. Those in the valley of the Me-Nam are known as the Lao Phoong Dam (black-stomached), because they tattoo their bodies from the waist to the knee, and those in the valley of the May-Nam-Kong are known as Lao Phoong Khao (white-stomached), as they do not tattoo themselves. The Lao very much resemble their brethren of Siam proper, speaking a dialect of the same language. Those of the valley of the May-Nam-Kong bear a strong resemblance in every particular. Even the words which are peculiar to the Lao in ordinary conversation are said to be used in Siamese poetry.

Passing from the people to the climate, we find that Siam, lying as it does between the parallels of 4 deg. and 23 deg. north latitude, has but two seasons, distinctly determined by the monsoons. The south-west monsoon, bringing with it rain, prevails from May till September, but the high mountain range running on the west from north to south prevents the excessive rainfall experienced on the Burman coast. From September to February the north-east monsoon blows, and from November to February dry weather proper and cool breezes prevail, rendering travelling all over the kingdom enjoyable. From the middle of February until the rain sets in the hear is very oppressive, but even at this period the thermometer seldom rises to 95 deg. in Bangkok, and in the winter occasionally falls as low as 60 deg. In the interior of the country, at places of a low elevation, the heat is intense, sometimes rising to 110 deg., while, on the other hand, at the same place in winter, the glass falls as low as 45 deg. The average annual rainfall in Bangkok is about 60 inches, but in the interior of the country, judging from the excessive inundations of the river, it must be a great deal more. Malarial fever is a common complaint. Cholera is more prevalent in Lower than in Upper Siam, being rarely absent. Small-pox is common in the Lao States. The Lao practise vaccination, believing in its mitigating influences.

The Siamese use principally herbal medicines—some of them very effective. Among the Lao superstition attributes much of the sickness to the influence of evil spirits. The different classes of Lao take opposite views of the influence of the spirits. Among the Lao Phoong Dam when a man falls ill the spirit doctor is sent for, who questions the patient, who is often in a raving fever, as to who has caused the sickness, and woe betide the unhappy individual, whether man or woman whose name may be mentioned. He is expelled the village community, as being possessed by the evil spirit who has caused the sickness, his house burnt down, and he is forced to live at some distant village expressly set apart for all possessed. With the Lao Phoong Khao, to be possessed by a spirit is a very great privilege. The Governors and everyone who can afford it has his spirit man. Nothing important is ever undertaken without consulting him. He begins by working himself into a kind of fit, then asks for a good feed and drink of rice liquor, and is prepared to answer questions. He usually drinks enough to put him into a sound sleep, and when he awakes pretends to a total ignorance of all that has taken place—a practice which recalls the performance of some of our European spirit mediums.

But let me now pass on to say a few words on some of the principal towns of Siam. The inhabitants of Siam are for the most part agricultural, and their towns mostly present clusters of villages and hamlets consisting principally of wooden houses, thickly settled on the river banks. The capital of the Siamese has always been remarkable for the magnificence of its temples, and from Chieng Sen in the north, the southward march of the Siamese is traced by the magnificent ruins of the temples of the capitals of different periods. Bangkok, the present capital, is the site of the eighth capital since Chieng Sen, which, to some extent, supports the Siamese in their claim to a history extending many hundred years back. In Bangkok the temples and palace surpass all other buildings in richness and beauty. The royal palace is the object of greatest magnificence, exciting the curiosity of all visitors.

It would be impossible to give a detailed account of the numerous temples and gorgeous buildings that surround the seat of royalty. It is here that the King presides over his Councils, and it was here that the young King published his famous edicts abolishing slavery. Within the precincts of the palace are kept the famous so-called "White Elephants," the reverence for which has been a great deal exaggerated The elephant is the national emblem of Siam, and a white specimen is regarded more as a curiosity than anything else. In many cases, but for the pink eye, it would be difficult to distinguish a "white" elephant from an ordinary one. Outside the palace walls, and within the city, besides the numerous temples and glittering pagodas, are many excellent public buildings. The foreign representatives live on the banks of the river, the river itself presenting a busy scene. Numerous canoes, with gaudily dressed women and children, gondolas, and steam launches are shooting past in a constant stream, disappearing into the numerous canals with which the whole city is interspersed, giving it the name of the Venice of the East. The population of Bangkok is variously estimated at from three to eight hundred thousand inhabitants. Khorat is one of the most important towns after Bangkok. It is a crenellated walled city, about three miles round, and built at an elevation 750 feet above mean sea level. It is one of the most important towns in the valley of the May-Nam-Kong. The district is famous for the stupendous ruins of stone temples, the same in design and construction as those to be found in Cambodia and Boroboodur, in Java. Nothing can be discovered as to the builders, all knowledge of them seems to have been lost in the past. Outside the city wall is a colony of Chinese, who carry on all the trade of the district. Chiengmai, or as it is called in Burma, Zimmé, is one of the most important towns in the Lao Phoong Dam country. It is a walled city, about five miles round, situated at an elevation of 1,000 feet on the Me-Ping or north-western branch of the Me-Nam. It is in direct communication, by boat, with Bangkok, but the journey is a tedious one, taking, under ordinary circumstances, as many as fifty days from Bangkok. The daily market is an interesting institution, mostly managed by women, of whom there are at least 1,500 employed there. Salt is so rare that it is gladly taken instead of money. Among those who throng the market, besides the usual Burman ,trades found all over Indo-China, may be seen Lliwas and Moosars, members of interesting hill tribes, the supposed aborigines of the country. The former occupy themselves peacefully in iron-smelting ; the latter are more retired, and live, with their bows and arrows, on almost inaccessible mountain tops. An English Vice-Consulate has been established at Chiengmai. There are a number of American missionary ladies and gentlemen, whose influence is spreading throughout the Lao country.

Luang Phrabang is the principal town of the Lao Phoong Khao country, and is on the May-Nam-Kong, at an elevation of about 1,000 feet above mean sea level. There is a melancholy interest attached to Luang Phrabang, as it was only a few months ago that what remained of this once powerful city was entirely destroyed by Black Flags. It is very picturesquely built at the junction of the Nam-Kan and May-Nam-Kong. It surrounds a small hill. The river, which is a thousand yards broad, is closed on all sides by hills, and presents the appearance of a lake.

As regards the commercial condition of Siam, the chief articles of export are rice, cattle, sugar, pepper, cardamoms, and ivory, exchanged chiefly for machinery and Manchester goods. From the Malay Peninsula tin, lead, gold, and rubber are exported. Lately an enterprising Siamese official started working some coal mines. The gold, worked only by Chinamen, is found in alluvial deposits near the heads of the largest rivers in the Malay Peninsula, all rising near the same mountain, the highest in the Peninsula about 8,000 feet above sea level. This mountain is now the chief home of the few remaining groups of Oorang Utan, or wild men, the aborigines of the Malay Peninsula. The Lao country is, however, that portion of the kingdom with the greatest trade resources, which are in no way developed. The principal drawback to the development of trade is want of improved communication. The chief means of communication at present is by river, a comfortable enough method for holiday seekers. In the Lao country elephants, bullocks, mules, donkeys, and carriers are to be met with in all directions carrying the trade of the country. The mules and donkeys come from Yunnan usually laden with opium. The carriers accompany the Burmese pedlers, who, with their wares spread all over the Lao country, have made the Indian rupee the current coin, nearly to the shores of the Gulf of Tong-King. They mostly carry raw silk and gum-benjamin, which they exchange for European goods from Maulmein. Mee Ung, a tea that grows indigenously all over the Lao country, is an article of local traffic. To improve the communications of the country by railways has long been the idea of the King, and the Government is now considering how to surmount the innumerable difficulties that obstruct the improvements and development of the country's resources.

We come now to consider the religion of Siam. Buddhism is the national faith. It is said that Buddhism is merely a religion of philosophy, and I have heard many Siamese claim the late Professor Darwin and many of the English professors as being real Buddhists. In the Lao country, however, spirit worship has crept into the religion to a considerable extent. Spirits disport themselves everywhere, but the tops of trees are the favourite haunt, and one very often sees all manner of offerings placed at the foot of gigantic trees to propitiate them. There are numerous temples, monasteries and excellent rest-houses, built from motives of charity for weary travellers. The monasteries contain scores of yellow-robed monks. They keep their heads shaven, even their eyebrows, and eat but one meal a day, which they must go out and beg for in the early morning. They practise celibacy, but are at liberty to leave the monastic life when they feel so inclined. Every man in the kingdom, including the King himself, must after the age of twenty-one enter the priesthood, for at least a short period. With the numerous monasteries in the country, no one need ever starve, and a man going to sleep hungry is unheard of in Siam, except under very extraordinary circumstances.

To the Governors of Provinces and Judges appointed by the King is delegated the administration of justice. The laws are excellent, the difficulty being to find the right man to administer them. Disorder is of rare occurrence, the people being eminently noted for a love of peace and quiet. In Nan, one of the Lao Provinces, the punishment for theft is death, and one's property can be literally left on the road without the slightest danger of anyone interfering with it. In support of this rigorous law the chief told me that in a period of about three years one man loses his life; whereas in countries where this law is not enforced many lives are lost in the course of a year through robbery.

The Tong-King troubles have extended to Siam, and at present the Government is engaged in suppressing the bands of Black Flags that are overrunning the north-east frontier. Under the beneficent rule of the present King, Siam is improving rapidly in every particular. Postal and telegraphic communication extends to all the important parts of the kingdom, education is being spread on a liberal basis, the King himself with several Princes editing some of the educational works. I have been some years with the Siamese and found them a kind, cheerful, and hospitable people. In conclusion, I thank you, ladies and gentlemen, for the kind indulgence with which you have listened to me.

Mr. Colquhoun, who spoke of the valuable surveying work done by Mr. McCarthy in Siam, agreed that the great want both of Burmah and Siam was that of communication. He denied that the Siamese were making that progress they desired the world to believe. For example, the slavery which the King was said to have abolished was indeed abolished, but the thing yet remained.

General Walker also spoke of the valuable work for geography done by Mr. McCarthy, who, formerly an officer of the Indian Survey, was now practically Surveyor-General of Siam.

Colonel Alexander Temple Cox, commandant 15th Regiment Madras Infantry, now commanding Shwebo District, Upper Burmah Field Force, with the temporary rank of brigadier-general, has been selected for the command of the Ceded District, in succession to the late General Way. General Cox's war services are:—Burmese War, 1852-53, medal; Indian Mutiny, 1857-58, North Canara Field Force; Afghan War, 1878-79, medal (in command of the 15th Madras Infantry); Burmese Expedition, 1886 87, medal and clasp; highly mentioned in General White's despatches. General Cox went to Upper Burmah in command of the Bhamo District in September, 1886; and, on the distribution of the commands in Upper Burmah, he was sent to relieve General Stewart at Shwebo.

Information from all the European capitals shows that the Suez Canal neutralisation negotiations are in good train and will shortly come to a conclusion. The very slowness with which the negotiations were resumed after the rupture of the Paris Conference in 1885, which had lasted two months and a half, and the slowness which has marked their course prove what difficulties must have been encountered, and what efforts both sides must have made to have now come within sight of success. In a short time the Canal and its isthmus will be added to the list of neutralised territories of the world, which already comprises Belgium, Luxemburg, Savoy, Corfu, and West Central Africa. There is no territory so suitable to such an arrangement as the Suez Canal. The Sultan in his firman of permission to construct the waterway through his Egyptian territory declared that it should be open to all vessels of commerce of all nations at all times; and its international character has already been tacitly recognised by the other European Powers when they collectively regulated the tolls to be levied on all vessels passing through Russia, in reference to the Russo-Turkish war, assured the other Powers through Prince Gortchakoff that the navigation of the Canal should be neither blockaded nor interrupted; while Great Britain offered in the Egyptian Convention, which France recently refused to accept, to undertake that the free passage of the Canal should never be impeded even in time of war. An international engagement on the part of all the Powers collectively to respect the perpetual neutrality of the Canal will, in fact, only express in words what has long been tacitly acknowledged by the proposed signatories.

COMPRISING PRACTICAL RULES FOR LEARNING THE LANGUAGE, VOCABULARY, DIALOGUE, LETTERS, AND IDIOMS, &c., IN ENGLISH AND ARABIC.

BY

Rev. ANTON TIEN, Ph.D., M.R.A.S.,

Hon. Curate of Holy Trinity, Milton-next-Gravesend; Medallist of the Roman University de Propaganda Fide; First Class Honour Man in Arabic, Syriac, and Hebrew; and Proxime Accessit in Classics. Formerly First Class Interpreter to the Allied Forces in the Crimea; K.C. of the Order of the Medjidie, &c., &c.; Author of the "Levant Interpreter" and the "Egyptian Handbook"; and Reviser of the Arabic Prayer Book, &c., &c.

"Dr Tien's little book will be found a valuable guide to the traveller who wishes not so much to talk as to understand what he hears spoken and sees written in common Arabic. In the course of a hundred pages a clever summary is provided of Arabic grammar, which will be found sufficient for all ordinary purposes, and which may easily be made the subject of further instruction from the native teacher."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"The most useful portion of the book consists of the dialogues, the idiomatic exercises, the vocabulary, and other additions of practical usefulness, such as lists of official titles, of tribal names, and information on the divisions of time, on weights and measures, currency, and commercial, legal, and political terms."—ATHENÆUM.

"The perusal of Dr. Tien's admirable work will be of the greatest value to officers and others under orders for the East."—MORNING POST.

"Will be found very useful by soldiers, officials, students, and merchants desirous of obtaining a certain degree of proficiency in the spoken language, which is becoming in those days of increasing importance."—DAILY NEWS.

"Dr. Tien's Manual can be confidently recommended as the most simple, practical, and trustworthy guide which has yet appeared."—OVERLAND MAIL.

"The rules and explanations are clear, terse, and to the point, and we cordially recommend his book to all who wish to acquire a conversational knowledge of Arabic." TRUBNER'S RECORD.

"The book is of a handy and convenient size, and both author and publishers have rendered important service in placing it within reach of students."—INDIAN DAILY NEWS.

"The author of the volume before us has done good service in compiling this Manual, in which the difficulties—and, it must be confessed, they are not a few—in mastering Arabic are reduced to a minimum."—BROAD ARROW.

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE O INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

SYSTEMS OF

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ONLY GENUINE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This caution is necessary, as many persons looking for purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Cholera, Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it .... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour. Statesman, October 1886.

.... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scarce from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India

.... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 13th September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 11th September; and from Calcutta to the 10th September.

THE VICEROY on his tour this cold weather will halt at Quetta for a few days from the 5th November, after visiting Chaman and seeing the Khojak Range. Thereafter he may pay a short visit to Karachi, halting there a day or two, and thence going along the Derajat frontier. Peshawur should be reached on the 24th or 25th, when his Excellency will pay a flying visit to Ali Musjid, and thus see the most interesting and historical part of the Khyber. Lahore will be visited the first week in December, while in the following week Agra will receive the party for a few days. The Bonares Bridge will be opened on the 16th, and Calcutta reached on the 17th.

THE Commander-in-Chief, leaving Simla early in October, travels viâ Chakrata and Mussoorie to Dehra, and thence to Rurki. He then goes straight to Sibi to accompany the Viceroy round the frontier.

LORD CONNEMARA leaves Ootacamund on the 3rd of October, and will make a tour through the Southern part of the Presidency. Calicut, Beypore, Cochin, Quilon, Trevandrum, Tinnevelly, Madura, Trichinopoly, and Tanjore represent the course and extent of the route. His Excellency finally reaches Madras on the 5th November.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab leaves Simla on October 10th on a short tour prior to going to Lahore, his main object being to see the Punjab chiefs. Mr. Lyall will probably make a long tour at the beginning of the year.

BEFORE the Government assemble for the cold weather session at Calcutta the Hon. Mr. Scoble will probably pay a visit to Rangoon to make himself thoroughly acquainted on the spot with all matters connected with the establishment of the new Chief Court in Burma. The conflicting interests which have made themselves apparent in Rangoon on the subject of a remodelled court may thus possibly be met in a manner satisfactory to all, for the fullest consideration will be given to representations made, whether on the part of the Bar, the mercantile community, or the public generally. During the stay of the Government in Calcutta Mr. Scoble will introduce a Bill applying to India such provisions of the English Mercantile Marks Act as are deemed suitable to this country. The Local Governments, the Chambers of Commerce, and other public bodies interested will be consulted in the matter, and the Bill will be made as simple and explicit as possible.

SIR OLIVER ST. JOHN has visited the Biluchistan frontier to investigate the condition of the Ghilzai refugees and provide them with work, so that they may not starve. They are mostly families, and comprise but few fighting men.

THE new and smaller edition of the Afghan Boundary Commission, which is to have the marking out of the revised frontier, will assemble on the Afghan border on or about the 31st October. A small escort of 18 to 20 sowars of the 11th Bengal Lancers, with a doctor and a Native surveyor, will be sent from India to join Major Peacock and Captain Yate by the shortest route to the Herat frontier.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE will be shortly in possession of a Despatch from India showing that the charges of land-jobbing against officials in Upper Burma are absolutely without foundation.

SIR HARRY PRENDERGAST will succeed Mr. D. Fitzpatrick as officiating Resident at Mysore.

A NUMEROUSLY attended meeting of the Members of the Uncovenanted Service was held at Calcutta on September 12th to support Mr. King, M.P., and other Members of Parliament interesting themselves in the question of the Uncovenanted Service grievances. The meeting was of a semi-private nature, and a series of resolutions recently passed at Bellary were adopted; and it was decided that a local Committee be formed to collect subscriptions; that the payment of pensions at the par or fixed rate of exchange be the main point at issue; that the unanimous support of the whole service be devoted to the removal of the grievances; that the thanks of the meeting be conveyed to Mr. King and to the Committee, Indian Uncovenanted Service Association, for the efforts they are making on behalf of the Service.

IT is reported in Calcutta that Sir Theodore Hope is likely to succeed to the Agency of the East Indian Railway.

AT the Supreme Legislative Council on 17th September Colonel Wace presented the reports of the Select Committee on the Punjab Tenancy and Land Revenue Bills.

THE Allahabad University Bill report will be presented on the 14th September, by which time the Local Government will have furnished the names of those gentlemen who hereafter will be responsible for the control of the new University. The Bill will be passed on the 22nd September, on which day also the Punjab Land Bills will become law.

THE Limbin Prince, who surrendered to Mr. Scott at Mone in May last, is now in Calcutta. He is to be allowed Rs. 500 a month for himself and free quarters, in addition to educational allowances for his children. The Prince was the last pretender of any importance to the throne of Upper Burma.

A PROCLAMATION was issued on the 9th September forbidding Burmese ecclesiastics to resort to divinations, charms or astrology to predict the future of the country, and ordering the Taberin Sadaw (Bishop), who was involved in the recent conspiracy to burn Mandalay, to appear before the Power within twenty days, on pain of excommunication. Several monks have been arrested for conspiracy.

THE Government has asked the sanction of the Secretary of State to a substantial increase being made to the sumptuary allowance of the Chief Commissioner of Burma.

THE Bishop of Lahore retires about the end of the year, and will be succeeded by Archdeacon Mathew. The Rev. Mr. Tribe, who now officiates as Archdeacon, will probably be confirmed in the appointment.

THE Court of Inquiry into the loss of the s.s. John Lawrence finds that the master, Captain Irving, was guilty of foolhardiness almost amounting to criminality, in putting to sea in the face of the weather then prevalent. The Court also pointed out the necessity for connecting the Andaman Islands with the Mainland by Cable, and of overhauling the existing Cable between the Mainland and Bassein.

THE charge against Captain Jenny of the ship Indore for navigating without side-lights has been dismissed on account of vague and unsatisfactory evidence.

A GRAND Masonic ceremonial took place at Simla on the 10th September, in connection with the installation of Mr. W. E. Parker as District Grand Master.

A BOATING accident, resulting in the death of Mr. Henderson, Local Traffic Superintendent, Mr. Rogers, Locomotive Superintendent, and a young lady, Miss Cash, has occurred at Gorakpore.

IT is reported at Madras that Mr. Justice Brandt, one of the Civilian Judges of the High Court, will retire from the service at the end of the year, and that Mr. F. H.

Wilkinson, Judge of Malabar, will be appointed to succeed him.

The experiments at Rawalpindi, under the direction of Mr. Townsend, the Canadian petroleum expert, are said to have proved highly successful. The borings have resulted in the discovery of oil of excellent quality, and there seems no doubt that the industry in the district will become general.

The Government of India have supported the proposals of the North-West Provinces Government for an extension of the jurisdiction of the High Court to Oudh.

It being admitted by the Imperial and Punjab Governments that the state of arrears in the Lahore Chief Court requires instant attention, it is likely that Mr. Roe, now officiating for Mr. Tremlett, will, on the latter's return in November, continue on the Bench until further orders.

News has been received of the safe arrival at Cabul of Mr. O'Meara, dentist, who went there to attend the Ameer. Mr. O'Meara is being treated with great hospitality by the Ameer and Afghan officials.

The value of gold imported to India during the first four months of the current financial year was Rs. 83,83,279, and of that exported Rs. 4,40,594, while the value of silver imported was Rs. 3,28,50,425, and of that exported Rs. 41,68,837. This leaves a total of imports of both metals of Rs. 3,66,24,273.

During the absence of Sir Charles Sargent Mr. Justice Bayley will act as Chief Justice of the Bombay High Court.

Mr. John Newman Harden, C.S., Assistant Collector, died of cholera at Ahmedabad on Sept. 4th.

The Ganges at Benares has risen 39 feet above low water, being greater or higher than it has been for the past twelve years.

Obituary.—Captain J. Wightman, Ordnance Department (retired), at Madras.

Safety Mineral Oil Lamps.—The Indian Press has been lately calling attention to the accidents occasioned by dangerous mineral oil lamps. In most cases the cause is to be traced to the lamp having reservoirs of China or glass, and fitted with unsafe burners. In the opinion of our ablest experts, the safest kerosine lamp is the Defries, which goes out if upset, can safely burn the most explosive oil, and be extinguished without danger by blowing down the chimney. A large demand has recently sprung up for it in earthquake countries, where it is known as the Earthquake lamp. It is the only English lamp that will burn the heavy Russian and Burmese oils, and giving twice the light of the old-fashioned Duplex with half the expenditure of oil is likely to be in large request in India.

A Happy University.—The Registrar of the Madras University, according to a Madras paper, appears to be quite a financial genius. He commenced in a very radical way by interchanging both sides of the accounts, making all the debtors creditors, and vice versâ. But he appears to have done something still more wonderful. It will be observed that the average sale of books during the years 1883-86 amounted to Rs. 5,523, which suddenly jumped in 1886-87 to Rs. 15,710. The average cost of printing, including editing, was, during the three years cited, Rs.7,524, which fell in 1886-87 to Rs.6,030. If we deduct from these amounts Rs.1,000 per annum, for the cost of printing examination papers, we shall find that the Registrar has converted a yearly deficit of Rs. 1,000 into a magnificent surplus of Rs.10,680. This does not look very like bankruptcy. Far from it—it is highly creditable, and we can only say we should like to know how it is done. The accounts are silent.

NOTES.

The appointment of Sir Joseph West Ridgeway to succeed Sir Redvers Buller as Under-Secretary for Ireland must have come upon the public somewhat in the nature of a surprise. Colonel Ridgeway is, it is said, an Irishman, but as he joined the Bengal Army in 1860, and has passed his time up to now in military or civil employ in India, with the exception of the period during which he has been engaged on the Afghan Frontier delimitation business, his experience of Ireland and Irishmen must be somewhat small. No doubt he had to be provided for in some way after the good service which he is supposed to have done in settling for ever all jealousies between England and Russia regarding Central Asian affairs; but why the Government should send him to Ireland is a question which everybody is asking, but nobody seems able to answer satisfactorily.

The Service papers have, of course, commented upon the nomination, and it is curious to note the opinions they have formed. The Admiralty and Horse Guards' Gazette considers that his being an Irishman is a distinct disadvantage, but why it does not say. We are told, however, that "the new appointment is exactly suited to his talents, and so long as he displays the same brusque flexibility that characterised his dealings with Russia he is sure to win the favour of people who are very coy and hard to please just now? This is a little bewildering, to say the least of it. Is it the Irish people or the present Government who are coy and hard to please just now? Having, however, given Sir West Ridgeway so much praise the Service journalist commences to have his doubts about him. "It is doubtful, however, whether he can quite fill the place left vacant by Sir Redvers Buller, whose justice was all the more gracious because everybody knew that it was the outcome of his own free will, and that no pressure or threats could have made the stout soldier, to whom fear is a thing unknown, budge one inch from the straight path of duty." Does this mean that pressure may make Sir West Ridgeway budge? But, if so, what about the "brusque flexibility" which makes him so exactly suited for the place?

The Broad Arrow writes in a different key:—

The announcement that Sir Joseph West Ridgeway has been appointed to succeed Sir Redvers Buller as Under Secretary for Ireland will create some astonishment in India and in Ireland. In the former country it will be accepted as a departure from the rule which with few exceptions has obtained there since we occupied the country—that officers of the Indian army must look only to the East as a field for employment. That an Indian officer who has done duty for six-and-twenty years altogether in India should be nominated to an important civil appointment in Ireland is certainly a breaking-up of an old tradition. It ought to be taken by the officers of the Indian army as a great compliment to themselves. But how about Ireland? Will not the notification give the enemies of England there further cause to blaspheme? Will it not be asked what special qualifications an officer, whose knowledge and experience of Ireland and Irishmen is absolutely nil, can have for the post to which he has been gazetted? It will surely be represented that as Colonel Ridgeway's whole career hitherto has been passed in governing "niggers," the English Government considers that this is a fitting qualification for governing Irishmen. It may be that Colonel Ridgeway may bring to his task qualifications yet undeveloped, for he has ability and energy, and is never likely to be found the round man in the square hole. But the Government need not be surprised to hear the appointment cavilled at in the spirit we have surmised.

Whichever journal be right one thing is certain—that Colonel Ridgeway has not been put upon a bed of roses, and it speaks well for his pluck that he should have accepted the post.

Although Reuter and the Times correspondent have telegraphed little news of Ayub Khan's movements since his escape from Teheran, the Indian papers to hand by the present mail give some account of his doings. It is stated that he made, after all, for Afghanistan, and turned up on the Kaian frontier about halfway between Herat and Lash Jowain. An attempt to capture him was made by an Afghan patrol, but he made good his escape towards Yezdan, in Persian territory. It was believed that he would soon be caught, but no information to that effect has yet reached England.

IT is said that he always avowed his intention of making Farah, 150 miles to the south of Herat, his objective point in case he ever attempted to raise a rebellion against the Amir. Farah is the halfway halting place between Herat and Kandahar, and Ayub Khan's presence there would doubtless have had a very disturbing influence; but if the report be true that he has headed back into Persia he has lost his opportunity, and the Amir will be stronger th n ever, for the Ghilzai rebellion has collapsed.

CAN the proverb which said that the Greeks were to be feared, even when offering presents, be applicable to an Indian Prince who offers half a million sterling as a present to Government, and writes to say that he will draw his sword on behalf of the British, too, when Russia advances to take India? The announcement of the Nizam of Hyderabad's munificent gift was hailed with much gush by the English Press, especially by the Times; then there came a mysterious telegram from Reuter's agent in Calcutta, saying that the premature disclosure of the fact might be prejudicial, but how so was not explained. The Times correspondent, telegraphing on Sunday from the City of Palaces, tells the reason. It is thought in certain quarters that the Nizam expects a quid pro quo for his generosity. The Government of India can have 20 lacs of rupees per annum for three years, but his Highness would like to get back the Berars. The Indian Government, it is now said, hesitates about accepting the gift, knowing, as it does that the restitution of the Berars has long been a matter of anxious consideration at Hyderabad. The position is now certainly a delicate one.

BUT the Times advises a very simple way out of the difficulty—namely, to take the Nizam's money and keep the Berars too. "The promised contribution was to be, in the Nizam's own words, a 'free gift.' To regard it as either directly or indirectly necessitating a return would be to ignore the force and graciousness of the phrase, and according to Oriental as well as European ideas to commit a breach of courtesy. We need not dwell upon the lamentable effect which might be expected to follow if the Nizam's offer were declined. Such a discouragement to similar acts of loyalty upon the part of our great Indian feudatories would be nothing less than calamitous."

This will be amusing reading to all who have experience of Indian Princes and their ways of giving gifts. But it may be doing the Indian Government an injustice to believe that it will refuse a gift of money in any shape. It will keep the Berars too.

A RUMOUR is going the round of the Press to the effect that, owing to failing health, Sir Richard Burton is about to retire from the Consulate Service, and settle down to purely literary work in England. On this report a contemporary remarks:—

Surely the present Government will not allow such retirement to take place without moving Her Majesty to confer some higher distinction on her Consul at Trieste than the barren honour of knighthood which he now holds. It is upwards of thirty years now since it was recorded in India that "Lieutenant Burton, of the Bombay Army, has plucked the laurels from the brow of fame at a period of life when most other young men are content to repose in the lap of pleasure. That Army, to a man, is proud of having such a distinguished officer belonging to it." When these lines were written "Hadji" Burton was about to start with his friend Speke for Central Asia. He has made many expeditions since, and has added much to geographical discovery and research. His writings are known throughout the world, and he is recognised everywhere except in his own country as one deserving of the highest honours for eminent services rendered to science and to humanity. He has, however, been permitted by England to fill the post of Consul at Trieste for sixteen years, and this is all the reward he enjoys for his labours up to the present moment.

It will indeed be a scandal if the present Government continues to neglect services so long and so honourably rendered to England as those of Burton. We hope, however, that the report regarding his failing health is exaggerated. There ought to be many years of good life and good work in the Hadji yet, and we sincerely hope so.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 2.

The loyal and munificent offer by the Nizam of Hyderabad of a gift of 60 lakhs of rupees (or, taking the rupee at par, of £600,000) is still under the consideration of the Government. The inducement to accept it is very great, as it would constitute a noble example for the other feudatory Princes to unite in common action cemented by sacrifices rendered for the protection and safeguard of the Empire. The moral effect would be almost incalculable of permitting the feudatory princes to appreciate the fact that they were earning the grateful recognition of the Sovereign State by combining in one magnificent endeavour of united self-sacrifice to convert the possibility of an Indian invasion—at present regarded as by no means utterly remote—into a consideration of absolute insignificance.

With all these reasons favouring acceptance one very grave difficulty lies in the way. Unless Government determines to restore the Berars, it can hardly with any decent regard to its own self-respect consent to accept a heavy pecuniary obligation from a State which has been for so many years agitating this vexed question. I take it, therefore, that the question of the acceptance or rejection of the Nizam's offer will be entirely determined by the Government's intention to retain or restore the Berars. But, whether the offer be accepted or not, the Nizam has earned the foremost place among the feudatory Princes by his offer and the chivalrous terms in which it was couched.

The Bombay Times, after eulogizing the proposal, suggests that, whereas the Nizam offers the aid of his sword whenever the hour of battle may arrive, this indicates the direction in which the money should be employed. At present the feudatory Native armies are useless, but with some expenditure the Nizam's troops could be properly drilled and officered. If the feudatory armies were re-organised they would constitute a splendid reserve and a second line of defence. An Allahabad paper suggests that the Nizam's gift should be employed as the nucleus of a fund for raising a Native militia. This would afford congenial occupation for the militant Native aristocracy. The paper points out that in former times loans from the feudatory Powers were of frequent occurrence. In 1814 the Nawab of Oudeoffered Lord Moira a million sterling as a free gift towards the expenses of the Mahratta war. The Nizam's munificent proposal differs from all others in that it shows devotion to a distinct purpose of a patriotic character. To reject the offer would repel and discourage the generous donor. To accept it will be to put on record a splendid instance of loyalty and patriotic spirit, and perhaps evoke an outburst of similar enthusiasm throughout the whole of India.

The 20th annual exhibition of the Simla Fine Arts Society was opened on the 26th ult. by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. In the course of his speech he said:—

"People who are fond of saying disagreeable things of Simla—and this includes most of those who do not come here—are fond of charging us with spending our leisure time in nothing higher than big dinners, dances, tennis, and flirtation. We all know this is a horrid calumny; but it is a useful addition to our concerts, lectures, tableaux, and private theatricals to have this art exhibition, as a crowning proof that we are really, to use an American phrase, very high-toned people, devoted to all the arts, and much more æsthetic in our tastes than our calumniators in the plains below."

A simultaneous rifle match was fired on Sept. 28 throughout India. Each team consisted of 10 men, and the conditions were—seven rounds a man at 200, 500, and 900 yards. The 2nd Warwickshire won with 918 points, Simla made 888, the South Wales Borderers at Tounghoo made 847, the Scottish Borderers at Meerut 805, and the 9th Dragoon Guards at Mhow 787. Highest possible score, 1,050. General Roberts, at a recent prize distribution at the Simla meeting, expressed the great necessity for accurate shooting and the bounden duty of officers to encourage to their utmost rifle-shooting among soldiers and Volunteers. Experience in campaigns showed the great results achieved by a handful of men expert with the rifle, but it remained to be seen what could be effected if a brigade or division or a whole army corps were composed of crack shots. If he ever commanded an army in the field again, he should select those regiments who were not merely well drilled, but who had shown at the musketry range that they could shoot well.

In commenting on the necessity of army reform, the Bombay Times points out that while every effort is being made to secure young and efficient European officers, all endeavours in this direction are neglected as regards Native officers. In a late Order General Roberts pointed out that commissioned officers are promoted from non-commissioned officers at too advanceed an age. Officers in all other armies are appointed young, so as to be able to bear the strain and fatigue of campaigning. The Duke of Connaught is believed to support the idea of an Indian Sandhurst for training Native officers.

The prosecution of Rukhmabai for alleged libel has been dismissed in the Bombay Court. Rukhmabai alleged in a letter published in the local papers that her husband's uncle, with whom her husband expected her to live, kept a mistress, to avoid the tyranny of whom his lawful wife had attempted to commit suicide by jumping into a well. The Chief Magistrate decided that there was a legal justification and excuse for the alleged libel, expressing the opinion that the relations of the complainant and the woman in question were of a most equivocal character. He also held that there was a good ground for the belief that complainant's wife did attempt to commit suicide to avoid the tyranny of his alleged mistress. Rukhmabai and her grandfather were accordingly acquitted.

The Lady Dufferin Fund obtained subscriptions between the beginning of May and the end of August to the amount of 121,325 rupees.

Calcutta, Oct. 2.

Ayoub Khan still remains uncaptured. Nothing trustworthy is known as to where he is concealed. He is probably in the Herat district, where he has numerous sympathisers and supporters. His escape has been the cause of great anxiety to the Ameer, and may form a pregnant source of future trouble unless he be speedily re-captured.

A Native correspondent reports the effect of the news of Ayoub's escape at Cabul. The Ameer is said to have summoned the chiefs of several tribes, and demanded more men to garrison Cabul and Ghazni. He also cancelled various taxes, including one of Rs.5 on the re-marriage of widows, another of Rs.10 on first marriage, that on lands belonging to mosques and on estates belonging to deceased persons, as well as sundry other imposts. All these Native reports must, however, be accepted with considerable caution, for, although generally based in some degree on fact, they are apt to become coloured and amplified while filtering through the various minds of the narrators.

To-day's telegram from Quetta states that Ayoub's uncertain fate continues to excite the deepest interest in Southern Afghanistan. His partisans declare themselves confident that he will succeed in reaching the neighbourhood of Farah. Only one Ghilzai chief of importance has reached the frontier. He is under surveillance at Quetta. The rest have gone north to join the Suleiman Khel Ghilzais, a section of whom it is rumoured are in arms.

The new military road through the Bori Valley is nearly completed. This will afford a direct route from the Punjab to Pishin, avoiding Sukkur and Sibi, where the rail is liable to interruption by floods from the Indus.

The whole of Southern Afghanistan is now tranquil in expectation of the Ameer's arrival at Candahar. On the occasion of his last visit in 1881 he marched from Cabul to suppress by means of the Ghilzai troops the revolt of the Duranis, who had enthusiastically espoused Ayoub's cause. He owed his final success to the Ghilzai troops. He was there regarded as the champion of Cabulee and Ghilzai supremacy. This state of things lasted till the late rebellion, which was occasioned by excessive and unusual taxation. He is now preparing to abandon the policy followed by the Ameers for the last twenty years, and to crush the Ghilzai tribes by the dismissal from the army and Government employ of all the Ghilzai tribesmen. They are being rapidly replaced by Duranis, who are being conciliated in every direction. Regiments are being formed and officered by their chiefs.

The Ameer now proposes to make a personal visit to Candahar; while it is officially rumoured he will consider it in future his capital, as formerly in the time of the Abdali Kings. He probably deems it highly advisable to be on the spot to crush Ayoub's endeavour to excite and encourage disaffection, as well as to adopt permanent measures by personal supervision to resist the threatened Russian aggression.

BURMA.

Rangoon, Oct. 2.

Reports from Upper Burma show that much dacoity on a small scale is still prevalent. At Myingyan a police station has been burnt by dacoits. The only district seriously disturbed and not under military control is the Yaw division.

In March and April, 1888, two batteries of artillery, one regiment of British Infantry, and ten regiments of Native Infantry, will be withdrawn from Upper Burma, and the garrison of Lower Burma will also be reduced by one regiment of Native Infantry.

The health of the troops in Upper Burma is at present unsatisfactory, but an improvement may be looked for when the state of the country permits the unhealthy stations now occupied to be given up.

There are numerous complaints regarding the administration of justice in Upper Burma, and reform is urgently required.

The principal operations in Burma during the cold season will be in the Yaw country, between the Irrawaddy and Lushia and the Arracan Hills.

It is proposed that at the close of these operations the force engaged shall detach survey columns to examine the hills with a view to ascertaining the possibility of establishing overland communications between India and Burma, a matter to which great importance is attached.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

TEMPERANCE WORK IN THE ARMY.

(Pioneer.)

The Rev. Mr. Gelson-Gregson, writing from London, under date August 10, says:—

"I have been asked by several members of this Association whether I approve of the proposed alterations in connection with temperance work in the Army, and hope you will kindly allow me to reply through your columns, which are read throughout the Army, and so reach all who are interested in the promotion of abstinence from drink.

"I. When I left India and made over the office of this Association to the Rev. E. T. Beatty, he promised me that no alteration would be made in the principles or pledge. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief assured me that no change should be made either in the name or pledge of the Association. But for these promises I would never have made over the work to another.

"II. The Association has now been tried, and has proved itself of great service to the Army for the past twenty-five years; and from the time of Lord Napier it has secured the support and approval of all Commanders-in-Chief down to the present time. Moreover, the Government grant which was made to this Association will be forfeited should any change be made, as that grant cannot be applied to another Society on different principles.

"III. This Association embraces all ranks and all denominations, and has been supported by the men of every sect; so that the men have always felt that it was their Special Association to which they belonged, although they might, for denominational purposes, unite with other sections of the temperance cause.

"IV. The Total Abstinence Pledge has been approved at the Horse Guards, and was the first to recognise the importance of allowing a member to resign his connection with the Association without breaking his pledge. The clause in the pledge, "So long as I retain this pledge," was inserted by Lord Chelmsford. No other pledge is of any practical use in the Army. The Chaplain-General in England has most decidedly expressed his opinion against any other pledge for soldiers.

"V. Should any alterations be made, I take this opportunity of informing our societies that I shall take steps to keep them working on the old lines, and maintain the work of the Association on its principle of total abstinence.

"VI. In a copy of On Guard a portrait of Lord Wolseley has appeared as an illustrious abstainer. Allow me to correct this statement, as it is well known that such is not the case; and it must be painful for him to be placed in a false position, and very injurious to the best interests of the cause of temperance in the Army for him to be so misrepresented.

"VII. I am too deeply interested in the cause of temperance in the Army to apolcgise for taking up your space on such a subject; and as I am continually meeting men who were once serving in India I desire to express my strong conviction that the proposed change would wreck the temperance work in the Army, and prevent them from taking the position they are now occupying in civil situations through the abstinence principles they accepted and maintained as members of this Association while in India.

"I hope this warning will be in time to prevent any change being made with a work which has been abundantly proved to be practical and successful in promoting sobriety in the Army."

GOVERNMENT AND CINCHONA.

The Indian Agriculturist makes some very apposite remarks on the attitude which the Madras Government continues to maintain in the Cinchona enterprise. It says:—

We reproduce in another column the whole of the correspondence that has passed between the Madras Chamber of Commerce and the Government, regarding the interest of the latter in the Cinchona plantations, to the detriment of private enterprise. In conjunction with this should be read the report submitted by Mr. Lawson on the turbine and disintegrator, which have recently been put up in the Government Cinchona estate at Naduvatum, on the Nilghiris. The impartial reader will at once see that the Government is determined upon driving private enterprise entirely out of the market in respect of this important industry. It is not a dignified position for a great Government, with an unlimited public purse at its disposal, to pose as a rival to private enterprise. There is no other inference to be drawn from the correspondence before us. It does not at all appear necessary that the Government should keep up such vast plantations solely for the purpose of ascertaining by experiments whether "a febrifuge which will be effective as well as so cheap as to be within the means of the poor," can be manufactured. The Government plantations in Southern India alone are expected to yield about 100,000 lbs. of bark this year, to disintegrate which machinery has been erected which will turn out nearly one ton of powdered bark per day, and yet the Government tells an intelligent public that the whole of this will be required for the purposes of the experiment, to obtain a suitable febrifuge! We have more than once expressed our conviction, and we reiterate it, that the time has arrived for the Government to retire from the Cinchona industry in India, as a supplier of public wants.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

(Indian Planters' Gazette.)

Our readers may remember that on one or two occasions we ventured to differ from a pretty widely expressed opinion that Technical Education was a pressing need of India. Sir William Hunter, in his Convocation Speech as Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University, brought the subject into importance, and in substance said that Lord Ripon had begun a great work in the education of the people of India (he appointed a Commission, of which Sir W. W. Hunter was President, and the Commission issued a report which nobody read), and that Lord Dufferin would gracefully complete that scheme by crowning it with a wise and beneficent system of Technical Education. It is only fair to Sir William Hunter to say that he did not originate this cry of Technical Education for India. His mind is not an originative one, it is a powerful assimilant of other men's ideas. This cry for Technical Education was taken up with loving tenderness and enthusiasm by the Native Press, and if the Government of India had a pice that it could spare it certainly would have provided this white elephant, and earned the passing laudation of Babudom. There was no money to spare, there was weeping and woe and lamentation in every Presidency, and Sir Steuart Bayley howled over the poverty of Bengal like an Irish banshee He stood in the middle of Dalhousie Square and metaphorically turned the cash bags of the Presidency outside in to show there was nothing in them, and cast a loving, longing, lingering look behind at the splendid money bags of his predecessor, Sir Ashley Eden, the red-haired friend of the indigo-planter. Sir William Hunter, shocked beyond measure that his Vice-Chancellor's speech produced sound and nothing more, went on leave to England in time to join in the Jubilee festivities and console himself with the honorary Cambridge LL.D. Lord Dufferin returned to Simla, looking straight along both sides of his nose and showing his perfect teeth in that sweet smile of his which does duty for a lot of things. Sir Steuart Bayley, after a short sojourn at Darjeeling, has been on tour, and he has lost no opportunity of flapping together before the eyes of his audiences the empty cash bags of the Presidency, and turning his official trousers pockets outside in. The indigenous arts of India must fall back on some other resource to quicken them into life than the Provincial and Imperial treasuries. The arts of India grew slowly to beauty and perfection unaided by technical schools or technical training, except what was handed down through successive generations, improved and perfected from sire to son. It is interesting in this connection to note that, notwithstanding the long years of agitation for technical education in England, the Government has very wisely left private benevolence and the munificence of guilds to do all that has been done, and it is also worthy of note that men who are not zealots or fanatics are beginning to realise that the sceptre of England's supremacy in the arts began to pass from the grasp of her artisans when the trading guilds ceased to perform their appropriate functions.

EXAMINATION OF OFFICERS IN HINDUSTANI.

The recent order by Sir Frederick Roberts, inveighing against the manner in which examinations in the lower standard of Hindustani have been held, is marked by great plainness of speech, and has created quite a little flutter among possible candidates for that not very difficult test. Hitherto any subaltern in want of Rs. 180 at once turned his attention to this examination as a sure and easy means of replenishing his exchequer. To enable himself to qualify he was supposed to be able to translate a piece of the Bagh-o-Bahar into English, and to converse more or less fluently with an ordinary native of India, besides writing out in the English character a few easy sentences turned from English into Hindustani. The candidate was not supposed to read through the whole of the Bagh-o-Bahar. He was only examined as to his knowledge of the second Durvesh and the surprising adventures of Azad Bakht. In the second Durvesh there is a well-known story of how one day an old man and an old woman, taking with them some of their children, went out into the jungle to gather sticks. Passing by the place where the famous Hatim Tai was in hiding, for whose capture a reward of five hundred gold pieces had been offered, they began lamenting their hard fate in having to gather sticks in order to keep body and soul together, whereas if they could but capture Hatim they would take him to the King, and, receiving the promised reward, would spend the rest of their days in peace and plenty. Hatim overhears the poor old couple deliberating, and with that generosity for which he is renowned gives himself up to them and goes with them to the King, who gives the reward to the aged pair, and restores Hatim Tai to all his honours. The simple and easy style of the Hindustani in which this little story is written has much endeared it to the British subaltern. In fact, so much does he appreciate this artless tale of generosity that he frequently studies it, to the exclusion of the rest of the Bagh-o-Bahar, and presents himself for examination, trusting to his profound knowledge of the anecdote of Hatim Tai to pull him through. A good-natured examiner will generally put the candidate on at this favourite piece, but, should he try him with something out of Azad Bakat it is not uncommon for the ingenuous subaltern frankly to avow his preference for Hatim, and his earnest wish once more to improve his mind by a recital of that moving episode. There is a story told of a young medico who presented himself for examination by the Lower Standard, on the strength of having learnt the first ten lines of the above story by heart, but, unfortunately, when he appeared before the committee, the whole thing went out of his head, and becoming speechless, he had to retire and hope for better luck next time. But it must not be supposed that the troubles of the subaltern, who aspires to earn Rs. 180 without much labour, are over when he has finished his Bagh-o-Bahar. Far from it. Even suppose he has been put on at his pet piece, and has got through it without a hitch, he has still to write out in Hindustani (using English characters) a certain number of easy sentences, such as, "There will be a parade to-morrow," and similar phrases; and he has to talk to some intelligent Native, who is generally a Mahomedan sepoy, marched up from the lines for the purpose. This latter ordeal the British subaltern, although not popularly supposed to be overburdened with bashfulness, finds rather trying as a rule. It is all very well for the examiner to suggest, in an off-hand way, a variety of topics of conversation, such as the weather, the length of time the sepoy has been in his regiment, how many children he has, how he likes Dustypore, &c. The candidate does not find it so easy to make conversation with a man who stands to attention, and says "Jee, ha sabeb," to everything that is said to him, including the questions as to how many children he has, thus showing that whether, owing to defects of pronunciation, or some other cause, he does not quite grasp the drift of this sort, it comes as a great relief to the young gentleman to find that he is considered qualified according to the Lower Standard, and that he may draw his Rs. 180 from a paternal Government. And, doubtless, it must have come as a painful shock to examiners and examined alike to find that, "The Commander-in-Chief regrets to notice the lax manner in which examinations in Hindustani by the Lower Standard are conducted." It is true that we live in an age when no institution, however venerable, can be considered safe, but it will none the less cause a feeling of gentle regret in many bosoms to find that the hand of the reformer has been stretched out against the old easy going methods of earning Rs. 180 by passing the Lower Standard.—Times of India.

THE Sepoy who assaulted Mr. Maries, the park superintendent of H.H. the Maharaja of Durbungha, has been found guilty of hurt, and sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment. Both the assessors found him not guilty, holding that the identification was insufficient; but the Judge differed from them in opinion.

THE Indian Daily News announces the death by drowning of Mr. W. J. Carpenter, late in the employ of Messrs. Schroder, Smidt and Co. While in the execution of his duties at Budge-Budge, near Calcutta, he fell off the ship Charger's ladder into the river, and was seen no more. It appears the ladder, which extended from the jetty to the ship, gave way while he was on it, and thus caused the accident. All the available appliances on board were used for his rescue, but in vain. It is supposed he must have been carried away by the force of the under-current.

MADRAS.

The hearing of the Morgan-Ross case was resumed on Sept. 7th. The Magistrate said the evidence of Mrs. Morgan with the corroborative evidence of the servants, whatever value might be placed upon the latter, was sufficient to justify his framing a charge of adultery against Mr. Ross, which he accordingly did, rejecting the more serious charge. Mr. Ross being asked to plead, said he was not guilty, and that the charge was utterly false. The Magistrate said he would commit the case for trial at the High Court Sessions, there being special circumstances in the case which led him to do so. In fact, such a course had been anticipated by the High Court when it transferred the case to Madras. In cross-examination, Mrs. Morgan said that the confession she made to her husband was not extorted by threats or inducements; when she saw that her husband knew the facts she made the confession, thinking it would move him to pity, and that he would have compassion upon and forgive her. The prosecutor was cross-examined, and said that he had suspected his wife from the date of her return from England in consequence of her general behaviour and manner towards him, which seemed cold and indifferent. The case has been committed to the High Court Sessions, Mr. W. Morgan, Government Solicitor, and Colonel Warner being sureties for the appearance of Ross.

REMINISCENCES OF BURMA.

Written after spending a night on the Irrawaddy on the way up to Mandalay:—

There's a lively little creature which is known as Amos Keeter, and it couldn't be much fleeter if it tried;
It is ever sweetly singing while about you, swiftly winging, seeking out a place for stinging through your hide;
In gore 'tis ever wadin', lanced from grandam and from maiden, till its veins are overladen with the stuff;
And yet, though rich its diet, the small creature ne'er is quiet, and you really can't come nigh it—which is tough;
You think you're sure to lam it, and 'gainst the bulk head you jam it, but you'll sadly mutter damit, as it skips;
Oh, smart is Amos Keeter, on your very nose he'll teeter, and he says, "This is my meet-er," as he nips.
Confound the wretched creature, he swells your every feature, as he bleeds you like a leech or dineth off your face,
There is surely none in Shoel, or the keeper of that goal, would never keeper his subjects in their place.

THE LUCKNOW DINNER.

Field-Marshal Lord Napier of Magdala presided on Monday, at the Hôtel Métropole, at a dinner given in commemoration of the entry into the Residency of Lucknow by officers of the force under General Havelock and General Outram, whose grand exploit marked the turning point in the sad history of the Indian Mutiny, when the British troops began to turn the tide of disaster and to win back our great revolted Dependency. Associated with these gallant gentlemen for the first time were four members of the original garrison of Lucknow, who were in a position to appreciate the service rendered to them by the relieving force, which, in the performance of their great feat of arms, lost twenty-five per cent. of their strength. Supporting the President were General Sir William Olpherts, Lieutenant-Generals Dodgson, Sir H. Havelock-Allan, J. Spurgin, Major-Generals Digby Barker, Limond, Lynch, Macbean, Oldfield, Swanston, Colonels Chamier, Maitland, H. Pearson, G. Stewart, Deputy Inspecting-Generals Jee and Swettenham, Deputy Surgeon-General Clarke, Lieutenant-Colonels Battine and Skrine, Majors Beaumont and Finlay, Captain Robertson, and Mr. H. D. Willock. The members of the original garrison were Lieutenant-General M'Leod Innes, Deputy Surgeon-General Partridge, Mr. W. C. Capper, and Mr. G. H Lawrence.

After the dinner and the loyal toasts a few moments were devoted as "a tribute of solemn thought to the memory of departed comrades, coupled with the names of our beloved commanders, General Havelock, General Outram, and Brigadier-General Neil."

The Chairman, addressing the assembly as comrades and brother officers, said it was with deeper interest than he could express in words that he offered the next toast for their acceptance. It was most gratifying to him to come there and see so many of the force of General Havelock and General Outram together. The feat of arms in which they had all taken a part was one which had never been surpassed in our military history. The great character of the leaders had given them a permanent place in the affection, the gratitude, and the admiration of all who had served under them. They would never forget the gallant and glorious Outram, to whom nothing was too great to try, who desired to grasp not only every honour that a General could win, but also the distinction that was open to the soldier—the Victoria Cross—(cheers). Let them always remember the pure and high-minded Havelock—(cheers)—whom nothing could daunt or overcome. They might lament that he was not there amongst them; but if he had lived he might, in the course of years, have sunk quietly—as some of them did—into the grave, and there would not be that halo which now surrounded his memory as a hero who died in the field of his glory. Let them ever remember to impress upon the young officers who were coming forward to emulate the example of Havelock—(cheers). Let them also ever remember Neil, their high-spirited leader—(cheers). They could not tell why such things happened, why he who had apparently so great a career before him had been cut off. While there, however, he had done inestimable work in the first days of the Mutiny. Let them remember the many brave officers and gallant soldiers who fell by their sides in doing their duty; and remember with gratitude those who had given their lives to gain the victory by which those who survived had benefited—(hear, hear). It was very gratifying to see there every branch and department of the force represented. The staff was represented by their gallant friends Sir H. Havelock-Allan and General Dodgson. They had also General Spurgin, whose career he had watched since the Mutiny with the greatest interest; and he had always felt great sorrow when General Spurgin did not get the rewards he had deserved so well. He was glad General Spurgin was present, and he was sure all who saw his work in Lucknow remembered and respected it—(cheers). Perhaps as an Engineer he might be forgiven for coming to the Engineer Department, and expressing the satisfaction he felt at seeing present General Innes and General Limond. They had the Commissariat represented—and they owed a great deal to the Commissariat administered by General Macbean. They had the 78th represented by Colonel Barker, Colonel Skrine, Major Finlay, and Captain Robertson. He well remembered when the Yellow House was captured by a party of the 78th, and the shells began to fall amongst them, the clear voice of Macpherson saying, "Steady, men." The 5th Fusiliers—a good regiment indeed—was represented by General Oldfield, and they all remembered the way in which poor Colonel Simmons gave up his life at the head of his regiment—(hear, hear). The Artillery they had represented by Colonel Maitland and General Sir William Olpherts. He had put the subaltern first, but the General could afford to let the subaltern have that credit, seeing that he was subaltern, general, and everything else at that time—(laughter and cheers). They all remembered his gallop through the gates of Lucknow, when the General had asked him, "Can you take your guns through and open on the enemy?" and his cheery reply, "Nothing easier, sir"—(cheers). As to the Medical Department, in praise of whose services they could not say enough—(hear, hear)—he was very sorry that Sir Joseph Phayres was not present; but everyone who suffered—and few there were who did not suffer—must recollect how much they owed to the Medical Department, represented by Surgeon-General Clarke, Dr. Partridge, and Dr. Jee—(cheers). Before asking them to drink the toast in solemn silence he must allude to the loss in Burma of their genial and bright friend, General Crommelin, and recall the distinction he had earned during the Mutiny in crossing the Ganges with very insufficient material made up of country boats. In conclusion, he hoped that for many years that meeting might go on. Though he could not hope to be for many more years amongst them he trusted there would continue to be the annual meeting of the remnant of the party whom war had united in bonds which were lifelong—(cheers).

The toast was drunk in solemn silence.

Sir H. Havelock-Allan proposed "The Health of our Living but Absent Comrades, whom we wish were with us." He said he held in his hand a list of twenty-five of their old comrades, who were still serving Her Majesty in various departments and in various parts of the world. Though absent, he was sure they were all present in mind and spirit. In a brief reference to some few of those absent comrades, it would not be right to omit mention of General Gray, that fine type of a soldier of the Indian school, now in the 96th year of a green old age. All would bear in sorrowing recollection their gallant friend Sir Herbert M'Pherson, who had died in the place of glory in command of an army in the field in Burma. Referring to another of the Lucknow heroes now serving in India, Major General Sir John Hudson, as one destined to fill yet higher posts in the Indian Army, Sir Henry next mentioned the K.C.B. Jubilee honours which had been bestowed on himself and General Sir Fraser Tytler, in recognition of the services of Havelock and Outram's force, and said that they were so rewarded as representative members of the force; but it was to the gallantry, devotion, and patriotism of the glorious soldiers who had won those victories they owed the honour which had been conferred on them. He was glad that they had amongst them representatives of the old garrison of Lucknow, and he howed that for many years to come there would be on the occasion of that annual celebration a further development of that principle of amalgamation. In proposing the toast of their absent comrades, who were still serving Her Majesty, he was sure they would all join with him in the hope that these comrades would still rise in the profession to which did so much honour—(cheers). Long might they meet annually under the presidency of Lord Napier to commemorate a feat of arms which the noble Lord had said had never been surpassed, and, he would venture to add, had never been equalled.

The toast was drunk with all the honours.

General Sir William Olpherts, in proposing "The Members of the Original Garrison of Lucknow, whom we relieved," said that was the thirtieth anniversary of the day when the force under General Havelock and General Outram had succeeded in entering Lucknow. In doing what they had done to aid their beleaguered comrades they had done their duty as far as in them lay, and he hoped the officers of the garrison were satisfied with their exertions—(hear, hear). He was glad the scope of the dinner had been extended to embrace the officers of the old garrison—(cheers). Their exploits and services stood out alone, and in trying to relieve them they had only done their duty, and they only claimed the credit which was due to the officers and men of the force to which they belonged—(cheers). He begged to propose the health of the illustrious Garrison of Lucknow, coupled with the name of Lieut.-General M'Leod Innes, V.C.—(cheers.)

The toast was drunk with acclamation, and was acknowledged by the gallant officer named.

The final toast was "Success to future Anniversaries," proposed by Major-General Lynch, and heartily drunk by the assembled officers.

Of Indian Tea the largest sales to date this season have been held during the current week, comprising over 32,000 packages. Owing partly to revival in the demand, consequent on the reduced rates lately stablished, there has been more general buying, and prices for useful to fine description have been fairly maintained, the market closing with a slightly firmer tone. There has, however, been a large proportion of teas with good appearance and tip, but thin and pointless, which have sold irregularly, and, on the whole, in buyers' favour. Old Season's Broken have attracted more attention, and on account of their strength have sold relatively better than similar descriptions of the new crop. Present currencies are in many instances nearly approximate to the lowest quotations of last season. Assams still show useful quality generally, although in some estates deterioration is noticeable, and finest kinds are scarce. THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER OF INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—The Duke of Connaught is reported in the Times of the 26th ult. to have said at a meeting in Bombay that the late General Macgregor's "writings had earned the gratitude of Englishmen, and that he deserved credit for having pointed out the risks on the North-West Frontier of India, and the system that ought to be adopted for strategic fortifications."

General Macgregor's system of defence for the North-West Frontier was embodied in a report which, not having been published, is not generally known, and could, therefore, evoke no popular gratitude for its author. Certain extracts from that report, however, found their way some years ago into an Anglo-Indian paper, and from those extracts the system in question appeared to be closely connected, if not identical, with the "scientific frontier" and the "forward policy" of which we heard so much during and after the late Afghan war. This "forward policy," when acted upon in 1876-80, proved remarkably unsuccessful, and has been condemned by the opinions of the highest authorities on the subject, expressed under official responsibility. General Macgregor's system, therefore, if it be, as has been surmised, identical with the "forward frontier policy," involving the establishment of British garrisons in Afghanistan, does certainly not seem entitled to the gratitude of Englishmen who have at heart the safety of our Indian Empire.

HOW AYOUB KHAN FLED FROM TEHERAN.

After his first attempt at flight in 1885 (writes the Teheran correspondent of the Daily News), Ayoub Khan was retained as a State prisoner in Teheran. At first he was not allowed to leave his dwelling or to receive suspicious visitors, and a company of soldiers was placed round his house. By degrees, however, the watch relaxed, and lately he was permitted to walk about in the city, but not to leave its precincts. Ayoub Khan's youth and turbulent spirit could not, however, bear the tedium of an inactive life. To dissipate suspicion, he sent for his wives and younger brother, whom he had left at Mashhad, and made every preparation as for a permanent residence in the capital. He lived quietly, received few visitors, and visited as few people as possible. To all appearance he was resigned to his fate. In the beginning of last spring he petitioned the Persian Government for permission to reside during the summer in the country, as town was too hot. The permission was granted. Ayoub Khan, in order to blind all who were interested in his fate, left his two wives, his younger brother, and most of his people in town, and removed with his third wife and a few attendants. but with all his horses, to the number of eighteen, to Tejrish, a village and a summer resort about eight miles from the city, in which place he chose for his residence a dwelling with a garden, adjacent to the Turkish Embassy. As soon as he was settled in his country house he despatched letters to his followers and partisans in Khorassan to come and wait for his subsequent messages at different places on the road from Teheran to Mashhad. Everything being to his satisfaction, he left his wife's apartments on the night of Aug. 12, dressed as a Persian, passed over a wall to an open place, where he found ten of his Afghan horsemen waiting with three yadaks (led horses to be mounted when the mounted one is tired), and immediately hurried off to a rendezvous, where he was joined by his younger brother with six other horsemen from the town. He forthwith set out for Khorassan. It is believed that Ayoub Khan took with him about 5,000 tomans (£1,600) in cash, saved out of the pension granted to him by English generosity. In the morning his attendants and guards of honour, not seeing him come out as usual from his inner apartment, inquired about him. They were told by his wife, through the medium of one of her maids, that the Prince was ill, and a letter in the Prince's own handwriting and seal was given to one of the waiters, who was to take it to town and fetch some medicine. Every morning a similar letter was despatched, and some kind of medicine procured. This went on till the eighth day, when suspicion arose about this remarkable illness. This suspicion was communicated to the Moshir-ud-Dowleh, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, who, wishing to ascertain the truth for himself, called in person on August 24. The wife then informed the Minister that the Prince, twelve days previously, had quitted the capital for Khorassan, and that he had left a letter for the King. Ayoub Khan, in this letter, as is given out, after thanking his Majesty for his kindness and the royal hospitality accorded to him, added that it had become impossible for him to endure any longer a life of inactivity ; that he could not do otherwise than leave the place ; that he hoped his Majesty would graciously pardon him ; and, lastly, he recommended his family and men to the Shah's generosity. It is thought by some that the Minister for Foreign Affairs was not altogether strange to Ayoub Khan's meditated flight ; but the imputation appears to be unfounded. The Afghan Prince planned and effected his escape without the knowledge of his attendants, his friends, and even of his two chief counsellors.

CHINA AND NEPAUL.

Mr. Charles Girdlestone, British Resident in Nepaul, writes to The Times from the Residency, Khatmandu, Aug. 24, giving some interesting particulars of the relations between these two States. He briefly reviews the missions that has been sent from the latter to the former, and then proceeds :—

The above summary shows that two persons writing for the English public have alluded to this mission (that of 1886) as an indication of Nepaul's subservience to China, that the Anglo-Indian officials concerned have had full cognisance of the matter, that of late years non-officials have contributed such information as was in their power, and that a member of the Anglo-Indian Press has in the last instance drawn attention to the subject. The Government of India has, of course, been kept fully acquainted by its officials in Nepaul and by the Legation at Peking. But as Nepaul was at liberty to act as she chose in the matter there was obviously no ground for interference. There is no national importance attached in Nepaul to the mission ; and at the Chinese Court it is one of many similar incidents, and therefore passes almost unnoticed.

There is no reason for supposing that the letter from its sovereign which each mission has taken is less ornate in style than the Peking Gazette has represented. Oriental languages abound in high-sounding phrases, the use of which is de rigueur in official correspondence. For every native ruler in India a form of address has been laid down, the wording of which is in direct proportion to his importance. The mention of the Viceroy of India in a vernacular letter has to be accompanied by a string of honorifics. Etiquette requires that if I write to the Minister of Nepaul, or he to me, in Persian each should begin by saying that he longs for an interview with the other, though we may both have been constantly together of late and know that we shall meet again on the morrow. However controversial the letter might be, we must respectively be "this friend" and "that friend" to one another throughout its contents, and our differences must be wound up with the most polite expressions possible for leave-taking. But such complimentary diction means no more than the "obediently yours," "sincerely yours," "may it please your Grace," and the like of the English letter writer.

The relation of Nepaul to China was fairly enough indicated in a recent expression of the Chinese Residents at Lhasa (Peking Gazette, Aug. 17, 1886) that "Nepaul is one of the distant dependencies, and possesses the right of self-government." The quinquennial missions, to which the official intercourse between the two countries is almost, if not quite, limited, are treated in the audience with the Emperor as representatives of a technically vassal State. The dependence of Nepaul in respect of the Government of British India is more marked, I think ; for she is prevented from having intercourse with the native chiefs of India beyond the Ganges—and in these are comprised all the chiefs of importance—except with the British Resident's sanction and under his passports, and from having in her service any British, European, or American subject without the British Government's consent. The influence of the British Government has, among other reforms and against the prejudices of the ruling class, compelled the relinquishment of suttee and mutilation. The feelings of the Durbar, whoever may be the Minister, have been such during the past generation as to induce bonâ fide offers of Nepaulese troops to the British Government on several occasions, and its spontaneous demonstration of loyalty at the time of the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee was a further proof of regard for the Suzerain of India. The Nepaulese Government sends a mission with presents to each Viceroy on his arrival ; and even should the highest subject of the Sovereign of Nepaul be at the head of a mission, as has happened once or twice, he is far from being received on an equality by the Viceroy. The truth is that Nepaul, being between two great Powers, so acts as that she may not have the cherished integrity of her dominions violated by either. Fear of annexation is the keynote of her policy. Her proximity to British soil compelled her to acquiesce in continuous diplomatic intercourse. The first British Resident was burnt in effigy outside his own gate. But it is long since Nepaul has acknowledged the value of the close political connection, implying predominance over her though it does, because of the material advantages that it has given to her. To use a homely phrase, Nepaul knows on which side her bread is buttered. Though she is often reactionary and exasperating in matters of official business, she is too intent on self-preservation to try the long-suffering of the British Government up to breaking point. Were there ever to be a question of deciding between exclusive allegiance to England or to China her geographical position alike with her interests would cause her to throw in her lot with the former. To me the necessity for such a decision seems likely to remain outside the sphere of practical politics.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

Under the auspices of the London Working Men's Association a lecture was delivered on the 17th ult. in the Trophy Room at the American Exhibition, Earl's-court, by Mr. D. P. Stuart Menteth, F.S.A., on "The Silver Question," who in his lecture said that the use of silver as money was very ancient. It seemed to him that the currency difficulties could best be met by a truce between the rival parties of monometallists and bi-metallists for say ten years on the following terms :—That it was desirable that the Government should adopt measures for securing an international agreement by which silver might be restored to its legitimate share in providing metallic currency sufficient for the wants of the world. The basis of such agreement should rest on the grounds that France and the other States of the Latin Union should return to the bi-metallic system in conjunction with free mintage, as prior to 1875, on a fixed ratio of 15½ silver to one of gold ; that the United States of America revert to the bi-metallic system on the same lines, or point out some equally effective measure to absorb the silver of which they are the greatest known producers in the world ; that Great Britain and Ireland and dependencies abolish the half-sovereign, issuing silver coinage in its room ; that India levy a duty on exports from her shores sufficient to keep up exchange to 1s. 8d., such duty to be taken off in the event of exchange reaching 1s. 10d. per rupee ; that the Bank of England and banks of issue throughout the United Kingdom be empowered to issue notes against gold and silver in the proportion of one-third of silver to two-thirds of gold as their reserve against issue, and that the present duty of 1s. 6d. an ounce on silver and plate be taken off, and that a nominal duty of 3d. an ounce be substituted. There was an immense field in India and China to supply the natives with bangles and other silver ornaments if we only gave them articles of fineness in silver and harmonising to their tastes. If manufacturers in this country set themselves against native prejudices and supplied goods of inferior fineness and shocking native tastes as to patterns they might expect Americans to cut them out in India, as they were now trying to do in China. The main issue in the gold and silver controversy had been an endeavour to displace silver throughout the world. The outcome had been that vast sums of gold had been drawn to the East, and virtually lost in hoarding. The production of gold in the world was unequal to the demand, and unless silver was brought more into use there was a risk of heathendom absorbing the supplies of gold.

Major-General Henry Hyde, of the Royal (late Bengal) Engineers, who died on the 23rd inst., aged sixty-two, entered the army in 1844, and served in the Punjab Campaign of 1848 and 1849, including the operations before Moultan, the capture of the suburbs, the storm of the city, and the surrender of the fortress. He was also present at the surrender of the fort and garrison of Cheniote, and the battle of Goojerat, for which he received a medal with two clasps. He served as Field Engineer in the operations against the hill-tribes on the Eusufzai frontier in 1857, and for his services he received a medal with a clasp.

THE Chinese and Indian merchants at Bhamo are planning to build as fast as materials can be collected. The Chinese carpenters have commenced work for the Government again after a strike of nearly two months.

THE KIDNAPPING OF PRINCE ALEXANDER OF BATTENBERG.*

The story of Russia's perfidy in Bulgaria has been told again and again, so that those who profess to believe in the integrity of that intriguing dynasty cannot, at any rate, plead ignorance; yet, withal, M. A. von Huhn's volume is a welcome addition to the stock of information upon this interesting subject, in so far as it throws considerable light in regard to the means adopted by Holy Russia to further her own ends. Of course, it has long been palpable to the meanest intellect that the ways were crooked and the methods tortuous. All the world knows that Prince Alexander of Battenberg was kidnapped; but how many know precisely how this nefarious action was carried out? Every person is aware that General Kaulbars behaved in a most unseemly fashion in Bulgaria, but not many, perhaps, are apprised as to the extent of his intrigue, the blackness of his deeds, and the unblushing effrontery with which he endeavoured to raise the standard of rebellion, and deluge the land with blood.

M. von Huhn's narrative draws aside the veil which cloaks villainy and deep wickedness as diabolical as ever was recorded in the annals of modern civilisation. And how did Russia proceed? First of all, this sleek, unctuous Power endeavoured to stimulate the worst passions of the army—"to destroy all respect for monarchical principl s, to undermine all love for the Prince, to egg on to the commission of crime," &c. Ambition ungratified became a factor for evil; power unattained became a loadstone for treachery; the cauldron of corruption was kept seething, and the fumes thereof overpowered the brains of those whose duty was to defend the country they were led to betray.

But to their credit, be it said, some individuals were loyal; some regiments refused to eat the bread of rebellion, or to fatten on the wages of infamy. But how did they fare? Obviously they stood in the way of an emeute—so it became necessary to remove them from the path of insurrection. Accordingly false reports of an impending war with Servia were circulated with ever-increasing reiteration, till at length it became necessary to send some troops to the frontier to protect Bulgarian interests. What more easy than to arrange that the regiment whose patriotism was unshaken and unshakable should be selected for an important and honourable duty! Holy Russia could easily arrange this, and, these men away, the coast was clear. Friendless and unprotected poor Alexander of Battenberg was easily deported from his capital amidst a fanfare of trumpets. Thereupon the hypocrisy of the great colossus of the North had full sway for a while, but not for long. Every hour the Russian faction got weaker and weaker; every day the Bulgarian party waxed stronger and stronger, and ere a few suns had set the Prince was restored to his people.

This and much more is told with merciless severity. Not an intrigue is left unmarked, not a rascality is passed unnoticed, and what a picture of crime, guilt, bloodshed, misfortune, chicanery, and fraud. Such is Holy Russia. "The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau."

M. von Huhn has done his work conscientiously and thoroughly, and the translation is clear and sound, albeit at times foreign in style and expression. The work will, it may be trusted, command a large circulation.

"Look always on the sunny side," was the refrain of one of the well-known songs of the early part of the reign of the Jubilee of which we have been commemorating. The sentiment—probably not the song—has inspired Mr. Whitmore, the Conservative M.P. for Chelsea, in his article showing that the (in all senses) late session has not been an infructuous one. He has little difficulty in proving his thesis. Not to speak of a reform of Procedure, the working of which points the road to further reforms, not to mention the Irish Crimes Act, which, if resolutely and intelligently administered, will speedily put an end to the National League, or the Land Act, in which many promises, dangled by Mr. Gladstone before the eyes of his Irish dupes, have been realised, we have, in the Mines Act, a measure which all reasonable persons, of whatever party, have with one accord applauded, and, in the Allotments Act, an enactment enabling the poorest citizen to occupy the coveted position of a landholder. That this legislation should have proceeded from the Conservative side of the House, although the Gladstonians, after tumultuously affirming its necessity when it was not proposed by their opponents, did their best to impede it when so proposed, is a fact which will hardly escape notice at the next General Election.

A "burning question," which is rapidly approaching white heat, is that of "Protection," which is the subject of a well-written article by Lord Penzance. That a commercial rivalry on equal terms, between nations, each producing that which their country best yields, would be beneficial, few, it may be supposed, would care to dispute. But the Cobdenite dream, that, because we entered into rivalry with one hand tied behind our back all nations would do likewise, has long since been dissipated by rude awakening in the minds of all but the members of the Cobden Club; and the time when the majority of the electorate are at length roused to the perception of the fact that an erroneous financial policy is sending abroad year by year one hundred millions sterling of hardly-earned British money, may be expected to be a stirring one. Not only the whole Continent of Europe, but America, looks on with gratified amazement, and—pockets the amount we lose. Even our Colonies, happily unfettered in this respect, are more clearsighted in this respect than we. "The commercial policy," said Sir C. Tupper in his speech on the Canadian Budget, "which gave perfect freedom of action to every quarter of the Empire in its own internal arrangement, and which at the same time offered a united front against the commercial invasion of foreign countries," was that which needed consideration; and it is pleasing to note that this language was quoted with approval, and endorsed by the present Premier of England. Needless to say that this matter formed the subject of serious attention at the hands of the Representatives of our Colonies who attended "Our first Amphictyonic Council," though no formal reference was made to it in the programme of the Conference. Yet, as Mr. Gresley shows, the Conference, consisting, as it did, of representative, rather than of official, personages, has done not a little towards bringing us nearer to the ideal of "one force, one fleet, one throne."

In an interesting Essay on "The New Electorate in France," Madame Blaze de Bury, while contributing some well-considered remarks on prominent French statesmen, expresses her opinion that universal suffrage will bring a pacific influence to bear on the troubled sea of French politics. Her remarks suggests Hamlet's reflection:—

"Methinks the lady doth protest too much."

When Madame de Bury admits (p. 240) that France is characterised at present by "an incompatibility of temper with all other tempers whatsoever"—in other words, that she is fidgetty and cantankerous—it is impossible not to forget that the first seiousr political incident may bring on the throes, which will probably result in the enfantement of a military dictatorship with its inevitable concomitant—war. Whether the country "aggressed" will be that of the hated Teuton, or the assuredly not less detested perfide Albion, will depend on the incidents of the moment. The moral to be drawn from Madame de Bury's paper seems to us to be that not the slightest reliance can be placed on the ability of French politicians to give effect to whatever pacific inclinations they may entertain; and that Europe, and England especially, must keep the storm-signal hoisted which points to France.

"The Eruptive Force of Modern Fanaticism" is the title of a paper by Mr. Banfield, who fully investigates the subject of which he treats; Lord Lymington's sympathetic remarks on the writings of (Richard) Jefferies—a name which we were once told is spelt in seventeen different ways—is worth reading, while the article by the Oxford Professor of Poetry on the relations of Poetry to the Fine Arts needs no recommendation at our hands.

The Art Journal for this month is, of course, as is always the case, most excellent, albeit we are not quite persuaded that the "Raising of Jairus' Daughter" is very first-class. Gabriel Max is a peculiar painter, some people admiring him immensely, others—well, it shall be left unsaid. "Ceylon Scenery" is very charming, and the sketches of Chester are extremely picturesque, though, as we have remarked on a former occasion, we do not particularly affectionate the foreign style in which they are rendered. Minor drawings are, as usual, pretty, and tasteful, and attractive.

The October number of the Century Illustrated Magazine will amply repay the purchaser, if only in leaving him in possession of some most exquisite drawings of Ely Cathedral and the adjoining Ouse. Surely this gorgeous edifice must be the finest Norman edifice in this kingdom. "Always imposing, always superb, always tremendous—from far or near, from north, south, east or west. Nowhere is there a more magnificent piece of human handiwork, and here does nature seem more wholly to efface herself that human handiwork may profit." We are not too much concerned in the American sketches, save as regards a very interesting and attractive essay on "Football as Played Across the Atlantic," with numerous and graphic illustrations

INDIAN PRINCES AT COURT.

THE Asiatic Quarterly Review for October has, under the above title, an article which deals in a masterly manner with the question, which has become rather a vexed one, of how Indian Princes visiting England should be received. The article is not signed, but as the personal pronoun "I" is used considerably throughout, we imagine that the writer, if not the Editor, is one who has authority to give opinion on the matter of which he treats. "I have some personal acquaintance," he writes, "with all the Chiefs who have been in England this season, and I am convinced that their feeling of gratitude for the kindness shown them is extreme, while they thoroughly enjoyed their visit to England." This is so far satisfactory, but it has to undergo a considerable qualification, for the writer proceeds, "At the same time I do not think that the manner in which the Court officials dealt with the question of the public treatment on historical occasions of the Indian Princes was politic or wise. On this august occasion it should have been the aim of the authorities to impart to the rejoicing an Imperial character rather than a domestic or local one. The greatest prominence should have been given to the illustrious feudatories of the Crown who in person, or by delegates, represented the vast Indian Empire, and whose homage was the more welcome that it was voluntary and sincere. They should have been conveyed to Westminster Abbey in Royal carriages with four horses, and with every outward mark of honour." Instead of this they were compelled to use hired carriages, and were altogether treated as inferior personages to the petty German princes, who received every consideration and attention at the hands of the Court officials. The mysteries of Court etiquette as practised at St. James's are inexplicable, we allow ; but we agree with the writer in the Review that the Indian Chiefs should have been received and treated as Royal guests, even though the Royal hospitality would, according to precedent, have been limited to one week. The honour would have been recognised and appreciated. The Lord Chamberlain failed, however, to see his duty in this light, but he gave Royal rank and precedence to a black lady from the Sandwich Islands. On this point the writer of the article is very emphatic :—

> This was the only affront which was seriously felt by all the Indian Princes. The administration of the islands from which the so-called Queen of Hawaii takes her name and title is understood to be run by certain smart Yankee merchants, who have elected a Native chief as nominal ruler, whose name, David Kalakana, suggests missionary intervention. This person might fitly rank with Cetewayo, of African fame, and Queen Kapiolani is as much an independent sovereign as is the wife of the gentleman who owns the Scilly Islands. American adventurers have not hitherto been held competent to grant patents of acknowledged royalty to their converted clients. The Lord Chamberlain might easily have ascertained from the United States Minister in what style this lady is received in America, which is far more intimately connected with Hawaii than is England. In "the States," if I have been rightly informed by an American Senator, she is treated like a private individual, and no official notice is taken of her whatever, and I can assert from personal knowledge that her reception at the Court of St. James's has astonished Americans quite as much as Englishmen.

When it is also remembered that the Hawaian Islanders are still almost savages of cannibal propensities, and Her Majesty the Queen of Hawaii is credited with a preference for raw over cooked viands, it need not be wondered at that the honours paid to her here created some astonishment and resentment. The writer from whom we are quoting, commenting upon this extraordinary incident, says :—

> The soi-disant Queen of these obscure islands whose whole revenue is far less than that of many English noblemen, is given precedence over the illustrious princes of Hindostan whose pedigree stretches through all historic times, and whose loyalty and goodwill are of the utmost importance to the Empire. Can there be any doubt that if the Nizam of Hyderabad himself had been present at the Jubilee, the most powerful ruler in India, or the Maharaja of Oudeypore the most illustrious in descent, they would have been placed below these lately reclaimed savages of the South Sea? It should be clearly understood by the Court that the treatment of the Hawaiian Queen, granting her royal honours, court carriages and British sentries, gave great and deep offence to the more important Indian Chiefs; and no prince of position will visit England with any satisfaction or security unless some assurance be given that so extraordinary an outrage on the sense of propriety and proportion will not again be committed.

This, it may be remarked, is rather strongly put, for the Queen of Hawaii was given precedence over the German Princes too; but it was undoubtedly a great and stupid blunder. But who was to blame for this and other blunders made in connection with the treatment of the Indian Princes in England? The question is answered in the article itself: "The business was in the hands of the Political Aide-de-Camp to the Secretary of State, who had neither the authority and position nor the political knowledge and experience of Indian Princes and people to guide the Court officials aright." The remedy suggested is that in future, arrangements for the reception, entertainment, and treatment generally of Indian Princes should be placed more directly under the Political Secretary at the India Office, and that to him in these matters the Political Aide-de-Camp should be absolutely and not only nominally subordinate. The present Political Secretary is not likely to make a blunder in such matters, but care ought to be taken that the political Aide-de-Camp should not blunder either.

IN MEMORIAM.—MAJOR EVANS BELL.

(Communicated.)

MAJOR EVANS BELL, formerly of the Madras Army, was one of a type of Indian officers of literary and critical turn, who, though never numerous, have appeared in constant succession during the Honourable Company's reign. Having been employed in Political Service as Assistant to the Commissioner of Nagpur, 1856 to 1860, his attention was drawn to the deeply interesting subject of the relations between the Government of India and the Native States. Briefly described, he was one of the most decided opponents of the annexation policy, which, though chiefly associated with Lord Dalhousie's name, was eagerly supported by certain colleagues of that powerful Governor-General, and backed up by influential statesmen at home more especially some of the Whig persuasion. But Major Bell's works, though they have determined opposition to that policy for their principal theme, really covered a wider field. When the history of modern India comes to be written, his books will be found to comprise remarkably full and searching accounts of the principal Native States of India since the time of the great Mahratta war—as those States were confirmed and their possession and powers were regulated under the series of treaties and engagements, which bound their fortunes with those of the paramount Power. Some of the most powerful sections of Major Bell's works are devoted to showing how these political settlements were, one after another departed from, or construed adversely to the Native States and their rulers, under that policy of aggrandisement, which had its most significant embodiment in the "doctrine of lapse." In this investigation Major Bell exhibited a mastery of principles of public law, and his vindication of Treaty rights are well worthy of study by jurists and statesmen. Also as a record of the strictly political aspects of the great Mutiny struggle, with the remarkable evolution that followed and received its embodiment in Lord Canning's Adoption Despatch and the Royal Proclamation of 1858, Major Bell's writings will always have a specific value—notably his "Retrospect and Prospects of Indian Policy" and "Our Vassal Empire." At first, in collaboration with John Dickinson, and, later, in his biography of that gentleman, followed up by his Letters to Mr. H. C. Durand and the Hon. Sir Charles Aitchison, he vindicated the late Maharajah Holkar from the aspersions cast on him in 1857-8 by Sir Henry Durand.

Though Major Bell is popularly known more from his denunciatory polemics, there is much material of a constructive kind in his works. He always held that, while the good faith of Treaties and high policy alike demand the conservation of Native States as an integral part of our Imperial system, our Indian Government is bound to use its best endeavours to encourage Native rulers to fulfil their duties, and nurture their populations. He had the satisfaction in later years of seeing that this conservative side of the policy he earnestly advocated is approved by all parties in the State. This encouraging aspect of Major Bell's public work is well described in the following passage from an address presented to him only a very few weeks before his somewhat untimely death:—

On the issue of Her Gracious Majesty's Proclamation of 1858 in which said our Sovereign Lady, "We shall respect the rights, dignities and honour of Native Princes as our own"—you had the high satisfaction of seeing the principles you had so earnestly advocated embodied in an Imperial manifesto, which is cherished alike by the princes and people of India as their Great Charter of political privileges and rights, by which they are united in bonds of willing fealty with the great British Empire.

Since that period you have been one of the most vigilant defenders of the Royal promises then so graciously declared. The duty has often been accepted by you of resisting the threatened disregard of those promises by executive authorities, and of enforcing the high obligation of giving full effect to Her Majesty's memorable message of union and reconciliation.

Another passage from the same document runs thus:—

In the more prominent instance of your energetic and effective resistance to the scheme for the annexation of the kingdom of Mysore, your great experience in the examination of State papers and your skill in the statement of political principles, as displayed in your work, "The Mysore Reversion," had a very large share in averting a flagrant breach of public faith, and in securing, by restoration of that Raj, the ratification in the most signal manner of the Royal promises made in the Proclamation of 1858. This event, as we can testify, had a most salutary and reassuring influence through all the Native Courts of India.

The entirely spontaneous movement resulting in the presentation of the above-quoted address—the adoption of which was moved by Lord Stanley of Alderley—and which proved a great consolation to the then (as it proved) dying man, may fairly be regarded as affording evidence of the great esteem in which Major Bell was held on personal as well as public grounds. He was of retiring disposition, and his too modest estimate of his own powers was only compensated for by the earnestness with which he devoted them and his pecuniary aid to the advocacy of causes and principles which he considered vital to the true interests of the British Empire. He leaves a widow and one daughter. Mrs. Bell—known in professional life as "Mrs. Fairfax"—has had constant and numerous engagements in influential circles as a teacher of elocution, in which accomplishment several of her pupils have achieved signal success.

A romantic drama, entitled The Golden Goblin, from the pen of Mr. Frank Marryat, eldest son of Colonel Ross Church, Madras Staff Corps, and grandson of the nautical novelist, Captain Marryat, R.N., will be acted during a lengthened tour through the principal cities of England during the ensuing year. A celebrated novelist and entertainer will head a strong company already engaged for its representation, and the play is said to contain great literary and artistic merit, and no expense will be spared on its production. Mr. Victor Stevens, the comedian of Drury Lane Theatre, brother-in-law to the author, has composed some charming incidental music, and possibly the gallant Indian Colonel himself, who takes a lively in the proceedings, will have the drama produced at a West-end theatre, as theatrical speculations seem all the "go" now with the "upper ten."

THE ANGLO-INDIAN CODES.

Edited by WHITLEY STOKES, D.C.L.,

Correspondent of the Institute of France, and late Law Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India. Vol. I.—SUBSTANTIVE LAW.

"The work contains the principal codes of law which have, during the last twenty-six years, been enacted by the Governor-General of India in Council. The first volume deals with Substantive Law, and contains the Penal Code, the Succession Act, the General Clauses Act, and the Acts relating respectively to Contract, Negotiable Instruments, Transfer of Property, Trusts, Easements, and Specific Relief. Repeals and amendments effected by subsequent legislation are shown in their proper places. Each code is preceded by an introduction giving a general view of its objects and contents, pointing out its principal divergences from English law, and making suggestions for its amendment. The footnotes to the sections embody or refer to the rulings of the Indian High Courts on their wording, and the English decisions on which many of them are founded."—From the PREFACE.

"Convenient for use and reference. Not only lawyers and officials in India, but English lawyers will find their advantage in this admirable edition."—LAW JOURNAL.

"Of great use to all practitioners concerned with Anglo-Indian Law, and of great interest to students of the theory and art of legislation."—LAW QUARTERLY REVIEW.

"The choice of an editor has been most judicious."—ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

"No fitter person could have been found to undertake this work than Mr. Whitley Stokes."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

THE BROAD ARROW AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

Every Saturday. Price Sixpence.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

Here are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing monthly (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

SYSTEMS OF

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. Norman Shaw, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. Norman Shaw, R.A., Architect.

From Lamb and Armstrong:—

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

As a medium for English, American, and Australian ADVERTISEMENTS of goods suitable for the tropics, India, as well as Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Java, and West Indies (Central America being included in that term), or connected with agriculture, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST stands unrivalled, the work being constantly in the hands of Native as well as European and American agriculturists. Being a Monthly Periodical, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST lies on the table and is very often referred to during each month, a fact which advertisers will know how to appreciate.

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G., Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, writing of the T. A., refers to it as "an astonishing repertory of everything relating to the economic botany of the East."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 23rd September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 21st September; and from Calcutta to the 20th September.

IN the Imperial Legislative Council at Simla the Report of the Select Committee on the Allahabad University Bill has been presented by the Hon. Mr. Quinton.

THE Viceroy has consented to become a patron of the National Association for the Employment of Reserve and Discharged Soldiers.

THE Commander-in-Chief will, during his winter tour, visit the Cavalry Camp of Exercise at Lawrencepur and the Artillery Camp of Exercise at Oonao.

THE Viceroy's Levée, which opens the Calcutta season, is to be held there on December 20th, and Lady Dufferin's drawing-room on the 23rd.

ALL the Government of India offices, with the exception of the Foreign Department, will have left Simla by the 7th of November for Calcutta.

THE Bill for the administration of the estates of the late King of Oude was introduced into Council at Simla on September 22nd. There were peculiar circumstances connected with the legal position of the King and his family which rendered this measure necessary.

IT was desirable that steps should at once be taken to secure his property provided for distribution without exposing it to the risk of robbery, of delays, and the cost of litigation.

THREE Acts had been passed securing the special privileges to the King and exemption from the legal processes, and this justified the special legislation for the administration of his State after death.

THERE were about 3,000 persons at Garden Reach dependent on the King, and the situation was further complicated by the fact that some weeks ago the King's seals were stolen, which might be used to give authority to false documents.

THE Bill provided that no Act of Government in the administration of the distributed property should be liable to be questioned in any court.

A SIMILAR ACT had been passed in the case of the Nawab of Surat in 1848.

A MEMBER, in moving that the Allahabad University Bill be passed, said that numerous opinions and criticisms had been received which had resulted in clearing up what appeared to be ambiguous in the wording of the Bill as introduced. No change had been made in the construction or function of the University which would be the examining body which would in time develop into that of a teaching body.

THE Punjab Tenancy and Land Revenue Bills were also passed after a long debate, in which H.E. the Viceroy, his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, the Hon. Mr. Peile, Col Wace, and Nawab Nawazish Ali Khan took part. The Bills as now amended were finally approved.

MR. PEILE on expressing a doubt regarding some of the provisions of the Tenancy Bill, his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor said he had no apprehensions as to the Bill, and would not be afraid to see its provisions extensively applied. He believed the Revenue officers and Courts would find it a good basis for equitable orders and decisions, and finally a clear and safe guide.

H.E. THE VICEROY said that he desired to congratulate the colleagues of the Government and the members of the Legislative Council on the successful termination reached in this important matter. Any legislation which touched on such important and extensive interests was liable to inflict injury and injustice, but he was convinced this injury had been reduced to a minimum.

THE HON. SIR JOHN EDGE, Chief Justice of the N.W. Provinces, has accepted the vice-Chancellorship of the Allahabad University.

GENERAL CARNEGY, the provisional Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, retires after forty-four years' service, and returns home.

MAJOR T. DEANE officiates for Colonel Ben Williams as Superintendent of Army Remount Operations in the absence of the latter.

THREE days' incessant rain and attendant destruction of property are reported from Simla. Heavy rains are also reported in the Punjab. In several districts the railways have been breached, and great damage has been occasioned by the floods.

THE Nizam has increased his contribution to the Countess of Dufferin's Fund from Rs. 12,000 to Rs. 50,000, and the Maharaja of Durbungah has contributed Rs. 50,000 to the Imperial Institute.

THE abolition of the office of consulting engineer to the Government of India which will follow Mr. Molesworth's retirement is considered to foreshadow the abolition of the office of Director-General of Railways by the substitution of periodical railway conferences.

MR. HORACE COCKERELL, C.S.I., has sent in his papers to resign the Bengal Civil Service.

THE extension of the North-West High Court to Oudh will shortly be completed.

THE recent masonic ceremonial at Simla seems to have stimulated local interest in freemasonry. The craft has as an immediate result secured a recruit in the person of Lord William Beresford, who was on Tuesday initiated at the meeting of the local lodge.

THE Calcutta Municipal five per cent. Loan of twelve lakhs has been subscribed three times over. Tenders were accepted at one rupee, eleven annas, and four pie premium.

SIR HARRY PRENDERGAST will succeed Mr. Fitzpatrick as Officiating Resident at Mysore.

THE Patents Bill will be passed during the ensuing Calcutta Session.

THE Supreme Government will take no active part in the Melbourne Centennial International Exhibition of 1888.

DR. WATT'S appointment in the Bengal Educational Department, which is now vacant owing to his transfer to the Government of India, will not be filled up.

MR. TOWNSEND, the petroleum expert, has arrived in Simlo to consult with the authorities regarding the prospects and progress of the work he has been engaged on during the past two years.

A CONFERENCE of railway authorities is being summoned to meet during the cold weather in Calcutta for the discussion of matters connected with railway administration.

THE net amount of Indian Sea and Land Customs Revenue, exclusive of the Salt Revenue for the first five months of the current financial year, was Rs. 47,05,000, as compared with Rs. 43,52,000 during the corresponding period of last year.

LIEUT.-COLONEL LAW succeeds Captain Thornton as Political Agent at Bikaneer.

A MOVEMENT is on foot to raise a fund to perpetuate the memory of the late Sir Maxwell Melvill.

A PERMANENT Association of Uncovenanted Civil Servants has been formed at Allahabad.

NOTES.

THE most important news received from India this morning is contained in the telegram which tells of the defeat and death of Boh-Shway, the dacoit leader who has given us so much trouble in Upper Burma. The details of the surprise effected upon his camp by the gallant little band under Major Harvey, of the South Wales Borderers, will be found in another column. The result which will follow this exploit will, it is to be hoped, be the complete stamping out of dacoity and the settling down of the country to peace and coming prosperity.

CONFLICTING reports, as usual, come with regard to affairs in Afghanistan. According to one account the Ameer is said to be very ill, and doubtful of the ultimate success of his struggle with the rebels; according to another he is in excellent health, and making matters very hot for his enemies. The Times correspondent states that "there is little doubt that eventually the Ghilzais will be able to maintain their old supremacy," but this is only a correspondent's opinion. In the meantime Ghilzai refugees are continuing to come across the frontier, and a scheme has been mooted for placing them on the lands adjoining the new Dera-Ghazi-Pishin-road, which lands have become waste in consequence of having constituted the battle-ground of the surrounding tribes. The suggestion that the Indian Government should show some kindness to the fugitives will possibly be acted upon; but if that Government undertakes to supply all rebellious and fugitive tribesmen with ploughs, bullocks, and seed, it will have plenty to do. Such assistance will be readily accepted, but to expect any gratitude or advantage in return will be to imagine a vain thing.

DHULEEP SINGH is once more to the front, and, according to the Times telegram, which we give elsewhere, has been writing a seditious letter to the editors of the leading Native journals in India. This letter appears to be a repetition of the grievances which he has already given to the English Press, and is not likely to fan a flame of rebellion in India. If he is "ready to serve the Czar with his life's blood without seeking any pecuniary reward" he must have changed his nature considerably since he went to Russia, for his quarrel with the Government was on a matter of money. He would never have thought of "freeing his country from the British yoke" had the British treasury been more open to his demands. The statement in his letter that "his loyal subjects and countrymen have provided for his wants" is amusing, and need cause no alarm. The Sikhs and Punjabis do not part with their own coin on sentimental grounds, and when they get hold of other people's they keep it.

IT is questionable whether the Indian Government would have acted wisely in taking action as suggested against the Native Press for publishing this foolish letter. To have done so would have been interpreted as an act of fear, and have given to it an importance it does not deserve. The name of Dhuleep Singh has no talismanic influence in India, and his "subjects" there have not yet been created. At the same time we think it a matter of regret, and we know that this is the opinion of many Indian officials, that the British Government has not seen its way to avoid the scandal which this rupture with Dhuleep Singh has occasioned. That he was in the wrong himself may be allowed, but it was hardly worth while to "higgle" over a matter of a few pounds, shillings, and pence. England can afford to be generous to a fallen foe—to be otherwise is to give the enemy occasion to blaspheme.

A PROPOSITION, said to have been made by a Lahore paper, that the Nizam should be invited to maintain a thoroughly efficient brigade of troops available for Government service, and provided with all requisites for taking the field, and that other Native Princes and Chiefs should be encouraged to follow the example is plausible enough, but it requires thoughtful consideration on the part of Government. There is no doubt that the enormous feudatory armies now allowed under treaty engagements to Native States are useless for Imperial defence, being little better, in fact, than armed rabbles. To drill and discipline them under European officers would, no doubt, result in the formation of an efficient and valuable force if it could be depended upon. Unfortunately, that "if" must be taken into consideration. The troops who were most formidable to us during the Mutiny were those who had been trained under such a system. Scindhia was faithful to us, and so was the Nizam; but what about their troops? Matters are better and brighter now, no doubt, in India, and there is greater confidence and trust between the Paramount Power and the millions of India; but the lessons of a not very distant past suggest caution for the future. The question is one, however, which must be met, but it is not to be decided by the argument of an editor or a newspaper correspondent.

IT was not likely that the seditious and malicious portion of the Native Press would approve of the Secretary of State's acquittal of Mr. Wilson in the Cambay case, so we are not surprised to learn that the most virulent of the Anglo-Native papers makes a handle of the Cambay case to vilify the Political Department as a body. Many honest Englishmen, it is admitted, cannot get over the improbabilities in the story for the prosecution; but the explanation is that Mr. Wilson "is a Political. There are Politicals who can withstand the influence of their training and position, but their number is very few." And again, "the Politicals receive such a training in India that it becomes simply impossible for them to keep their heads cool and heart right." If the writer had read the reports of the case, or had referred to the Bombay Civil List, he would have found that Mr. Wilson's connection with the Political Department, which he was on the point of leaving for his substantive appointment, extended to just about four months out of a service of twenty-three years. But this would not have suited the purpose of the Amrita Bazar Patrika, which is, of course, to excite ill-will and animosity against the Government.

MUCH as the lot of those who can go to Simla during the hot weather is envied by those who have to remain on the plains all is not contentment at the mountain paradise, judging from the following letter from a sojourner there:—

There appears to be a regular system of polite robbery running through our daily life. We pay a large sum for a stall or box at the theatre for the season, and find that there are only seven performances; we pay for our seats in church, and if we do not arrive fully a quarter of an hour before the service commences we find them already occupied; we are asked to help to build a Roman Catholic church, to support a distressed family, to subscribe for the up keep of a hospital, to provide cups and prizes for Volunteers, to take tickets in a raffle for a clock to be sold for charitable purposes, and, above all, having given alms regularly at the church services, are twitted from the pulpit with the fact that the collection amounted to only Rs. 128, when the aggregate of salaries then in the church (his Excellency the Viceroy was not there) would, according to our reverend pastor's calculations, amount to Rs. 1,28,000 per mensem. Consider also how we are bullied with municipal taxation. In addition to a tax of 10 per cent. on the rent of the house in which we live, which should amply cover all the Municipality ever does for us, we have to pay so much per maund on potatoes from Kalka, and so much per pound on tea from the Kangra Valley. We have to pay a tax of Rs. 2 on each servant, and a proportionate amount on all ponies, richshaws, &c., and, above all, if our favourite dog dies, we may not dig a hole in our compound to bury him until we first obtain the sanction of the Municipality, and this must be applied for on paper stamped with one anna.

But this is not all. A dog tax is about to be introduced. Nothing else has been left untaxed. Happy Simla!

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 9.

A Lahore newspaper, commenting upon the Nizam's offer of sixty lakhs, suggests that he should spend six lakhs yearly in maintaining a thoroughly efficient brigade of troops available for Government service, provided with all requisites for taking the field. This example would be followed by other Native princes and chiefs, and we should thus gain a second line of perfectly equipped troops numbering 50,000 men. At present the feudatory armies number 300,000 men—all perfectly useless for Imperial defence. The Native princes rule over one-third of the area of Hindostan, and over one-fifth of its population, and their aggregate revenues amount to one-fourth of those of the British Government. It is well now that they should be permitted to stand forward shoulder to shoulder, and to make military preparation for the great struggle in resisting Russian aggression which few military experts in India believe it possible to postpone indefinitely. If we take time by the forelock and consolidate our magnificent latent resources, we can afford to await the threatened contest with resolute confidence and preparedness.

The Mysore Budget is a good illustration of the prosperity of a well-governed Native State under British rule. The revenue for the past year amounted to Rs. 1,27,58,508—an amount unprecedented in the history of Mysore; and the land revenue was Rs. 87,09,602, against Rs. 76,41,241 in the previous year. The cultivated area has been much extended by careful improvements and irrigation works. The Budget estimate for the current official year puts the receipts at Rs. 1,16,39,452, and the total expenditure at Rs. 1,14,89,452.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 9.

The Ameer, it is reported, returned to Cabul on Sept. 20 from the Pagman hills in good health. He inspected the fortifications and held a military durbar. Good progress has been made during the past summer on the strategical roads between Balkh and Cabul, which are now practicable for artillery even over the mountain passes.

To-day's telegram from Quetta states that letters received from Herat clearly prove that no serious attempt was made to capture Ayoob by either the Persians or the Afghans. With fifteen followers he was surrounded on an isolated hill by 200 Afghan cavalry, who then refused to attack, and Ayoob escaped during the night. A Persian force was close at hand, but the Afghan leaders refused their assistance. When later on a force of Afghans crossed the frontier in pursuit, the Persian Governor of Khaf refused to allow his people to sell them provisions, and the Afghans were accordingly forced to return.

The Ghilzai refugees continue to cross the frontier in small numbers. A scheme has been mooted for placing them on the lands adjoining the new Dera-Ghazi-Pishin road, which has become waste in consequence of having constituted the battle ground of the surrounding tribes. There is little doubt that eventually the Ghilzais will be able to maintain their old supremacy. It might be a wise policy to secure their gratitude by exhibiting kindness to these fugitives. The projected scheme would cost money, as it would be necessary to supply the settlers with ploughs, bullocks, seed, and the means of subsistence till next harvest, but it would probably be money wisely invested by the Indian Government.

BURMA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 9.

A telegram from Burma reports the death of Boh-Shway, the powerful dacoit leader. Major Harvey, of the South Wales Borderers, made last Wednesday a forced march of fifty miles with a force composed of seventy mounted infantrymen, forty of whom belonged to the Borderers and thirty to the 7th Bombay Infantry, and attacked Boh-Shway's camp in the hills, nine miles to the north-west of Milangen, and succeeded in capturing the camp and a quantity of arms and stores. Boh-Shway and ten other dacoits were killed and a considerable number were wounded. Since the annexation Boh-Shway has been a cause of constant disturbance to the north of Thayetmyo, where he had previously exerted paramount influence. Colonel Auchinleck, Captain Parsons, and Mr. Phayre, Deputy-Commissioner of Nimbo, and other officers have been killed by Boh-Shway and his band of dacoits.

The Yaw country is still disturbed by dacoits, and it will have to be pacified by a military force during the cold weather These troops, when they shall have reached the limit of the old Burma territory, will be only some sixty miles from the Chittagong border. The unexplored tract intervening between the British territory of Upper Burma and the Chittagong and Arracan frontiers is only about 166 miles long and from 60 to 80 miles broad. It is bounded on the west, south-east, and north-east by British territory. The column employed to pacify the Yaw country, after having accomplished its task, could then be converted into a surveying force and be marched to Chittagong.

DHULEEP SINGH.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 9.

A local newspaper publishes a telegraphic summary of a seditious letter alleged to have been forwarded by the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh to the editors of the leading Native journals in India. The letter states that three days before the Maharajah quitted England for India Sir Owen Burne called upon him, coming from the India-office, and offered him £50,000 in settlement of his claims against the British Government, provided he would give up all notion of going to India. He laughed at the offer. His subsequent arrest at Aden converted his loyalty into bitter hatred for the enemies of his race, since his eyes were then opened for the first time to the fact that no matter how long one remained loyal to the English Crown, the ultimate reward would only be humiliation, degradation, and imprisonment, but not justice. While he remained at Aden a long correspondence ensued between himself and the Indian Government. Finally he telegraphed to the Queen, requesting a public trial, and to the Viceroy, asking whether the Government would defray the expenses of his legal advisers if they came to him at Aden. From both quarters he received unfavourable replies. He then telegraphed repudiating the treaty of annexation which had been extorted from him when he was eleven years old by his sanctimonious guardian. He therefore returned to Paris an independent Sovereign, free to wrench his dominions from the hands of his unscrupulous guardian.

While in Paris, it is added, he carefully considered his grievances, and having received communications from India from many of England's victims, he formed a solemn resolve to consecrate the remainder of his life to the freeing of his country from the British yoke. He hints that he has now placed himself entirely at the disposal of Russia, and asserts that he will serve his new Sovereign, the Czar, with his life-blood without seeking any pecuniary reward, as his loyal subjects and countrymen have provided for his wants. He acknowledges that he has received every consideration during his thirty-two years' residence in England; but denies that that is sufficient compensation for the loss of a kingdom and an immense private fortune. He compares British rule and Russian rule, attacking the former, and instances the conquest of India as a proof of treachery, fraud, and the violation of treaties.

THE Civil and Military Gazette understands that the subscriptions to bear the expenses of the expert whom the Government is getting out from France to make an investigation into the disease prevalent among silk-worms in Bengal are growing satisfactorily. Something like Rs. 20,000 are required, and of this amount Rs. 10,000 have already been given by the Governments of India and Bengal and Rs. 3,000 by two silk firms in Calcutta, and it is understood that there will be no difficulty in getting the balance. Zemindars and others interested in the silk industry in the districts are also to be invited to contribute.

THE COAL DEPOSITS OF BURMA.—The existence of coal measures in Upper Burma has long been known, and specimens have from time to time been examined by Calcutta experts and tried on steamers. The ascertained facts exceed the most sanguine expectations. Four extensive coalfields have been more or less thoroughly examined. The first is situated seventy miles above Mandalay on the left bank of the Irrawaddy, and within a few miles of the river. A consignment of this coal was tried on the exking's steamers. The second lies 150 miles up the Chindwin river, within three miles of the main channel. Coal from this field has been burnt during the past year, and, indeed, for some time previously, on the Chindwin steamers, and is pronounced to be excellent fuel. The seams are thick, and the dip of the strata is moderate. There are also the Panlaung coalfield, with its most accessible known outcrop near Hlaingdet, and the coal measures and outcrops on the Shan plateau. With regard to the last two coalfields little is known, but the highest authority expresses a hope that when the geological surveyor (who has been at work since the beginning of the year) completes his examination of the whole, the private capitalist will not be slow to follow in his wake.—Iron.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE UNCOVENANTED CIVIL SERVICE PENSIONS.

(Englishman.)

Mr. H. S. King, it seems to us, has been ill-advised in framing too wide a claim for a sterling pension for members of the Uncovenanted Services. Officers belonging to those services may be divided into broad classes; those appointed in England, either as the result of competition, or by nomination of the Secretary of State; and those who receive their appointments from the Viceroy or local governments in this country. To demand a sterling pension for Uncovenanted Officers without recognition of this great difference in the character of their appointments, can only result, we fear, in the defeat of the cause which Mr. King is advocating. In considering the demand the first difficulty which obviously arises is the treatment of Native Uncovenanted Officers. Are they to be made an exception to the concession, or are they also to be allowed pensions in sterling, as is done in the case of Covenanted Native Civilians? It will be perceived that the question is not an easy one to answer. It would be most anomalous that the large body of Uncovenanted Native officers should be paid a sterling pension; and we need hardly add that the concession would throw a heavy financial burden on the Government. At the same time, if the concession was made in the case of one class of officers, it was difficult to see on what grounds the Government would find it possible to exclude another class serving under precisely the same conditions and terms. The Covenanted Native Civilian on retirement is entitled to his pension of £1,000 per annum just as his English colleague, and it would be difficult to place European and Native Uncovenanted officers on a different footing in this matter. If, however, Mr. King's demand was limited to that class of Uncovenanted officers who are recruited in England, officers, that is, in the Public Works, Telegraph, Education, and Scientific Departments, he would stand a much greater chance of success. These officers come out from England, and are reasonably entitled to look forward to settling at home on retirement. Their plea that in coming to India they did not anticipate being so crippled by the state of the exchange, a cause beyond the power and foresight of even the most learned experts, as to be compelled hereafter to settle there, seems worthy of consideration. If the demand were thus circumscribed and limited, there is a much greater likelihood of its proving acceptable to the Government than it is likely to do in its present form. Indeed, we may state that the very comprehensive claim now being put forward has no chance of acceptance.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT IN BENGAL.

(Pioneer.)

The Tory party who clamoured against the innovation have had to endure the falsification of most of these evil forebodings. It was asserted that the cry for self-government was merely a faint echo from the Far West which Young Bengal had only partially caught and imperfectly understood, and that when the whole stock of brave words had been expended over its inauguration, and the actual substantial work began, the cloud of enthusiasm would clear away, leaving disclosed no real interest in the routine of petty matters to be dealt with from day to day. There never was a greater mistake. In some instances it may have happened that the Municipal Commissioners, influenced by social or caste considerations, have chosen the wrong man as their chairman, and an apathetic executive has reacted on the general body; but, as a rule, a very genuine interest in the affairs of their town has been shown both by the Commissioners as a body and by the chosen excutive; and in frequency of meetings, regularity of attendance, and freedom of discussion, the proceedings of the bodies constituted under the Act of 1884 afford a very favourable contrast to those of their comparatively phantasmal predecessor. It was also asserted, before the Act was introduced, with a great deal of vehemence, that the Natives of Bengal were not yet honest enough to be entrusted with such powers, and that grave scandals would ensue unless the freedom given were hedged round with so many safeguards as to make it difficult to distinguish it from the old bonds of restriction. To this an answer, if any is needed, may be found in the fact that in these three years there has been no serious scandal; and that, in spite of irregularities of accounts easily discernible by the regular official examiners, the money of the ratepayers has been as safe as it ever was in official hands. On the whole, it must, we think, be conceded by the bitterest opponents of reform that self-government as applied to the Bengal Municipalities has proved itself, beyond doubt, successful. There has, of course, been plenty of scope for hostile criticism; but to us, as we believe, to most sober-minded people, the wonder is that it has not been possible to pick a great many more holes. It was an entirely novel experiment, and there was much in the previous tradition of the country to suggest the probability of failure. It must be remembered, further, that the necessity of openness in its proceedings has forced every municipal body to "wear its heart onits sleeve, for daws" (in the form of "Patriotic Associations") "to peck at." There can be no doubt that every instance of shortcoming has been duly chronicled and proclaimed; and it is as surprising as it is satisfactory that in so many centres in widely distant districts, non-official Native gentlemen have been found in such numbers ready to sacrifice time, ease and money to pay close attention to the local affairs of their fellow-townsmen.

MAHOGANY IN SOUTHERN INDIA.

The experimental cultivation of this important timber tree continues to receive particular attention in the Madras Presidency. From a report by Mr. J. S. Gamble, Conservator of Forests, Northern Circle, on experiments carried out last year within his jurisdiction, we gather that altogether 85½ lbs. of seeds were received by him from various sources, which were distributed in the districts of Ganjam, Kistna, Nellore, Cuddapah, and the Nilgiris, between the months of August, 1885, and January, 1887. In addition to the above, 1,200 plants in baskets were sent by the Director of Agriculture in October, 1886, which were distributed between Cuddapah and Nellore. Full reports have been received from all districts except Ganjam.

In the Kistna district, of the plants raised from seed, some 1,503 were planted out at distances of 36ft. by 36ft. in the Weld plantation at Masulipatam, which covers an area of about 80 acres. The soil is described as sandy, containing a varying proportion of clay and slight traces of salt. The seedlings have thriven very well here, and now vary from two to four feet in height. In addition to the above there are about 3,780 plants in pots in the nursery, which the collector intends to plant out during the present rainy season. Other species of trees (among them Termina ia Arjuna and Cedrela toona) have also been planted out with the mahogany, and the two named are doing very well. This plantation may be considered one of the successful ones.

In Nellore the results were not very satisfactory. Of 300 plants raised from seed, 112 died, and the remainder were planted out in the jungle. These have not grown well, though they are described as still healthy and strong. Of the 700 plants sent in October, 1886, 468 were alive in January, 1887. Out of a second batch of 10 lbs. of seed sent to the collector in September, 1886, only 562 plants were raised, of which 26 died. The reason why so few plants were raised from seed is, that it was sown in sand instead of in good soil, and because the collector thinks it was received too late in the season.

The most satisfactory results were obtained on the Nilghiris. No less than 13,300 plants were raised from two consignments of seeds in August and October, 1885, and planted out in the June and November following, at an average distance of 22ft. by 23ft. There were only 63 casualties, the rest being in flourishing condition, especially those in the bed of the stream. The height of these seedling varies from 18 inches to 4½ feet, while that of those on higher ground varies from 12 to 18 inches. In September, 1886, a further consignment of 10 lbs. of seed was received by the collector of Nilghiris, which was sown at once, and gave 5,000 plants out of 11,145 seeds, the sixth day after sowing the rest of the seeds not having even sprouted. This goes to show that more than 50 per cent. of the seed was bad. No casualties have occurred among these, and they are reported as being from five to six inches in height, and healthy. The collector notes that a moist locality appears to suit the plants better than dry places, and this hint might be utilised to advantage in further experiments. Mr. Gamble considers this plantation a decided success. It covers 100 acres, and a further note upon it is under preparation. We entirely concur with Mr. Gamble in the opinion expressed by him, that "the experimental cultivation of mahogany had better perhaps in the future be confined to Sriharikot and the lower forests of the Nilghiris. It is of no use to make small plantations in a case like this; the only way to really prove that mahogany can be properly grown, and to produce some result commensurate with the expenditure, is to work on a sufficiently large area."

In the Cuddapah district there are two plantations, and the district forest officer has submitted a somewhat full report upon them.

Taken as a whole, it must be admitted, writes the Indian Agriculturist, that the experimental cultivation of mahogany in Southern India has been attended with hopeful results. There is no reason why this tree, the wood of which is so much valued by cabinet makers, should not become naturalised in this country. If the trees now being raised can be induced to produce fertile seed, it ought not to be such a difficult matter to naturalise it. There are, if we recollect rightly, some really fine specimen trees in the Royal Botanical Gardens, Seebpore. There is one tree in particular which struck us as one of the finest we have seen. It must be fully 80 feet high, with a girth of about 12 feet, approximately.

VILLAGE CHAUKIDARS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

How preposterous is the position of the chaukidars when we consider all that depends upon them, in the matter of police duties alone, besides those of vital statistics. No respectable agriculturist will take this wretched office with its nominal pay collected with such difficulty and always in arrears, with its fatiguing and degrading duties, with its ludicrous blue meerzai and yellow tights and rusty javelin. The chaukidar is at every man's beck and call. He accompanies the hakim from village to village; he collects supplies, he carries letters, he holds the Tahsildar's horse and rubs the Deputy-Inspector's legs. When all this is remedied—when the chaukidar becomes a member of a properly-organised rural constabulary, regularly paid, properly clothed, with regularly defined duties for which he is responsible only to properly constituted authorities—then we shall hope to see the completion of the system by the merging in this body of the detective, as distinguished from the protective police. We shall thus adhere to the only really good element in the chaukidari system, in retaining the local knowledge of men resident in the neighbourhood in which they are to be employed, and we shall get rid of the cause of failure or the existing local institution in the low character and status of the functionaries by whom the business is carried on. The office of a police constable needs, besides local knowledge, some independence, honesty, and sense of responsibility. The stamp of respectability now lacking will be conferred on the rural constable in making him a member of an organised body with a certain status and definite duties, and responsibilities. This achieved, we shall have an efficient detective agency for all ordinary rural purposes, though, of course, for the pursuit of organised and professional crime a special body of trained detectives will be required at the local Scotland Yard. For protective purposes, for guards and escorts, for repression of disturbances, a different class of constables is requisite—a force very small in comparison with the present one, and whose distribution and training should much more nearly than at present approach that of the old military police.

PROPOSED CREMATORIUM FOR HINDUS.

(Indu Prakash.)

We agree that the religious feelings of the community should not be injured. But as far as we understand the proposal, it is not intended to be imposed on the whole community. For the purpose for which the proposal is at present intended, it cannot, in our opinion, be in the least objectionable. Supposing that a cremation apparatus is to be kept only for the use of those classes of Hindus who at present bury their dead, we do not see how in their case any religious feeling will be violated by the use of the apparatus. With the exception of Sanyasis, there is no class, that we are aware of, who use any religious ceremony in burying the dead. In the case of these latter, burning in a crematorium will be just as allowable as burying in the ground. There is a form of cremation in use called bhadagni, i.e., burning without ceremonies. In the case of the poor, even bhadagni, if available, would probably be preferred to burial, and burning in a crematorium is not to our mind very different from bhadagni, except that it is an unfamiliar mode. The use of a crematorium must indeed not be made compulsory, and must be so guarded as not to offend religious feelings. The touch of persons to a corpse of a caste other than that of the person touching must be avoided. The burning in the same apparatus of persons of different castes would also be objectionable. But these are matters of detail, and not very difficult of arrangement. If a separate apparatus for each caste, and one not requiring any specially skilled handling so as to be capable of being worked by the men who accompany the dead, much of the objection on these grounds would vanish. As we have said, there ought to be no compulsion, at least until people get used to the innovation, though for our part we do not see any hardship in making the use compulsory in the case of those classes who otherwise have to resort to burial. When the novelty of the thing ceases, burning in crematoriums will, we feel certain, get into popular use as readily as travelling by railway. Even in the case of the classes who have the means of burning their dead on the orthodox pyre, with the use of the funeral ceremonies, the presence of a crematorium is not, we think, without its value. Its usefulness and conveniences will gradually come to be appreciated. It may serve as a model of attainable improvement, and may imperceptibly supersede the primitive practice of burning that is at present in vogue.

THE VILLAGE PUJA IN THE PUNJAB.

I lately watched a Brahman performing a puja in a private house. He commenced by reading the Satnavian Pustak, a book said to have been composed by Sata Rishi, and divided into five parts. On the completion of each part a conch was sounded by an attendant boy. Its contents were puerile stories and Brahmanical nonsense, relating five instances of special blessing accruing to Brahmans, Rajas, &c., for keeping fasts and listening to Satnavian stories.

His ritual, however, was interesting and important. He covered a square batch with cowdung and stuck up a plantain tree in each corner, and one more to the north-east of it. To each of these be attached a small triangular flag on a pole and some green bamboo branches. He next enclosed the square by passing a garland of leaves round the plantain trees, and in the centre of it he placed a stool covered with a kerchief, on which he put a salagrama on a tray after bathing it in the five amiritas, viz., honey, Ganges water, cow's milk, tyre and ghi. At the close of the ceremony this "bathing mixture" was distributed to the audience with panjiri, specially prepared by the Brahman during the day. The panjiri consisted of molasses, ghi, flour, cloves, cardamons, and whole black pepper seeds, and was placed on a tray in front of salagrama during the incantation. There was a small tray beside it, containing fifteen betel-nuts, clove, and cardamoms, besides five dried fruits, viz., pistachio nuts, almonds, raisins, dates and apricots, and five fresh fruits, viz, plantains, sweet limes, sugarcane, cocoanuts in shell, and oranges. The fresh fruits may be those in season, except the cocoanut in its shell, which is a necessity.

The Brahman now strewed the stool with flowers, placed a ghara of water beside each plantain tree, together with some rice and barley, and then lighted chiraghs, placing one near each plantain tree. He next made a circuit of the square, muttering incantations, and lastly divided it off into nine small squares by drawing lines with a flower dropper between his fingers and thumb. In each small square he drew an astronomical symbol. These were, beginning at the north-west corner:—(1) Budh (Mercury), a figure like an elephant goad, yellow; (2) Sukar (Venus), a figure like an Oxford frame, white; (3) Som (the Moon), a waxing crescent, white; (4) Brihaspat (Jupiter), an eight-pointed star with a tail, yellow; (5) Suraj (the Sun), an eight-pointed star, red; (6) Mangal (Mars), a triangle, red; (7) Ketu (the Descending Node), an eight-legged insect with feelers, grey; (8) Sani (Saturn), two triangles joined at their apices, and supported on two legs (supposed to represent a headless man), black; (9) Rahu (the ascending Node), same as Ketu, grey. The five colours used in the above were procured om henna (mehndi), shar a (a black seed), sindur (red lead), khaulia and haldi (turmeric). —W. Buchanan, Gujrat.—Indian Notes and Queries.

WHEAT EXPORTS FROM BURMA.

(Rangoon Gazette.)

There is every reason to hope that in the course of a few years, as Upper Burma becomes more completely settled, and as population increases, that an export trade in wheat will spring up in Rangoon. This grain has always been grown to some extent in the drier parts of the country, but the extension of cultivation has always been checked, not only by the rapacity of the Burmese officials, but also by the extreme fluctuations in price. Apparently it has made very little difference to the people how much wheat they have grown. The value of the total export has remained nearly the same, whether 40,000 maunds or a lakh of maunds were exported to Lower Burma. The actual figures for the last four years are:—

1883-84	38,919	maunds	value	Rs. 1,14,547
1884-85	69,309	„	„	„ 1,33,825
1886-87	74,345	„	„	„ 1,16,534

These figures are so extraordinary that were they not corroborated to some extent by the fact of great fluctuations in the value of wheat here, we should suspect that some mistake had crept into them. Still, a mistake could scarcely have taken this particular form of keeping the values very nearly to the same level whatever the quantities might be. The uniformity is too marked to be the result of a mistake. We may therefore safely take it as a fact that it has made very little difference to the people of Upper Burma how much wheat they grew. In 1886-87, for instance, the quantity is nearly double that of 1883-84, yet the value is only increased by about 2,000 rupees instead of by a lakh. The figures would be just what we should expect from a land-locked country which had no means of exporting its surplus in good years or of importing, if necessary, in bad ones. In such a country, of course, value must decrease as quantity increases, and in such countries it is a well-known fact that surplus grain if often left to rot on the ground, is having absolutely no value. Even in certain parts of India not yet touched by the railway a superabundant harvest is a real calamity to the people.

CONCERNING INDIA.

(St. Stephen's Review.)

I am a globe-trotter, thirsting for information of the land I am trotting through, and I find it difficult beyond measure.

My Indian friends are most hospitable, but they hate to talk of India. They will talk for hours about mutual friends in England, and about countries we both know, but to get out of them the smallest piece of local information I have to cross-examine them as in a witness-box, and during the process I read "bore" in their eyes. That is when I am seeking for hard facts. If I try to get at their ideas on the country in general, and am hoping for a broad view, I am disappointed. Do you know I really believe that the "ignorant British officers" of a regiment serving in India takes broader views of India than many civilians, and there is a good reason for it. The civilian is an overworked officer. This is true in all departments and in all parts of India. The soldier officer does little or nothing. A conscientious civilian —and they are very numerous, or India would not be part of this empire—has just twice as much work as he can efficiently do. Mr.

Wilfrid Blunt described him as an overpaid and underworked creature of a despotic bureaucracy! Mr. Blunt was kindly, and at such inconvenience to hosts, asked to pay a visit to an official's house. He was given the best they had. His host put off his work during the day to attend his guests, and sat up all night to make up for lost time, while Mr. Blunt slept peacefully in bed. His hostess took him out for a drive, as it was too hot to walk. In return, Mr. Blunt denominates them in his "Ideas on India" as an idle and luxurious family, members of a Government who seek but to extort sufficient salary from the poor coolie to enable them to lie about in long arm-chairs (legs up) when they don't happen to be driving blood horses in a luxurious carriage. Such is the picture he tries to paint you of the civilian in India. The officers of the army are, of course, too utterly useless to deserve comment. Now, it is a fact that the work of Government in every district is far more complicated now than it was fifty years ago. In all departments the work has to be most minutely gone into. An officer in charge of a district does not settle cases of life and death from his cool bath; he does not have the execution in his garden as soon as he has dried himself. Quite true, really! He has to go into every detail with considerable care, or he will receive what he would call a "snorter" from Government. Grand ambiguous word! Though so much more work has been thrown on these officials, their numbers is not increased. It is thus the Government civilian does not hold broad views about the country at large. He is a practical (and therefore to be despised, of course), hard-working man. He is tied to one district perhaps for ten years; he can't help being ignorant of other parts of this big land, for he gets no chance of seeing them, and naturally, his work permitting, he takes his furlough for the purpose of getting relaxation, and does not travel over Indian plains in search of "broad views," like a pig after truffles. It is thus that I explain to myself the civilians' narrow-mindedness and his dislike of conversing on local affairs. It is a pity, no doubt. The German officers sits up all night over beer, talking "shop"; the British subaltern in India goes to bed, and gets up early to ride a horse.

If Mr. Blunt had more influence, he would no doubt do more harm, for it tends to sour a hard-working man to be constantly told that he is getting very fat on a people for whom he does nothing. HERACLES.

BENGAL.

A NOTIFICATION in the Calcutta Gazette states that Maharani Surnomoye, of Cossimbazar, has given Rs. 20,000 for the promotion of technical education in the Moorshedabad District. Five thousand rupees are to be spent in purchasing the necessary apparatus and instruments, and the interest on the remainder of the sum is to be devoted to endowing a class in the Berhampore Collegiate School and establishing classes in connection with the college class in some of the neighbouring elementary schools. The Lieutenant-Governor accepts the Maharani's munificent gift, and approves of the scheme she proposes.

MR. FINUCANE, the Director of the Agricultural Department, Bengal, has submitted to the Government of Bengal the results of the experiments made by Babu Nitya Gopal Mukerji, M.A., Agricultural Officer on special duty, Berhampore, with regard to the eradication of disease among silk worms. Mr. Finucane recommends that no action be taken on the suggestions made by the Babu till the arrival of the expert from England. A short paper is being printed, and will be circulated among the vernacular papers descriptive of the results which have been attained, and inviting the attention of the Native community to the subject.

THE strength of the Assam Frontier Police at the close of last year was lower than it has been for several years past, being 1 subadar, 2 jemadars, 7 havildars, and 181 Sepoys below the sanctioned strength of 2,579 officers and men. This reduction has been chiefly caused by the number of men who have volunteered for service in the Burma Military Police. As the Inspector-General had reported that the number of the force was insufficient for the work required the Chief Commissioner has felt himself compelled to place a limit on the number of men who can be spared for the Burma Police.

THE following notifications are gazetted:—Mr. G. K. Lyon, C.S., is appointed to act as Secretary to the Central Examination Committee, Calcutta, during the absence on leave of Mr. C. A. Samuells. Mr. F. M. Halliday, Officiating Member of the Board of Revenue, is allowed leave of thirteen days. Mr. F. Thompson, Deputy Magistrate, Dinajpur, is allowed leave for three months. Mr. H. B. St. Leger, Officiating Assistant Superintendent of Police, Barrackpur, 24-Parganas, is allowed leave for one month. Mr. F. L. Halliday, Officiating Assistant Superintendent of Police, 24-Parganas, is transferred to Barrackpur in that district, during the absence on leave of Mr. H. B. St. Leger.

MADRAS.

MR. C. C. B. KNAPP, Deputy Consulting Engineer for Railways, Madras, is now at Nellore inspecting the portion of line between that place and Tirupeti, in view to deciding whether the incomplete works on this section have been sufficiently advanced to admit of its being opened to public traffic.

ONE of those who served England so long ago as 1816 has just quietly passed away at Pallaveram. Captain John Napleton Beaver, of the European Veteran Battalion, was the oldest officer in the Madras Army, which he entered as Ensign in 1817 or 1818. Captain Beaver was formerly in the Royal Navy, and served under Lord Exmouth at the bombardment of Algiers in 1816. He was then a midshipman on board the Glasgow frigate, 48 guns, commanded by the Hon. A. Maitland, and was wounded. He received a medal for distinguised bravery on that occasion. He was once in action in India. He was born Jan. 14, 1801, and was never confined to his bed by illness until the last.

AN interesting discovery has lately been made in the Madura District. As Mr. James, the Port Officer of Paumban, was lately on a tour of inspection of the Kilakarai Channel, he had occasion to visit some beacons some four or five miles north-east of the port of Kilakarai. Walking along the beach he noticed the whole strand strewed with broken pottery, earthenware, china, &c, and at one place where the sea had encroached, at a depth of four or five feet from the surface of the ground, there appeared what seemed to be the end of a wall. On inquiry he was told that the pottery was from an old town which existed there in the time of the Pandyan Kings. The Natives stated that coins were often found washed out by the sea, and a quantity were given to Mr. James, which had various devices on them, such as fish, birds, bullocks, and the monkey god Hanuman. These have been forwarded to the Collector of Madura with a full report of all the information that could be gathered. Mr. James has subsequently had another large number of coins sent to him, some of which are Grecian, Roman, Arab, &c. According to Bishop Caldwell Kilakarai is the place where Marco Polo first landed in India.

BOMBAY.

DR. B. S. SHROFF has been appointed Honorary Medical Officer to the Royal Alfred Sailors' Home.

SIRDAR DILER JUNG has taken possession of Watson's Hotel, the bargain for the sale of which was definitely concluded at five lakhs of rupees.

DURING Colonel Marshall's absence from Hyderabad Nawab Afsur Jung will carry on the duties of Secretary to his Highness the Nizam.

THE following telegram has been received by the Resident at Aden from the Agent and Consul-General, Cairo:—"Our Delegate Sanitary Board cannot recommend that quarantine be removed on arrivals from Bombay not earlier than before meeting in October ends. Military Department, Marine Department, should be asked to arrange relief accordingly."

THE NAWAB MUNIR-UL-MULK, who left for Poona ten or twelve days ago, returned to Hyderabad on Friday. H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, who made the Nawab's acquaintance when he visited England with his brother five or six years ago, recognised him as an old friend, and had a long conversation with him. The Duke has not yet visited the Nizam's capital, but is understood to be desirous of doing so.

THE Government has at present under consideration the question of commuting the permanent monthly travelling allowances for daily allowances wherever this can possibly be effected without hardship to the officers concerned. This is one of the results of the results of the Finance Committee's recommendations, and in Bombay alone a saving of something like half a lakh of rupees it is estimated will be made by the change from the oldstanding form of monthly allowances, which in many cases have come to be looked upon in the light of permanent additions to salaries.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

THE Talukdars of Oudh have distributed five hundred rupees among the poor as a thanks-offering for the restoration to health of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of the North-West Provinces.

IN the year 1886-87 works of public utility were constructed by private individuals in the North-West Provinces and Oudh to the value of Rs. 1,83,296. The principal of these were a masonry tank costing Rs. 80,000, constructed by Rani Janki Kunwar of Porospur, in the Gonda district, and another tank costing Rs. 14,000 by Buldeo Sukul's aunt, in the Fattehpur District. One liberal-minded gentleman, Babu Ganga Persad constructed a bungalow for the use of the Municipal Committee at Etah at a cost of Rs. 2,200.

NOTHING has been heard lately regarding the Punjab University examination scandals. The matter, it is believed, stands much as follows:—The Senate of the University referred the whole case to the Local Government, suggesting that a Commission should be appointed to investigate all the circumstances connected therewith. The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab forwarded this suggestion to the Government of India, who practically agreed with it, but asked the Local Government to frame what may be called specific charges. These are now under consideration, and the Commission will be appointed when they have been duly drawn up.

NEW ROUTE TO THE EAST.

(Times.)

The wise decision of the Government to endorse the efforts of the Canadian Government and the Canadian Pacific Railway to open up the new Canadian route to the Far East had been foreshadowed in many ways. Not long ago the Post Office issued notices that letters for China addressed "vid Vancouver" would be forwarded monthly to Montreal for transmission by the new Canadian Pacific route. The Governor of Hong Kong lately departed westwards to his far Eastern colony. Boxes of tea recently reached London vid Canada within one month of leaving China. Proofs accumulated that a new route westwards to the East was being opened for mails, for men, and for merchandise which boasted many superiorities over all older routes. It is well to record these superiorities. The route has become practicable because Canadian energy, backed by British capital, has completed the shortest and most northerly of the great railway lines which cross the American continent, connecting Halifax, the deep-water port on the Atlantic seaboard nearest to Europe with the port on the Pacific coast nearest to Japan and China. The physical facts of actual distances along the several routes are conclusive. They may be summarily tabulated as follows, in thousands of miles:—

	Viâ Canada.	Viâ Suez.	Viâ the Cape.	Viâ Cape Horn.
England to Japan ...	9½	13¾	15½	15½
England to Shanghai ...	10½	12½	14½	16
England to Hong Kong...	11	11	13½	16
England to Singapore ...	12½	9½	12½	16½
England to Brisbane ...	11½	12½	14½	13⅝
England to Sydney ...	12	12	13¾	12¾
England to Auckland ...	12	12	14	11½

The comparative shortness of the Canadian route is most evident, however, in regard to Japan and China, and already a provisional line of steamers has been started to open up communications by this new route with those countries. The Canadian route possesses four features of superiority over any other so far as saving of time is concerned. First, the route follows, as it were, a great circle, or, in other words, travels at latitudes, where degrees of longtitude are shortest; secondly, the seas crossed are cool, a matter of immense advantage to marine engineers as well as to passengers, and they are for the most part free from monsoons and tropical cyclones; thirdly, 2,500 miles of the route consist of a comparatively direct and easily-worked line of railway; and, fourthly, the sea courses are direct and do not have to follow the sinuosities of coast lines or encounter the dangers of coastwise navigation.

Such is summary comparison of the routes. It has, however, been argued that the mail and mercantile communications with Trans-pacific ports are already amply provided by East-going services vid Suez or the Cape. For instance, a new subsidy of £365,000 per annum has just been awarded to the Peninsular and Oriental Company to provide mail communication with the Far East. This is intended to suffice for the present traffic, but if we are to judge of the future by the past we may see in the records of the last twenty-five years that the growth of the trade of the United Kingdom with Trans-pacific ports is such as to foretell at least a duplication in value during the ensuing quarter of a century, which in these days of trade depression is a prospect carefully to be fostered. The following are the records of trade (in millions sterling):—

Between the United Kingdom and	In the year 1860.	In the year 1885.	Estimate for 1910.
Australasia... ...	17	51	153
Straits Settlements	3	7	16·5
Java, Philippines, &c.	3	7	16·5
Hong Kong and China	15	20	26·5
Japan	·2	3	4·5
Total ...	38·2	88	217

There are other signs of a great expansion and growth of this trade during the next quarter of a century. It is considered as beyond doubt that China, with her 400,000,000 of people, will open herself, to Europe by means of railways and telegraphs. France is certainly lavishing money on her newly-acquired territories in Tong-King; New Guinea, Borneo, and many smaller islands are coming under the subsection of European Powers, and will, without doubt, swell the rapidly growing totals of trade in these Eastern seas. The trade between North America and China and Japan already amounts to an annual value of £9,000,000. The wool, tea, and silks of the one side of the Pacific are profitably exchanged for the machinery and preserved provisions, especially the fish of British Columbia, of the other side. Whether, therefore, with a view to through traffic with Europe or to local Pacific traffic, there is little wonder that the intrinsic merits of these new routes are claiming the attention of those concerned.

Definite proposals for organising useful and reliable through services along these routes are now matured. The central link in the chain is the Canadian Pacific Railway. The great trunk line is now complete and excellently well equipped from the Pacific to Montreal and Quebec. A direction from Montreal to Halifax is fast approaching completion. The Canadian Pacific has the further advantage over the more northerly American lines in that the height above the sea level does not exceed 3,000ft., while the American lines run for 400 miles at 7,000ft., for 500 at over 6,000ft., and for long distances at more than 5,000ft. The best estimates show that by the Canadian Pacific a reliable through communication between Halifax and Vancouver will be maintained, all the year round, well within a limit of six days for the transit.

The Atlantic link of the chain it is proposed to provide by a line of first-class high speed steamers—to be subsidised by the Canadian Government. The Canadian Government is acting with wisdom as well as enterprise in this endeavour to make Halifax the great port of the Continent, and certainly the Atlantic port of a through route to the East. It is expected that the new fast steamers will make the passage in about five days—making a through connection between Liverpool and Vancouver within eleven days.

The China service stands on a different footing, because there is no group of wealthy English colonies desiring to establish such a service; whereas the main benefits of the through route would be enjoyed by China merchants and export manufacturers in the United Kingdom. At the same time, the subsidy asked for amounts in the total only to £60,000 for a monthly, or £100,000 for a fortnightly service. Of these sums Canada is willing to contribute £15,000 and £20,000 respectively, leaving as a sum to be supplied out of the Imperial Exchequer £45,000 in the one case and £80,000 in the other.

The Imperial Government could not shut its eyes to the obvious signs that a mail service by this new route would become a commercial necessity of the near future, and on Oct. 19, 1885, a notice was issued by the Post Office calling for tenders for a fortnightly mail service, to commence in February, 1888, to run between Vancouver and Hong Kong. Two tenders were sent in, and one of these has since been placed before the Government in a somewhat amended form. It is proposed to run a service of steamers, to be built according to Admiralty requirements, to be capable of steaming more than 16 knots, and to be available in war time for service as armed cruisers or transports; the service to be a 14-knot service, to carry mails free of all further charges, troops at low rates, and war materials and Government stores across the Continent at absolute cost.

It may be remarked that of the £45,000 which is asked it is proposed that fully one fourth should be placed on the Navy Vote as a subvention similar to that paid to other great steamer companies for steamers built up to Admiralty requirements and available in war time for naval purposes. Little need be said to point out the obvious value of such steamers in time of war. They would be on the spot, in the distant Pacific; possessed of higher speed than any probable cruiser of the enemy, and far greater coal endurance. They could, for instance, be loaded with coal, or men, or torpedoes and torpedo boats, with ammunition or warlike stores, which they could transfer, without chance of capture, to the British ships or stations in the China and Australian seas in from ten to fifteen days' time, or they could be utilised as the scouts and screens of the fighting fleet, or to carry despatches in the not improbable event of cut cables. They would also be sufficiently armed to harass the enemy's commerce and even some of his cruisers.

In regard to strategy, it is right to recall the fact that the Russian Government has now sanctioned the completion of an extended railway system from St. Petersburg, through Siberia and along the northern frontier of China, all the way to their arsenal port of Wladiwostock, on the Japan Sea. It is estimated that this railway will be practically completed by the year 1893, and that it will place that outpost of Russia within twenty days of St. Petersburg.

Commercial men have felt that, in addition to providing more speedy means of intercourse, such action would stimulate Canadian development and be something of a return for the patriotic energy of Canada in creating that great Queen's Highway which now crosses the wide Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Such action will lay the foundation of a system ready to take up the command of that rapidly increasing trade which must follow on the continued growth of Australia and Canada and California, and on the vigorous opening up of the islands of the Pacific and the China seas and of the great continent of China.

Public opinion evidently is determined by this means to secure and develop the general trade of the British Empire; to maintain the legitimate commercial pre-eminence of the nation; to retain command over the markets of the Far East; to aid the development of the great colonies whose shores are washed by the Pacific, and to improve greatly the facilities for the conveyance of mails, men, and merchandise between trans-Pacific ports and the United Kingdom. The Government, with wise decision, has not allowed to pass this signal opportunity for laying the foundations of British maritime predominance in the Pacific.

GENERAL EDWARDES has succeeded to the Deesa command, and has thoroughly recovered from the sharp attack of illness that compelled him to throw up the command in Bombay.

AN inquiry is being conducted at Fategarh into the alleged attempt to poison the Manchester Regiment. The committee appointed to test the beer supplied to the troops has already examined over two hundred casks, which were found to be untainted. This (says a correspondent) throws further suspicion on the poisoned cask, half of which had been consumed before evil effects showed themselves. The case is causing much local interest, and the chemical report is awaited with anxiety. Some reports say that adulteration took place in the canteen; others that it may be the result of an effect to deprive Messrs. Mackinnon and Company of the beer contract. The authorities at Fategarh are most vigilant, especially since the chemical analysis on the Agra beer case showed a heavy admixture of arsenic.

THE JUBILEE OF HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY QUEEN VICTORIA, EMPRESS OF INDIA, IN THE PRESIDENCY OF MADRAS.*

The benighted Presidency, as regards the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee, belies its name. It would be difficult to conceive a more gratifying record of loyalty and devotion to the Throne than Sir Charles Lawson has presented to the public. It was not here and there, but everywhere. It was not alone in great cities like Madras, Tanjore, Arcot, and the such like, that the incense of patriotism rose heavenwards; it was not alone the rich and wealthy who contributed out of their abundance to the Jubilee fund intended to celebrate the completion of the fiftieth year of Her Most Gracious Majesty's reign. The movement was universal, extending from the towns counting their inhabitants by hundreds of thousands to the humblest villages with a sparse and poor population; the meanest subject of the Crown did his diligence gladly. And how magnificent the results! Thousands of the poor were fed, and, at least, for once in their lives, were supremely happy. The anniversary, too, was a regular gala day. There were fireworks, theatricals, music, dancing, illuminations, torchlight processions, athletic sports, salutes, addresses, and the thousand and one minutiæ of a national holiday and time of rejoicing. Nor were the festivities the only means of marking an event which, so far as India is concerned, has never occurred before, and which may never happen again. Here public liberality founded a hall and reading-rooms, there a town-hall; this town established a hospital, that city a public school; this village preferred a market, that hamlet a clock tower; this enthusiast endowed a scholarship; that benefactor subscribed funds to help poor students in their education!

But all and everyone did somewhat; and last, but to our notion by no means least, on well-nigh all occasions the National Anthem of old England concluded the day's pleasure. And what a bond of unity in this simple strain, linking East and West in harmony, peace, and happiness, proclaiming that henceforth India's foes are England's enemies, that Britain's might is the strength of the Land of Sun: one people, one Empire, one Queen. This is the moral of Sir Charles Lawson's most interesting volume, containing as it does not only a complete record of the Jubilee amongst the Madrassees, but a valuable historical retrospect of the Presidency annals, accompanied by a summary of the administrative arrangements during the last fifty years of the Christian era.

JOHN BULL'S ARMY FROM A FRENCH POINT OF VIEW.†

The opinions of a foreign critic in regard to our national shortcomings are always valuable, the more so when, as in this case, they are the result of mature reflection, cautious deliberation, and sound judgment. Nor can there be a more important subject of consideration than the army. Faults and defects in that direction may mean the ruin of the Empire. Captain France's examination therefore of "John Bull's Army" is a welcome contribution to the stock of public knowledge. Written without prejudice it commands attention, and it would be well if those in high places would cast a glance at its pages and gather the views of a thoughtful foreigner upon the military system and its working in this country.

To our minds the outcome of the whole matter is somewhat inexplicable. In the twenty-fourth chapter, under the head of "Conclusion," Captain France sums up his views as to the moral worth of the English army, and what does he proclaim?

Admitting the bravery of the officers as unquestioned and unquestionable, he avers that one and all, from the subaltern to the general, are "ignorant of the first principles of war;" that convoys are cut off and regiments annihilated through ignorance or contempt of principles known to all corporals; that there is an overabundance of "administrative carelessness, and the usual errors of officialism; that there is 'penny wise and pound foolish' economy; that the fear of expenditure paralyses the action of all military functionaries; that England is in a bad way; that, humiliated in Egypt, menaced in the possession of India, the loss of which would ruin her, the first cannon-shot of a Continental war in which England should be involved would sound for her the tocsin of disaster." In short, he sums up her fate in one solitary word, "obliteration."

Nothing could be more trenchant than this; yet, withal, the Gallic hero sees much to admire, and compares us favourably in some respects with his own people at home. The loyalty of the army is unquestioned, the esprit de corps is superb, the mode of recruiting admirable, so different from the conscription which preys upon the vitals of the nation; the physique of the men, consequent on good fare and good quarters, is unrivalled, while athletics and games of skill harden the sinews and improve the constitution. But, it may be asked, are all these advantages to count for naught in a campaign à l'outrance? England, rich in the sinews of war, can maintain the combat for a period practically unlimited, and quite beyond the capacity of any foreign nation, which could not endure the strain beyond a certain fixed period. Is it certain, too, that our Navy is worthless, that our commanders are brainless, and our arrangements arrant folly? If so, is it admitted on all hands that our neighbours are quite perfect—chips from the heavenly workshops? Captain France himself allows that as regards the army across the Channel there is much which is wrong and more which is questionable, and we fancy this is the truth in regard to all nations. It has been said that he is the best general who makes the fewest mistakes, and so it is with peoples; the most successful campaigns are those where errors are fewest and disasters least in number; but perfection is not the share of mortals here below.

These remarks are not penned with any view of depreciating the value of Captain France's work, which merits the highest praise, but merely to point out that, in the words of Shakespeare, "Methinks he doth protest too much."

"When doctors disagree, who shall decide?" M. Pasteur inoculates as a preventive against hydrophobia. Dr. Lutaud contends that such a procedure produces the very disease it is intended to prevent. Which theory is right it is impossible to say. All that is certain is, that it is none too wise to be inoculated till science has set the matter at rest, and solved a problem which at present is being conducted at the expense of human flesh subsisting. This is too horrible.

In the Shires, by Sir Randal Roberts (F. V. White and Co.) is a sporting novel, written in a style bright, fresh, and crisp as a pleasant hunting morn. Whyte Melville himself could hardly have written a better description of "The Chessington Hunt" and "The Kill in the Open," which constitute the two first chapters of the Baronet's story, which, however, is not altogether a "horsey" one, for it deals with softer subjects, amongst which, of course, love leads the field. The plot is slight, but the characters are well drawn, and some are evidently portraits taken from life. That of the Squire, who went in the way of honour and nobility of purpose as straight as he rode to the hounds, is a charming sketch of a good old English gentleman—one of the olden time—happily, we hope, not altogether extinct. And Lady Di, the hard-riding lady of Chessingtonshire, who gives him her hand in marriage at last, is also a brightly-drawn sketch, which must have been taken from nature too. A companion picture is that of another delightful Englishwoman, whose trials and sorrows are touchingly told; and there is a Vicar, who proves himself to be "as good a pastor and as fair a specimen of muscular Christianity as ever rode to hounds." Altogether In the Shires is pleasant reading, and although it may take more than "fifty minutes from find to finish" for perusal, it will be found by the reader at the end to be like the run described in the opening chapter—"one of the best things" of the season.

In the Army and Navy Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) for October Dr. Pill concludes the account of his "Six Months' Ocean Tramp" of 25,681 miles, which he has told so pleasantly and well. Mr. O'Byrne continues his able history of "The Royal Navy from the accession of Her Majesty Queen Victoria," and Mr. Rathbone Low gives an interesting account of the early establishment of the "East India Company at Bussorah." A paper on the "Reorganisation of the Artillery" touches upon a matter which is of immediate professional interest at the present moment, although there is much diversity of opinion upon it. Mr. J. Colquhoun brings to a conclusion the brightly told serial of "Every Inch a Soldier," and "Furlough" winds up the month as usual. This magazine is keeping up its well-earned reputation with the Services.

The Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) for the current month contains a variety of articles of interest and importance to the readers for whom it particularly caters, and is illustrated in its now well-known style. Amongst the literary contributors are Admiral Ingram, the Hon. H. N. Shore, R.N., Mr. Charles Marvin, and others whose claims to be listened to upon the questions they discuss are always recognised. Captain Fall gives further chapters on Modern Tactics; General Mitford continues the pleasant narrative of his wanderings from the Orient to the Occident; and Colonel L'Estrange, in concluding his memoir on General Boulanger, wisely "declines to predict what that officer's future may be." Mr. Charles Marvin, consistently with the views he has expressed elsewhere, predicts disaster to England unless she immediately constructs a railway to the Helmund to counteract Russian approaches towards Herat; but Dr. Dickinson somewhat allays our fears of an immediate advance upon India by showing with pen and pencil that the Behar Light Horse are ready to meet the invaders when they come. There are several technical papers in the present issue of the magazine which, fully illustrated as they are, will no doubt be of professional interest to the services, especially one on "Quick's breech-loading gun." The 44th Regiment will feel flattered, and justly so, at the notice given of their historical records, in which notice the reviewer refers to Afghanistan, but not to New Orleans, where the corps also earned a name for itself. This magazine ought to be well supported by the Services, for it is the only illustrated professional periodical which administers to their requirements.

At the present moment the condition of Ireland is the absorbing thought of statesmen and all who take an interest in that beautiful but unhappy country. Those who imagine that a panacea for the disease of discontent will be found in Home Rule cannot do better than purchase and peruse a little story called "Events in an Irish Country House in 1880," by Etoile, and published by John Hayward, of London and Manchester. It is an unassuming but truthful exposé of the machinations of men who are still dragging Ireland down to deeper degradation, and it is well worth reading, not only for this but for some excellent practical suggestions which the author offers for the amelioration of the present state of distress and disaster, which is covering the whole country as with a shroud.

We have received a most tasteful set of Scott's poems. Comprised in six volumes, with a neat little case, clearly printed, accurate and picturesque, Messrs. Bryce's venture, if it does not command success, deserves it; seeing that all this, amounting as it does to upwards of a thousand pages of print, is procurable for the modest trifle of 5s.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

Officers who have not been able to take the Burma leave this year will be allowed 90 days' leave next year, bnt this will include the ordinary 60 days' privilege leave.

Applications from officers of the British service for leave to Europe, on private affairs, are in future to be restricted to one year.

The 2-1st Brigade, London Division Garrison Artillery, which will arrive in India by the Malabar on Oct. 20th, has been selected for mountain equipments, and the 7-1st Brigade, Scottish Division, which will arrive by the same ship, has been selected for heavy battery equipment.

The Government of India have again refused to meet the expenses of transit of selected shots in the Bengal Presidency, to and from central stations, for rifle competition. In this respect the minor Presidencies who have had their annual meetings at the Government expense since 1868 and 1871, respectively, have a decided advantage.

It was resolved to transfer some of the young officers in the Madras and Bombay Staff Corps to the Punjab Frontier Force, thus giving them an equal chance with their compeers in Bengal of service on the border. It has been found, however, that Bombay has not any superfluous subalterns; and only one officer (Lieutenant Holland, 5th Bombay Infantry) has been gazetted to the Frontier Force. Madras also has, so far, been unable to spare any of its juniors, but seven or eight will be sent in the course of the next few weeks, Sir Charles Arbuthnot having consented to these transfers. By the 1st of October the Frontier Infantry will again have its full complement of wing officers; the cavalry are fully officered already.

Upon the departure on leave of Colonel Hawkes, Officiating Commissary General-in-Chief, Colonel Badcock, Commissary-General of the Western Circle, takes up the appointment. As Colonel Hawkes comes into his Colonel's allowance on the 3rd March next, while Colonel J. V. Hunt, the substantive head of the Department, retires on the expiration of his leave in December, 1888, when he also attains the Colonel's allowance, Colonel Badcock will remain in possession until he becomes Commissary General-in-Chief in permanence. Major Patch will officiate for Colonel Badcock in the Rawal Pind Circle.

The 52nd, and not the 27th Bombay Infantry will be brought back from Burma in the course of the coming relief season. The 25th were the first to go there, and as a general principle regiments are being relieved in order of their length of service in the country.

The following officers in the Bombay Staff Corps have been promoted to the rank of captain on the completion of eleven years' service:—Lieut. Albert Edward Leslie, Lieut. Richard William Preston, Lieut. Gervase Francis Newport Tinley, Lieut. Cecil Metcalfe Grey.

Colonel T. W. Rutherfurd, late Commandant 83rd Bengal Infantry, has been appointed to the command of the Station of Delhi.

Corps of Guides.—Lieuts. G. B. Hodson, 28th Madras Infantry, and F. G. H. Davis, 40th Bengal Infantry, to be Squadron Officers on augmentation.

18th Bengal Infantry.—Major R. H. F. Rennick to be Commandant, vice Colonel A. C. Toker, vacated on appointment to the Military Department; Major W. H. Browne to be Second-in-Command, and Captain F. G. Vivian to be Wing Commander.

It is stated that three at least of the new 12-pounder breech-loading batteries will arrive in India before the end of the year. There are some twelve of these batteries, horse and field, at home now, and the new guns for others are being made as quickly as possible. Carriages for the guns arriving in India will in great part be made at the Fattergarh factory.

General Sir Frederick Sleigh Roberts, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.I.E., V.C., Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Forces in the East Indies, attained his fifty-fifth year on the 30th ult., having been born at Cawnpore on Sept. 30, 1832. Sir Frederick Roberts is a born soldier, having first seen the light in an Indian military cantonment. His father was the late General Sir Abraham Roberts, G.C.B., who took a distinguished part in our first war in Afghanistan in conflict with Dost Mahomed; and his mother was Isabella, daughter of Major Abraham Bunbury, of the 62nd Regiment, and of Kilfeacle, county Tipperary. For his distinguished services, especially in the recent campaigns in Afghanistan, he has attained almost every honour which a soldier can covet.

JUBILEE REWARDS.

They've just fired fifty guns, Jack,
In honour of our Queen,
A more prosp'rous, happy fifty years
Old England scarce has seen.
And hearts in India swell with pride,
But long in vain to be
At home in dear old England
For this glorious Jubilee.

Tis many, many years, Jack,
We've soldiered now together,
And many a weary "Sentry go"
We've done in monsoon weather.
They say we are to have rewards,
That Government will see
The soldier not neglected
At this happy Jubilee.

We've had some heavy trials, Jack,
Kept steady, firm and true,
No record in defaulters' book
Is found for Me or You.
We've never shirked our duty, Jack,
When called by land or sea,
So the Queen will surely think of us at this her Jubilee.

To-day the order's out, Jack!!!
Just hear what I've been told!!
That all except "Defaulters"
Are left out in the cold!!!
That all the "duty shirkers"
Are free'd from lock and key,
To laugh at those who've done their work,
Before the Jubilee.

Three times a year four annas, Jack,
Comes out as "extra batta,"
And whether spent in beer or tea
It really does not matter;
But this the greatest day of all
In after times will be Look'd on by all old soldiers
As a dreary Jubilee.

'Tis no use grumbling now, Jack,
The hook'n's out and read,
And you and I must mount our guard,
With four short nights in bed.
I really thought we should a grant
Of twelve months' service see,
And sooner have our soldiering done,
And bless the Jubilee.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1887.

A NEW ROUTE TO THE FAR EAST.

THE announcement that the Government has agreed to subsidise a mail service between Vancouver's Island and China is a matter for general congratulation and approval. In thus supporting the efforts of the Canadian Government and the Canadian Pacific Railway to open the new Canadian route to the Far East the Imperial Government has done well. Commerce will receive a healthy impetus, and enterprising merchants and traders may look forward hopefully now to gains which they had almost despaired of ever making in these bad times. China and Japan will be brought into closer touch with England and Australia, and there can be no doubt that an enormous and profitable business will result from the closer relationship which will be gained. But allowing all this and more, we fail to see why this new route should be considered as the special highway to India, and why correspondents and editors should indulge in so much gush about the enormous advantages it will give to England in securing her communications with India. Writers in the Times and Engineering may have their own special reasons for this gush, but the calm Spectator, whose conductors know certainly something about India, appear to have been touched by the same glowing enthusiasm. That journal on Saturday, in an article upon this subject, has the following :—

> China and Russia are the two predestined rulers of Northern Asia. With Russia we have, and seem likely to have for some time to come, a possible occasion of quarrel on our Indian frontier. So far as England is concerned, this possibility need never be realised. We want nothing of Russia save to be let alone. But the complications of European politics do not allow Russia to use the same language. Or, rather, they do not allow her to use it in the same sense. To be let alone, as applied to the English in India, means to be left in peace to govern the territory we have. To be let alone as applied to the Russians in Europe may mean to be left at peace to annex fresh territory. We cannot be certain that an attempt at this annexation will not saddle us with responsibilities both towards our own people and towards other European States that we could not honourably or safely decline, and in that case the neighbourhood of Russia to our Indian frontier would at once become a serious danger. In this case the advantage of a Chinese alliance, the advantage of even the benevolent neutrality of China, would be incalculable. The mere necessity of keeping an army of observation on her Chinese frontier would make Russia very much less formidable as an enemy of India.
> As regards India itself, any gain to be looked for from the new route is alternative and contingent. But it is not for that reason to be put aside. So long, no doubt, as we can use the Suez Canal in time of war without molestation or hindrance, we shall not want to send reinforcements to India by way of Vancouver's Island. But it must not be forgotten that in time of war the temptation to close the Canal against our troopships may be overwhelming, while the facilities of closing it as by accident would be very great. We have only to imagine ourselves left in possession of the Cape route to India, and nothing else to see as by an illuminating flash what the Vancouver's Island route might become to us. The Cape route, as has been well pointed out by a correspondent of the Times, is largely a coast route ; and where the coasts belong to foreign Powers such a route must always contain a possibility of danger. The route by Vancouver's Island is throughout either on the high seas or on British territory. It crosses the Atlantic to Canada, it crosses Canada to Vancouver's Island, it crosses the Pacific to India. Under circumstances, therefore, which, if not probable, are at least quite possible, it might be of great advantage to us to have the power of sending troops to India by this road as well as, or rather than, by the Cape ; while in the conceivable case of our desiring to send troops to Northern China the gain would be great even over the route by the Canal.

So far as the above refers to China it may be accepted as a sensible and correct view, but with regard to India other considerations intervene. It might happen certainly that the Suez Canal route might be closed to us, although so long as we occupy Egypt, and we are in no hurry to leave it, we could hurry troops across overland as we have done before. But to suggest that the Cape route may be closed to us also means that England will have lost command of the sea. In that case of what avail would the new route be to her ? If she could not give safe convoy to troops and munitions of war proceeding to India, viâ the Cape, how would she manage to escort them across the Atlantic to Canada? Indeed, the possibility then would be that Canada would be lost to us, too, and the poor old British lion completely "chawed up," to the delight of Yankee filibusters and the American Irish. That this contingency is not in the near future we are happy to believe, and so we can welcome the new route which offers such advantages towards quicker communication with China, between which Power and Great Britain there ought to be a closer and more definite alliance. But the route is not the "Highway to India," as more than one journal has called it.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient.

Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Cholera Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

THE BROAD ARROW
AND
EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."
INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, (I may say) handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scene from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 30th September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 23th September; and from Calcutta to the 27th September.

THE Viceroy leaves Simla on the 27th October, and, after making a short stoppage at Sukkur on the 31st, arrives at Gulistan on the 2nd November, and visits Gwaja Pass on the 3rd. He arrives at Kila Abdulla on the 4th and visits Khojak Pass, and then proceeds to Quetta, where a halt is to be made on the 6th, 7th, and 8th. From Quetta his Excellency proceeds to Karachi, where a halt is to be made on the 12th, 13th, and 14th. On the 19th the party arrive at Dera Ghazi Khan, on the 19th and 20th at Dera Ismail Khan, on the 22nd at Darya Khan, and on the 24th at Peshawar, where they remain till the 28th. A halt will be made at Khohat on the 29th, and at Rawalpindi on the 1st and 2nd December. On the 3rd December his Excellency arrives at Lahore, and remains till the 7th. A halt is to be made from the 9th to the 12th at Burtpore. On the 14th the party arrive at Allahabad, and on the 15th at Benares, reaching Calcutta on the evening of December 17th.

LADY DUFFERIN and Lady Roberts accompany the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief on the Frontier tour.

A DESPATCH from the Secretary of State regarding the alleged block in promotion in the Telegraph Department authorises the Government of India, with a view to facilitate promotion, to offer exceptional pensions to a large class of officers in order to induce them to retire before the time when, under the existing rules, they become entitled to pension. The officers chiefly affected by this offer are those who came out in the years 1869 and 1870 and 1871. The reorganisation of the existing grades of the officers of the department is also directed, a measure which will afford immediate promotion to several officers. The Secretary of State wishes it to be distinctly understood that he cannot grant any further concessions to the department.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL NAIRNE, Inspector-General of Artillery, will make an extensive tour during the cold weather. He will be accompanied by an officer to discharge for the time the duties of brigade-major, that post having been abolished as a permanent appointment on the re-arrangement of the Artillery Staff in India. Captain H. F. Mercer, R.A., is the officer selected.

MAJOR-GENERAL ÆNEAS PERKINS, on return from leave, has resumed the duties of Chief Engineer in the Punjab.

THE brigadiers at the Cavalry Camp of Exercise at Lawrencepur will be Lieutenant-Colonel Cooke, 17th Lancers; Colonel Palmer, 9th Bengal Lancers; and Colonel Macnaghten, 13th Bengal Lancers. No special commandants of artillery will be appointed, the senior officers being chosen on the spot.

THE Commissary-Generalship for Transport will fall vacant next spring, when Colonel Clifford returns to his regiment, the 5th Punjab Cavalry, to take command, vice Colonel Lance.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. BARRON, of the Survey Department, who has recently been to the Straits Settlement in order to advise the Colonial Government there on survey matters, seems to have convinced the local authorities of the excellence and thoroughness of the Indian system of survey. Operations in the Settlement are therefore likely to be undertaken in the systematic way in which they have been carried out in India.

MR. CRAWLEY BOEVEY, Chief Presidency Magistrate, has acquitted Rukhmabai and her uncle of the charges of libel preferred against them by Dadajee's uncle.

NEWS from Kabul, so late as the 16th September, speaks of the perfect tranquillity there, and nothing further has been heard of the Ghilzai revolt.

A REGULATION has been published forbidding any persons, not being Natives, to reside in the ruby district in Burma without special license, and to dig for precious stones. The infringement of the regulation renders the party liable to imprisonment for one month, or fine, or both.

MR. C. W. MELLOR, has retired from the North-West Civil Service.

THE Army Headquarters will leave Simla on November 8th, and reopen offices in Calcutta on November 14th.

MAJOR CARTER, R.E., the Director of Submarine Defences, is now in Simla, where defence projects are being very completely threshed out.

THE quantity of wheat exported from the Central Provinces from the 1st of October last up to the 10th of September was 2,9,8,526 bags, of two-and-a-half maunds each, as compared with 2,755,256 bags exported in the corresponding period of last year.

IT is said to be not improbable that Burma will come under the operation of the Income Tax Act next year.

SIR CHARLES TURNER has arrived in Simla. Nothing further will now be done till Sir Charles Aitchison comes out, when the cold weather programme of the Commission will be settled.

ANTHRAX is reported as having broken out in Srinagar.

THE personnel of the Secretariat of the Military Department is undergoing rapid change. Colonel Newmarch, the Secretary, does not return; Colonel Crookshank has already left to take command of a Regiment; Major Dean is to officiate for Colonel Ben Williams as Director of Remounts, and Lieutenant-Colonel Hay retires at the end of the year about the same time as Major Robertson, C.I.E., who retires on a pension.

THE estate of the late ex-King of Oudh is to be administered by Governmant.

JEMADAR AMIR MUHAMMED KHAN, an old soldier of thirty years' standing, and one of Sir F. Roberts' Orderlies in Afghanistan, commands the party of Bengal Lancers which forms the escort of Major Peacock and Captain Yate along the Afghan boundary line.

NINE steel steam vessels are being constructed at the Bombay Government Dockyard for patrol purposes on the rivers in Upper Burma.

THE visit of Mr. O'Meara, the dentist, to Cabul to attend the Amir, recalls the former occasion when that potentate was attended by an English dentist. It was during the Rawal Pindi durbar in March, 1885, Mr. J. Miller of Calcutta being the operator. The consultations between doctor and patient took place under remarkable surroundings. For some reason best known to himself the Amir always caused Mr. Miller to wait upon him at twelve o'clock at night. Surrounded by several of his officers (to see fair play apparently), in a dimly lit verandah of the house allotted to his use during the durbar, the Amir would call in Mr. Miller to examine his teeth. This was not an easy operation under the circumstances, but the patient conducted himself with great meekness in the dentist's hands, and after two or three consultations Mr. Miller set him right for the time. But his Highness is a gouty subject, and his dental pangs have again broken out with much violence lately. Hence Mr. O'Meara has undertaken the adventurous journey to Cabul, where, as we recently announced, he has arrived safely, and is receiving every hospitality from the Amir.

NOTES.

Sir Joseph West Ridgeway, the new Under-Secretary for Ireland, has arrived in Dublin and taken possession of his official residence in the Phœnix Park. His appointment still continues to be a matter of surmise and wonder, and, of course, is being commented on in not very complimentary terms by the Irish Press. Except that he is an Irishman by birth Sir West Ridgeway has had no more to do with Ireland or Irish political affairs than he has had to do with the North Pole. Whether the settlement he has made regarding the Afghan frontier delimitation is a satisfactory one or not time alone can show. It is only a very trusting nature which believes in Russian promises and boundary pillars. But, however excellent the services he rendered in this matter may be, they were hardly of the nature to fit him for the post into which he has now been thrown.

It is, of course, a far cry from Ireland to India, but the Irish question is being written about considerably in the Indian Native Press just now. The writers, knowing, of course, nothing of the subject, attempt to discuss learnedly of the advantages which Home Rule would bring to India. That an Indian officer should be sent to Ireland to put it down there will, of course, be commented upon as an instance of the determination of the Government of England to do injury and injustice to Ireland, and, sooner or later, to India. Sir West Ridgeway has not an easy card to play in order to please all parties.

The Nizam's gift still appears to puzzle the Government of India. The question of whether it should be accepted or not seems still to be an undecided one. The hesitation displayed by the Paramount Power is certainly neither wise in policy nor complimentary to the State offering the gift. No doubt there are difficulties in the way. A great nation ought to be able to find means for defending its territory without condescending to accept private gifts towards such defence. And it is possible, notwithstanding whatever may be said or written to the contrary, the Nizam will expect some return for the gift offered—which return could hardly be less than the restitution of the Berars. This restitution is not likely to be made, and so the situation is a difficult and a delicate one.

In saying this, however, it is only fair to acknowledge that the action on the part of the Nizam's Government appears to be a wholly honourable and spontaneous one. The Bombay Gazette, commenting upon the offer, says :—

> In the early part of 1885, when the complications on the Afghan frontier threatened to embroil England and Russia, the Nizam was the first of the Indian princes to come forward and place the whole resources of his State at the disposal of the Government of India. On that occasion Sir Salar Jung, who was then Minister, addressed a letter, by command of the Nizam, to the Resident, in which it was pointed out that the Russians calculated on the baseless assumption that in the event of war they would have in front an imperfectly united India. It is necessary to undeceive them, the Minister said, by direction of the Nizam, and therefore his Highness proposed, with the sanction of the Viceroy, sending the Minister's brother to Rawal Pindi to represent Hyderabad at the demonstration which was then about to be made. The presence of a representative of the leading Mahomedan Native State, it was added, would prove useful, by demonstrating to the Afghans, the Russians, and the world at large that India stood shoulder to shoulder with the Government of the Queen-Empress in resisting aggression.

It may, therefore, be taken for granted that the proferred gift comes without any inconvenient terms attaching to it. But questions of policy must arise if it be accepted. Why should Hyderabad stand alone in this exhibition of loyalty? Will it not be expected that all the Feudatory States should follow the example, and make offers also for the defence of the Indian Empire? Such offers have not yet been made, and should they now come they can hardly be considered as spontaneous. It would, perhaps, be more fitting to the dignity of England to respectfully decline the offers altogether, and to state that she has the means, the men, and the money for the defence of her Indian possessions without undergoing obligations to any one.

But it must be allowed that something should be done with regard to the numerous and motley armed rabbles constituting the armies of the Native States. It is, perhaps, possible to utilise these so as to make them useful in case of an invasion of India. But such reorganisation would involve considerable trouble and expense. At present these wild hordes of "men with muskets" are a serious tax upon the unfortunate villagers, who really have to pay for their maintenance; and they are altogether useless for any purposes of internal defence. Drilled and disciplined under English officers, they might become a strong bulwark against any invader; but again the old question will crop up—"Quis custodiet ipsos custodes?"

An unfortunate incident appears to have arisen out of the late Lucknow anniversary dinner. Sir Donald Stewart some time ago expressed an opinion that the garrison of Lucknow could and would have held out even if Havelock and Outram had not come to its relief. This opinion seems to have been interpreted in certain quarters to have meant that in Sir Donald's eyes that relief was not worthy of the fame which has been given to it—compared with the after relief effected by Sir Colin Campbell. General Innes at the Lucknow dinner gracefully acknowledged that Havelock and Outram's advance saved the garrison, and surely this acknowledgment ought to be sufficient.

A military contemporary does not seem to think it so. But here is additional evidence. The Bengal Hurkaru of Oct. 22, 1857, said, writing of this relief:—"General Havelock's expedition has not been in vain. This is evident from the fact that the relieving force arrived only just in time, and that the garrison could not have held out. Such a prudential measure as waiting for a larger force would therefore have defeated its object. The place would have been relieved when none were left alive within it."

It should also be remembered that the rebels had pushed two mines under the very centre of the defences. Had not the relieving force come in time the explosion of these would have been a matter of certain destruction to the gallant defenders. It is rather late in the day now to agitate questions of this kind, but it is certain that a great and generous soldier like Donald Stewart never intended to make light of the brave deeds of the men who, under Havelock and Outram, won their way to the relief of the beleagured garrison of Lucknow.

Dhuleep Singh has written a letter to the editors of the leading native journals in India. The letter states that three days before the Maharajah quitted England for India Sir Owen Burne called upon him, coming from the India Office, and offered him £50,000 in settlement of his claims against the British Government, provided he would give up all notion of going to India. He laughed at the offer. His subsequent arrest at Aden converted his loyalty into bitter hatred for the enemies of his race, since his eyes were then opened for the first time to the fact that no matter how long one remained loyal to the English Crown the ultimate reward would only be humiliation, degradation, and imprisonment, but not justice. While he remained at Aden a long correspondence ensued between himself and the Indian Government. Finally he telegraphed to the Queen, requesting a public trial, and to the Viceroy, asking whether the Government would defray the expenses of his legal advisers if they came to him at Aden. From both quarters he received unfavourable replies. He then telegraphed, repudiating the treaty of annexation which had been extorted from him when he was eleven years old by his sanctimonious guardian. He therefore returned to Paris an independent Sovereign, free to wrench his dominions from the hands of his unscrupulous guardian. While in Paris, it is added, he carefully considered his grievances, and having received communications from India from many of England's victims, he formed a solemn resolve to consecrate the remainder of his life to the freeing of his country from the British yoke. He hints that he has now placed himself entirely at the disposal of Russia, and asserts that he will serve his new Sovereign, the Tzar, with his life-blood, without seeking any pecuniary reward, as his loyal subjects and countrymen have provided for his wants. He acknowledges that he has received every consideration during his thirty-two years' residence in England; but denies that that is sufficient compensation for the loss of a kingdom and an immense private fortune. He compares British rule and Russian rule, attacking the former, and instances the conquest of India as a proof of treachery, fraud, and the violation of treaties.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 16.

The Government has arrived at no definite decision as yet with reference to the offer of the Nizam of Hyderabad to supply sixty lakhs for the purpose of frontier defence. A letter of grateful acknowledgment has been sent by the Viceroy to the Nizam, but the question of combined defensive measures, including the policy of permitting the feudatory chiefs actively to participate in the work, is one so pregnant with future consequences of the highest Imperial importance that the very gravest consideration is required both by the Indian and English Governments before a final determination can be come to. The question has created very lively interest in India, and has been freely discussed by both the English and the Native Press. It would be difficult, however, to abstract a more valuable opinion than that of Sir Muhdava Rao, who holds probably the leading position in India among Native political thinkers. The following letter contains an emphatic expression of his views on the subject :—

"I hope the report is true. I hope the Government of India will cheerfully and gratefully accept the offer. I can see nothing wrong in the offer, or in its acceptance. Probably the Native papers may heap adverse criticisms on his Highness, but calm reflection will only result in crediting his Highness with sound sense and judgment in the matter. His Highness's offer is not only good in itself, but excellent as an example. The strengthening of the North-West frontier is as beneficial to all the Native Princes as to all the rest of India. It follows, therefore, that the expenses of the measure should be shared by both the Princes and the people of India.

"It will, no doubt, be said that the Government of India is already under an obligation to protect the Native States, and has received or is receiving from those States consideration in requital of that obligation, and that there are treaties fixing both that obligation and that consideration. But it should be remembered that these treaties were entered into many years ago, and that the circumstances in which they were entered into have now immensely altered. The difficulties of protecting the Native States against foreign foes have now immeasurably increased, and some proportionate readjustment of the consideration in relation to the obligation of protection is rendered desirable, if not necessary. In the nature of things the same service cannot be performed for the same remuneration, except for short intervals, implying continuity of the same circumstances. If the circumstances change, and render the service more difficult, the remuneration must need some readjustment—a readjustment which his Highness the Nizam has shrewdly anticipated and voluntarily offered. The credit of it should not be denied him."

The frontier defences will form the principal object of consideration during the Viceroy's projected tour. The Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief will meet on the frontier the Military Member and the Public Works Member. An opportunity will be thus afforded of considering the whole question on the spot in all its various aspects—financial, military, political, and scientific. Very substantial progress has been already effected in building up a scientific frontier. Lord Dufferin is credited with the laudable ambition of perfecting this great military achievement, as the most impressive and important monument of his Viceregal rule.

At a recent meeting of the Bombay Legislative Council the Governor paid a well-deserved tribute to the memory of the late Sir Maxwell Melvill. He doubted whether Bombay had ever possessed a Member of Council more single-minded in his devotion to its best interests. The chief characteristics of his work were its thoughtfulness and finish. Whether he had to decide the most important questions or settle those of comparative insignificance affecting only the humblest individuals, he never rested satisfied until every possible consideration had been thoroughly and conscientiously exhausted. The Governor proceeded to express his further regret for the recent death of a Native member.

From a Government review of the various gaol reports it appears that in 1886 there were 748 gaols in British India, and 364,934 persons were imprisoned during the year, the latter number being nearly 14 000 in excess of the return for 1885. Among the convicts were 899 Europeans, 219 Eurasians, 39,665 Mahomedans, 90,748 Hindoos, and 12,867 Buddhists; 140,843 were males, 9,265 females. The total cost in maintenance was Rs. 47,59,878, the earnings of the prisoners were Rs. 11,51,206, and the net cost of the Gaol Department was Rs. 36,08,572.

The decrease in the net receipts from the Guaranteed and State railways for the first six months of the current financial year was Rs. 1,591,190—say £150,000. This will still further dislocate the working out of the Budget.

The Punjab police report for 1886 87 discloses a serious increase in crime, the number of offences being 72,915, against 63,502, and 62,510 in the two previous years. This is attributable to the impunity with which offences are committed. The remedial measures recommended are the provision of an adequate staff of European magistrates, legalised surveillance over habitual offenders, and greater discrimination by magistrates in accepting sureties for good behaviour. The report points out as the criminal tribes of the Punjab the Minas, the Tagus, the Beluchis, the Horuis, the Rouriahs, the Sansis, and Pakhiwas.

At a recent dinner given by the Maharajah of Mysore, the Resident, in proposing that Prince's health, said he had been much struck by the high character and efficiency of the Mysore Administration. It was a pure, sound, healthy administration, even surpassing the good accounts which he had heard of it before he came to Mysore. He desired to say with reference to the Maharajah personally, that he presented a unique instance of the ruler of a great Indian State who, without abating one jot of his dignity, without in the very slightest degree denationalising himself, without forfeiting one atom of the reverence and regard of his subjects, could come among Europeans, whether on the racecourse or on the polo ground, in the hunting field or the tennis-court, or any other social gathering, and be welcomed as a thorough gentleman and a thorough sportsman.

The Maharajah of Durbungah, one of the most enlightened and munificent of the territorial chiefs in India, has made a further contribution of Rs. 10,000 to Lady Dufferin's Hospital Nurse Fund, with the view of assisting in some degree the poorer Eurasians to earn a livelihood. An earnest application has been made to the Government to convert certain obsolete vessels into training ships for the education of Eurasian youths for the mercantile marine.

BURMA.

RANGOON, OCT. 16.

General Gordon, commanding the Lower Burma division, has published a general order conveying the hearty thanks of the Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, and the Chief Commissioner of Burma to Major Harvey, of the South Wales Borderers, and the officers and men who took part in the recent attack on Boshway's camp, when that formidable leader was killed. The surprise of Boshway's camp by the mounted infantry under Major Harvey, after a march of 52 miles in 14 hours through Burmese jungles, in the sultry heat of October, was certainly a feat of which those who accomplished it may well feel proud. The complete rout of Boshway's band and his death constitute an important addition to the many good services already performed by the troops under General Gordon's command.

Boshway was the most formidable of all the partisan leaders who took the field after the capture of Mandalay. Originally an hereditary Thuggee, or magistrate of his village for many years before Thebaw's fall, Boshway had practically governed a considerable district, and levied blackmail over a wide territory, comprising the districts adjoining the old frontier, on the western bank of the Irrawaddy. The success with which Boshway so long eluded the large force employed to hunt him down shows the difficulties of jungle warfare in which the troops have been engaged, while the proceedings which forced Boshway to take up arms against us are a good illustration of the blunders committed in the earlier stages of the conquest of Upper Burma. Boshway early in the past year offered to surrender under the terms of the Viceroy's proclamation if his life was guaranteed. He had not then a dozen followers. The Deputy-Commissioner in charge of the district refused to accept the offer of a surrender, on the ground of the crimes committed by Boshway before the annexation of Upper Burma. With no hope left Boshway turned to bay. In the struggle which ensued a great loss of life and enormous expenditure were incurred. When General Roberts assumed the command in Burma and wiser counsels prevailed Boshway was offered more liberal terms to induce him to surrender than he had originally demanded. Boshway, however, apparently feared that the promises made would not be kept, and he refused to come in.

The good result of Boshway's defeat and death has been somewhat marred by an unfortunate affair at Yenangyoung. This important station on the Irrawaddy, a depôt for the shipment of the oil produced in the surrounding district, was attacked last week by two bodies of dacoits. One body crossed the river in boats, burnt some houses, with an enormous quantity of oil, and destroyed a large number of boats, which were set on fire and sent blazing down the stream. Although Yenangyoung when attacked was held by fifty of the military police, the assailants escaped almost without loss. It is understood that much dissatisfaction is felt by the local Government with the conduct of the police at Yenangyoung, and an inquiry will be held.

In the Chindwin district the mounted infantry has attacked Choungwa village, intending to surprise the local Woon, who had deserted and turned rebel. The village, which was stockaded, was captured with a number of prisoners and some arms. The rebel Woon, however, escaped. On their return eight of the party got separated in the thick jungle and were under fire for six hours, one of them being killed and three wounded.

The intelligence of Mr. Colquhohn's probable appointment to take charge of the Delimitation Commission for the settlement of the frontier between Burma and China has been received with general approval. Mr. Colquhoun's unusual qualification for this post are fully recognized. While in charge of the Tsagain district he displayed administrative ability of a high order and did excellent work.

A painful sensation was caused yesterday in Rangoon by the news that two corporals of the Royal Scots Fusiliers had been shot by Private Mulligan, of the same regiment. Some trifling quarrel had occurred on the previous day between Corporal Thomas and Mulligan. While Thomas was seated on Corporal Crisp's bed Mulligan, without warning, fired his rifle at a distance of a few feet. The bullet passed through Thomas's head and entered Crisp's chest above the heart. Death was instantaneous in both cases. The murderer narrowly escaped being lynched by the soldiers. The murdered men were buried yesterday with full military honours. General Gordon and his staff, together with the entire regiment of the Royal Scots Fusiliers, were present. Both the murdered men were general favourites in the regiment, and many of the soldiers were observed to shed tears at the burial. The discipline of the Royal Scots Fusiliers has for some time past been in an unsatisfactory condition. Some improvement has taken place since Colonel Jackson assumed the command, but there have been 700 cases of drunkenness in the regiment since last March. The general order recently issued directing the withdrawal of ammunition from the men only officially reached Rangoon from Madras on the day on which the murder was committed, and some hours after the event.

The Tounghoo-Mandalay Railway is being pushed on with great rapidity. Much disappointment is felt at the news that the Government of India has declined to approve the proposed Moo Valley Railway, on the ground that the scheme would be premature until means of internal communication had been provided. Upper Burma can never be thoroughly pacified unless the Moo Valley line be constructed, and some of the richest districts in Upper Burma must without it remain undeveloped.

AFGHANISTAN.

Calcutta, Oct. 16.

The mystery of Ayoub Khan's place of concealment still remains undisclosed. To-day's telegram from Quetta states that his whereabouts are unknown. He is believed to be sheltered by the Emir of Ghazni, who not only holds the position of Governor, but is a semi-independent chief, and who is not likely to surrender any one under his protection. Ayoub will, it is expected, appear before long among the Duranis of Farah, unless he should have been cowed by his initial failure. He by no means bears the reputation of a daring or desperate character, in either political or military affairs. The Afghans in the vicinity of Quetta are firmly possessed by the curious belief that Ayoub's flight was connived at by the British Government, in order to curb the excessive arrogance of the Ameer, unduly developed by the defeat of the Ghilzais.

Cholera is increasing at Candahar, and twenty seizures occur daily.

The recruiting for the Ameer's army among the Duranis is at a deadlock owing to the stoppage of the bounty hitherto paid to each recruit, under orders from Cabul. The Ameer is believed to have abandoned his intention of visiting Candahar.

Native correspondents report that General Gholam Hyder Khan has successfully attacked the Tekhi Ghilzais. The Ameer is said to be possessed of trustworthy information as to Ayoub's movements. Avoiding Herat, and having had one of his generals captured by the Ameer's troops, Ayoub entered the country between the Heri Rud and the Murghab rivers, flowing to the north of Herat. It is added that troops from Maimeneh haveratna Hed been despatched to capture him.

An Indian "Cause Célèbre."—What has sometimes been called the "Ahmedabad Tichborne Case" has come to an end. The Hindoo claimant was even bolder and for a time more successful than "the unhappy nobleman." Nothing so closely resembling the cause célèbre of Martin Guerre, who was personated by Arnaud du Tilh, has come to light for many years. A wealthy Hindoo named Hiralal Chotamlal lived at Ahmedabad, and in 1876 set out upon a pilgrimage to Benares, accompanied by his wife Nahni, his stepmother Ladkor, and a suite of followers. At Mathura he went out with the avowed intention of bathing, and never returned. It was said that he had been drowned in the river, but a prolonged search did not result in the recovery of his body. Nahni assumed the position which Hindoo custom assigns to a widow. When she had lamented the death of her lord for a year and a half the news began to circulate that Hiralal was again at Ahmedabad in the costume of a sadhu, or "holy man." The relatives inquired into the pretensions of the new comer, and an examination by the Caste of which Hiralal had been a member was adverse to the claims of the pretender. So decisive was the action of this social tribunal that it was resolved to "outcast" any person who recognised the claimant as the missing Hiralal. But a criminal prosecution against him for personation failed. The pretender was next acknowledged by Nahni and Ladkor, the wife and stepmother of the man asserted to be dead. Then Marilal, the brother-in-law of Mahni, brought an action to recover the property of Hiralal. He was successful. The "claimant" was not only ousted, but prosecuted on a charge of perjury. A conviction was obtained, and the impostor was sentenced to five years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of 200 rupees, with the alternative in default of payment of still another year's imprisonment. From this sentence the man apppealed, but it has been confirmed.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

NEW INDIA.

(Statesman.)

The great need of "New India" at the present moment is a deepening and enrichment of the spiritual foundations of life. The greatness of a people must in the last analysis depend upon the degree and direction of its mental activities. These constitute the motive power, without which no machinery, however perfect in construction, can be made to operate. And it is precisely in this essential point that the condition of Great Britain is in most striking contrast with that of India. There is, and naturally so, a certain irritation kindled in the minds of Natives when they are called upon to abandon some time-honoured custom of their own, in favour of a brand-new innovation imported from the West. From the tone, moreover, in which such demands are too often made, a wound is inflicted on their own self-respect, no less than on the memory of their ancestors, and as in the case of infant marriage, they are naturally impelled to retaliate in kind. The social and domestic relations of every people spring directly from their religious beliefs. They are moulded into shape by them. The social system in all countries is still so imperfect that it is impossible to make out a case either for adult marriage, or for any other existing arrangement, which does not leave an abundance of vulnerable points open to the attacks of an enemy. Infant marriage is in a no better plight, probably in a much worse. We might go through all the social relations, contrasting Western methods with those which prevail in the East, without silencing an opponent upon either side. In one respect, however, namely, that of activity and vigour of thought, Eastern nations are far behind the Western ones. Whatever the European or American finds to do—he does it with all his might. His mind is ever on the stretch for the discovering of improved methods. He is never content with what he has achieved. The "increasing purpose" running through the ages is not a speculative belief with him, but a practical rule of conduct to be exemplified in his daily life. To obtain an adequate apprehension of this unceasing activity of thought and action, nothing more is needed than to go into some large manufactory and trace the successive steps by which the machinery we find there has been brought to its existing state of perfection. There is nothing on which human nature can exercise itself where there is not present the same insatiable spirit of research—the same indomitable determination to get at the bottom of things—to understand a matter in its very essence. Moreover, it must not be forgotten that the men who devote themselves to these fundamental researches are rarely those who reap the pecuniary profits of their discoveries. It is a disinterested love of knowledge which causes them to watch and take no rest, but to eat the bread of carefulness. The research itself and the discovery are their own exceeding great reward. And so life is never permitted to stagnate. There is no finality in anything that is done under the sun, but endless toil and endeavour after greater and greater excellence.

Now what we want in "New India" is this earnestness and concentration of mind. They do not, in thorough, hearty fashion put their shoulders to the wheel, to force the national waggon from the deep ruts in which it is imbedded. They have still to get the fuel by which the machinery shall be worked—those powerful inward convictions which make a man's life all one colour, and which concentrate all his energies on a single object. New India takes the world too easily for men with so overwhelming a task set them to do. Centuries have passed since India has contributed aught of value to the intellectual treasury of humanity. Life both inwardly and outwardly would have remained stagnant in India had there been no foreign element to stir its waters and reveal their healing powers. Now that India is aroused to demand political recognition, its sons will have to face the fact that an inequality which was not occasioned by law cannot be removed by it. The tools are to him who can use them; and so long as this inequality exists the West will ever bear rule over the East. It is of no avail to fight against the laws of nature. There is not a Native gentleman who drives in an English-built carriage in preference to a Native ekka, but does not make practical confession of Western superiority. Let it be remembered that there was a time when the balance of advantage weighed altogether the other way. The spiritual foundation on which rests the great superstructure of Western thought and civilisation came to Europe from the East. We are but returning, in a new form, the gift which Europe originally received from Asia. How is it then, that it should be found so hard again to root it in its native soil? The answer, we believe, is not so difficult as many think. The Hindoo and Mahomedan religions alike were constructed, at the outset, in forgetfulness of that great law of change which is the saving principle of all human existence. The real question which New India has to ask himself, is not whether his social arrangements are better or worse than those of the Western world, but whether the religious beliefs which find expression in them are tenable in the light of the new knowledge, which by reason of his connection with Europe, is pouring in upon him? Does he believe that the austerities and the sufferings of the Hindoo widow can be justified either by a law or a divine revelation? Does he believe in the Hindoo Pantheon, as a correct account of the inhabitants of the invisible world? If he does not, and yet, from motives of convenience, thinks it advisable to act as if he did, then so far as in him lies he is helping to prolong the spiritual paralysis which has wrought such injury to his country.

We say this in no Pharisaical spirit, or as meaning that it is a light and easy thing for a man to sever himself from old association and beliefs; but the profession of a creed which we do not really believe leads to a drying-up of the springs of thought. We may be mistaken, but our strong conviction is that precisely this is the mental condition of most of the men who may be classed as "New India." Representative institutions, reform of the early marriage law, re-marriage of Hindoo widows—these are all excellent in their way, and we wish earnestly every success to those who are striving for them. But there is a profounder matter than all this. Everyone who knows the people of India knows that they are acute, intelligent, facile in speech, quick to learn, and apt to teach; and yet they count for nothing in the great kingdom of Modern Thought. It can hardly be that the British rule is responsible for this intellectual dearth. It must be due to some cause more subtle, intimate and persistent. What that cause is should command the inquiry of all thoughtful and patriotic men. How is it that the 250 millions of India have produced no great painter, sculptor, poet, scientist, philosopher, or statesman for centuries past? Of course, one great cause has been the dependency of the country upon foreign rule. Another, that the literature of the East for long centuries has been but a pale and barren reflection of its ancient lore, while distance has debarred its access to the literature of the West. But there are deeper causes than these, and "New India" must set himself to their discovery. The late Keshub Chunder Sen, and, before him, the great Rammohun Roy, were the pioneers of the new movement, and "New India" has an overwhelming task before it.

THE MARRIAGE QUESTION.

(Indian Churchman.)

We cannot imagine anything more unreasonable, or less likely either to advance the cause of Christianity or benefit Hindoo society, than for a body like the Missionary Conference to come forward and declare that there is no such thing as marriage among Hindoos, and that what they are pleased to call marriage is nothing more than a state of concubinage sanctioned by custom.

We view with profound alarm the gradual disintegration of the Hindoo family system. It contains much that is very noble and beautiful, and when sanctioned and purified by the influence of Christianity is capable of becoming the foundation of a social life that the Western nations may one day gaze at with envy. . . .

These certainly are the impressions which have been left upon our own mind by the controversy. We believe the time for it was ripe, and we share the belief of the Churchman that the Hindoo family system contains much that is very noble and beautiful, and that is capable of becoming the foundation of a social life that other nations might envy. Our contemporary is not insensible to the evils that attend the present system, but deprecates, as strongly as ourselves, governmental interference therewith.

We are fully alive to the grave evils, moral and physical, attendant on the present system of marriage among the Hindus; we heartily sympathise with those who advocate reform; but we are most strongly of opinion that the reform ought to be left to the gradual growth of a healthier pul lic opinion, and not enforced by legislation. The action of the Missionary Conference has only defeated its own end. Opinion is undoubtedly changing on the subject among educated Hindus. But this unwise attempt to force on the reform by the authority of Government has only succeeded in producing a strong reaction, and doing a great injury to the very cause the missionaries wish to promote. . . .

In order to understand the real point at issue, we must first get rid of the confusion that has been introduced into the subject by mixing up the questions of infant marriage and early marriage. The two do not by any means stand or fall together. Infant marriage of course involves early marriage. But early marriage does not by any means involves infant marriage, so that it is extremely illogical to bring forward all the physical and moral evils attendant upon early marriage as a reason for legislating against infant marriage; since even if infant marriage were made illegal, the system of early marriage would be in no wise affected, and all the evils that result from it would be precisely the same as before. And we do not suppose that any one would seriously advocate the Government enforcing late marriage by legislation. The attempt would be as futile as it would be disastrous. On what grounds is it maintained that the intelligent consent of the parties themselves is absolutely necessary for the validity of marriage? It is no doubt necessary for the highest form of marriage as a spiritual union; but so, too, is mutual affection. Yet no Christian would argue that the absence of mutual affection invalidates marriages, though there are some few unbelievers who would go even so far as this.

The truer view seems to be that what constitutes marriage is the customary ceremony of the country. If the law and custom of the country make the intelligent consent of the parties a necessary part of the ceremony, then the intelligent consent is necessary. If they do not, then it is not necessary. So it is necessary in England, and not necesary in India. There is nothing contrary either to Scripture or reason in the idea of a person having his wife chosen for him by his parents, and being bound by their choice as much as he would be by his own.

An undue importance has been given to the Ru khmabai case out of which the controversy arose, and we think Mr. Shome did a public service in protesting against the direction which was given to that controversy. In justice to Mr. Shome, it should be, remembered that he did not willingly thrust himself into the discussion. It was at the express desire of the Missionary Conference and at that only, that he wrote the essay which has elicited so important and exhaustive a discussion. What we want in India is—light. All our mistakes in the country have arisen from the hasty assumption that we have nothing to learn from the study of institutions foreign to our own, and so we have disintegrated and destroyed much that we should have preserved with the greatest care, had we but better understood its real nature and value.

THE BURMA POLICE AS A CAREER.

(Times of India.)

There may be some "parents and guardians" in India who are thinking of putting sons or relatives in the Burma Police, and who would be glad to know something about the conditions of service in the force. It cannot be denied that the beginnings are humble enough, as the youthful aspirant has to commence as an inspector on Rs. 140 per mensem. This does not sound brilliant, but most of these inspectorships are filled by young Englishmen of good birth and education, who have been unable to get employment elsewhere, or have failed for the army, and other professions barred by competitive examinations. This fact shows more clearly than a volume of demonstration how difficult it is for paterfamilias in the present day to get his boys off his hands in a satisfactory manner. But suppose our young gentleman started as an inspector on Rs. 140 a month, his next step is to become an inspector, 1st grade, on Rs. 175 a month, and of course, in both cases, travelling allowance. The next step is assistant superintendent, 2nd grade, on Rs. 250, followed by the 1st grade at Rs. 400, and so on to the various grades of superintendent, varying from the lowest at Rs. 500 per mensem to the highest at Rs. 800. This is practically the highest police pay obtainable in Burma, for, though there is an Inspector-General in Upper Burma, and one in Lower Burma, on Rs. 1,800 a month, respectively, these two appointments can hardly come within the reckoning of the majority of young inspectors of police as they gallantly begin the struggle on their Rs. 140 per mensem.

As regards the work, there is this much to be said. It is very hard and very continuous. One never meets a superintendent or assistant superintendent of police, or an inspector, but he is just off in hot haste to the jungles to surround a village, or to surprise a gang of dacoits, or to arrest some noted leader who has been tracked to a certain locality. The last time I met our assistant superintendent, which was a short time ago, he was just off to a village some thirty miles distant, concerning which he had received good information that a gang of dacoits was in it. He would have to ride all through the night with a few mounted policemen, so as to arrive at the village at daybreak and surround it before the birds had flown. Let us hope he has been successful this time. A short time before, he had just come back from capturing a notorious dacoit, who had long been wanted. He had received information that the man in question was in a certain village, to which he proceeded at night with two or three men, entering it just as dawn was breaking. The informer who accompanied him pointed out the house where the dacoit was to be found, and the Englishman sprang up the steps and into the house just as the outlaw, waking up, sprang to his feet to reach the loaded gun which lay within reach. But it was too late. Our friend is an exceptionally powerful man, and he at once seized the dacoit, who had not a chance with him. So it will be seen that anyone who wishes to enter the Burma police should be fairly tough, and not mind rough jungle work. The life has its bright side. It is wild and adventurous, and a man of courage and energy will not lack opportunities to distinguish himself. Young life in the rains is trying anywhere, and particularly so in Burma, the land without roads, and where the mud must be seen to be believed. But in the cold weather nothing can be more delightful; and, in fact, a young fellow with no prospects and a good constitution might do worse than try his luck in the Burma police.

ASSAM TEA.

(Pioneer.)

The London merchants whose windows for the last six months have exhibited black pyramidal piles bisected by gigantic placards bearing the inscription "Jubilee Tea" have for once in a way committed themselves to an advertisement which is no more than the literal truth so far at least as a large portion of their stock is concerned. Though no one seems to have noticed the fact, Assam tea is one among the many more or less notable persons and things entitled to hold Jubilee synchronously with Her Gracious Majesty. The first experimental plantation was made in Assam towards the latter end of 1835; but it was not till 1837 that the attempt met with any success, and it was then that the first sample reached Mincing-lane. In that year 488lbs. of Assam tea were sold in London by public auction, the average price realised for it being 19s. per lb. These sales marked the commencement of that struggle with the product of the further East which, if we judge from the experience of the last few years, is destined to end in its complete subjection. It was not, however, without a fierce and sustained fight that the leaf from the Assam Valley gained a footing in the market. The Assam Company, to which Government made over the plantations after the annexation of the Province in 1839, and which held the virtual monopoly for more than a decade, was rich enough, but its agents were utterly ignorant of the proper methods of cultivation. Blundering and waste were the result, and in a few years £200,000 of capital had been dissipated. The deepest darkness, however, was nearest the dawn; and even while the Company was on the verge of bankruptcy, profits began to flow in, and in 1852 the first genuine dividend was paid. From that date the success of the Assam Tea Industry was assured, and the pioneer Company, which forty years ago was practically insolvent, is at this day, after having divided among its shareholders over a million sterling, worth nearly half-a-million. In a sense, no doubt, the course of the industry has not been altogether untroubled. There was a time, in 1862-63-64, when the tea fever burnt almost as fiercely in India as did the gold fever some years earlier in Australia: when many a man rashly threw up settled occupation in the Peninsula in the hope of shaking from the bushy green shrubs rapidly covering the valleys and hillsides of Assam the riches which the pagoda tree no longer yielded; and when, as a natural consequence, disaster followed, and scores of card-built Companies fell to pieces; but excepting this instance of the commercial mania which comes as certainly to all undertakings with a future before them as the measles do to children, the record is one of steady progress. Unlike the wheat and seed trades the tea trade has not advanced by leaps and bounds; but neither has it like them been subject to backward lapses. Though the development has been slow, its almost unbroken continuity within the last twenty years is one of the best signs of the sureness of the foundation on which it rests.

The tremendous expansion which has taken place in the trade since the first tea seed was dibbled into the ground fifty years ago may best be seen by reference to a statement just submitted by the Assam Secretariat to the Provincial Government. There we find that at the close of 1886 there were in the Brahmaputra and Surma Valleys 883 tea-gardens. These gardens comprise over 934,000 acres, but of this, the total tea grant held by planters, only 204,000 acres are under actual cultivation. The rapid extension of recent years is evidenced by the fact that nearly one-sixth of the area under cultivation must have been added within the last four years, since we find 33,000 acres put down as under immature plants, which, with the Assam planters means plants not four years old. Last year the total yield of tea from the gardens reached the large figure of 61 million pounds, 57 million pounds coming from the Brahmaputra Valley and 24 millions from the Surma. As to the yield per acre the returns available appear to be only approximately correct. Official statistics for 1886 put the yield in the Brahmaputra Valley at 385 lbs. and in the Surma Valley 333lbs., or an average for the whole of Assam 363lbs.; but the Indian Tea Association gives the average outturn 14lbs. an acre less, and this is probably nearer the truth. Cachar, Nowgong, and Darrang are below the average for the whole Province, while Sibsagar, Sylhet, Goalpara and Lakhimpur are above. The case of the gardens in Kamrup and on the Khasi and Jaintia Hills is exceptional, for there the yield has been decreasing, and was so low last year that it is very doubtful whether some of the gardens will be able to go on. The area under tea in these districts, however, is but a very small fraction of the whole, and their influence is hardly felt in the total production of the Province. The highest yield is found in Lakhimpur, where the average last year was 508lbs. per acre. Turning to the cost of production we have no certain information for all the gardens; but the average cost per lb., including sale charges, for 18 gardens in the Assam Valley and 23 gardens in the Surma Valley for the past two years was about 8 annas for the former and about 7 annas for the latter. Addressing the Society of Arts recently Mr. J. Berry White said he confidently anticipated that the crop of Indian tea in 1890 would be placed on the London market for a fraction under 6d. a lb.; but even if we allow a reduction of a penny a lb. in the cost of production for the next three years, it is difficult to reconcile the statement with the above figures. Nevertheless the reduction in the cost of production is one of the most remarkable of the many changes which the fifty years have wrought. Labour is cheaper, the methods of cultivation and picking have improved, and the whole process of manufacture has been transformed by the introduction of machinery. All the most important parts of the manufacture, rolling, drying, sifting, are done by machinery, mostly steam-drivers.

It is curious to note from the Report above referred to that "all the Deputy Commissioners and those Managers who have expressed any opinion on the subject are unanimous in attributing the bad prices of last year to the supply being in excess of the demand." This theory of over-supply has been the companion of many an afflicted economist besides the tea-planter; but there was never an instance, perhaps, when there was less evidence in its support. The United Kingdom is almost the sole market for tea; but if we take the deliverers of tea there for the ten years between 1876 and 1885, we find they have increased by something less than one per cent. annually, which is just about equal to the increase in population, and we find also that the increase in re-exports has been three times as large as the increase in imports. These figures show with sufficient clearness that to whatever the fall in prices is due the explanation does not lie in overproduction. The fact is, so far as the fall in Calcutta prices is concerned, the decrease must have taken place altogether irrespective of competition in China and Ceylon in obedience to the reduction in the cost of production. There is nothing more common than to hear planters express the fear that the same fate may overtake them as has overtaken the English wheat-growers. As Indian wheat has reduced prices below the cost of production in England, so it is thought the competition of China tea may reduce the price below the cost of production in India. The cases are, however, in no wise parallel. The India wheat-exporter has not felt the reduction in the gold price of wheat, because it has in a great measure been counterbalanced by the fall in exchange; but every fall in the price of tea is felt equally by China and India. The conflict is thus reduced to a mere question of cost of production, and in this India must in the long run conquer. The enormous fall in the exports from China during the present year indicates that China growers have already been growing at a loss. All that Chinese competition has done or is likely to do is to prevent diminution in the cost of production being added to the planter's profits.

BENGAL.

WE (Indian Daily News) often hear a great deal about the influence exercised by the costly exhibitions which have been so numerous of late in encouraging and stimulating trade. The instance of the Calcutta Exhibition of 1883-4 may possibly be exceptional; but it is curious to note, after all we heard at the time of what that Exhibition was to do in the way of developing trade between India and Australia, that as a matter of fact the trade between Calcutta and Australia has been steadily declining. Last year the total of imports and exports was only 80 lakhs, as compared to a total of 160 lakhs for 1882-83. Indian tea, which is rapidly making its way in public favour in England, does not seem to gain popularity in Australia as it might be expected to do. Last year's returns show a falling-off in the shipments which, though slight, is significant as showing that for some reason the Indian article is not being so warmly welcomed by the colonists as it deserves to be. Possibly the trade may be suffering from a similar cause to that which has greatly interfered with the acceptance of Indian tea by the people in England—namely, injudicious mixing of the Indian with inferior China teas.

THE Bengal Government has at last been able to form and express an opinion upon the decisions of the Educational conference held in Calcutta some months since. The conference closed before the end of April—the Government resolution is dated Sept. 13th. The Government approves and accepts the recommendations of the conference, except on one or two items. Objection is taken to the suggestion that the rule providing for reduction of grants in aid on renewal should be supplanted by a new rule to the effect that reduction shall only be enforced "if this can be done without loss of efficiency." The Lieutenant-Governor sees in the proviso here stated a danger that grants made for a term would be treated in fact as perpetual, thus abolishing an important principle of the grant-in-aid system—the gradual transfer of Government aid from established to new and struggling institutions. But his Honour is disposed to accept an amendment of the proposed new rule, suggested by Sir Alfred Croft, by which the grants will ordinarily be reduced on renewal when a serious loss of efficiency is not apprehended. The only other point on which the Government does not see its way to endorsing the proposals of the Conference is the suggested appointment of an additional Inspectress of Schools and the creation of girls' scholarships. The Lieutenant-Governor does not say that these measures would not be desirable in the interests of female education; but he declares that, "in view of the present urgent necessity for keeping down all expenditure which is not necessary, the proposal to provide an additional Inspectress of Schools, and to create special scholarships for girls, cannot be sanctioned."

THE visit of M. Pasteur's associates to India during the ensuing cold weather should give a stimulus to veterinary research all over the country, says the Allahabad paper. There has, so far, been no real effort made to cope with the diseases which cause annually so serious a depletion of agricultural stock and ruin the cultivator. The remedies which have been from time to time suggested have been merely empirical ones—the slaughter of infected cattle has been the only seemingly practical measure to check epidemics. But the investigations of M. Pasteur have revolutionised the old ideas about disease in animals; the suc cess which he has achieved, in the face of opposition and even ridicule, is now very generally acknowledged, and there is no reason why India should not benefit by his discoveries. There is a wide area over which experiments can be made to extend, and the results cannot fail to be of the deepest interest. Koch, during his visit to India, may have failed to discover the true cholera germ or to propound an antidote to that dreaded disease, but M. Pasteur's associates will work in very different lines from those of the German doctor. They have had experience in carrying out the process of innoculation in analogous cases, and with this to guide them they will not be groping in the dark. The most serious obstacles in their way will probably be caste prejudices, but even these are not insurmountable, and it is possible that great practical good will result to the poor cultivator, who so often sees his bullocks swept away by a murrain. Veterinary science, in any case, cannot fail to benefit by the experiment, and that at least will be something gained.

MADRAS.

THE Government of Madras are sending 50,000 cigars to the Glasgow Exhibition. The collection of exhibits in India for this exhibition is proceeding satisfactorily, and some shipments have already been made by the agents of the exhibition in this country, Messrs. Finlay, Muir and Co. Mr. T. N. Mukharji, Assistant Curator of the Economic Museum at Calcutta, who went home for the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, and whose services have been similarly lent for the Glasgow Exhibition, returns to India in November next.

THE port of Madras is at present without a pilot, both the chief pilot, Captain Horne, and the assistant pilot, Mr. Corfield, having reported sick. This causes considerable inconvenience to steamers arriving in the roads, for they are not allowed to enter the harbour without a pilot being on board, though steamers already in harbour may leave the harbour without the assistance of a pilot. The P. and O. steamer Bengal, and a French steamer Tanais, and the B.I. steamer Simla, had to remain anchored out in the roadstead, as there was no pilot available to bring them into harbour.

THE lighting on the Madras Railway, both in trains and stations, which now forms no small item of expenditure, is at present engaging attention; and economy and improvement have already been introduced. The consumption of oil at each station and by each train has been overhauled, with the result that a saving of from four to five thousand pounds per annum has been effected. The costly repairing of lamps has attracted attention, and a committee is to investigate the matter, in view to the work being carried out, if possible, departmentally and at a smaller figure, instead of, as at present, under an expensive contract system. The lighting of the Central Station, which, it is reported, now costs Rs. 600, is to be carried out experimentally by the company itself, it having been alleged that the same could be done at the almost incredible cost of Rs. 50 per mensem. Apart from these economical measures improvements have also been introduced. The signal lamps, slides, &c., have been improved upon, and an improved sample signal lamp sent to England as a guide in the manufacture of all future supplies. And last, but not least, the fittings of the roof lamps—now all soldered and thus necessitating heavy expenditure in fitting new globes when a breakage occurs—are to be done away with, and the soldering substituted by strong springs, which will enable refitting of a fresh globe quite easy.

BOMBAY.

THE Indian Marine steamer Lawrence, Captain Paget Jones, arrived in Bombay and landed six liberated slaves, handed over to them by the British Consul at Muscat. The Lawrence is to be supplied with nine inch guns that she may more adequately cope with the slave trade in the Persian Gulf.

THE superintendent of the Bombay Veterinary College has addressed the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons in London with a view to getting the diploma of the college recognised as a "Colonial" one, exempting its holders from two years of professional study in Great Britain for the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons' diploma.

THE Goa Government exposes itself to the ridicule of the public by adopting quixotic measures to prevent the introduction and spread of cholera in Goa. A case of cholera lately occurred at Chinchinim, and immediately a sanitary cordon was established forbidding communication with the infected village. The people of course passed in and out through fields and hills, and laughed heartily at the simplicity of the Government who could believe that two or three policemen can keep a strict watch over a village several miles in circumference.

BURMA.

OWING to the scarcity of sheep at Mandalay, the Commissary-General, Madras, was wired to, to make arrangements for the supply of sheep from India. The Collector of Vizagapatam has, accordingly, been requested by wire to have 500 sheep in readiness to be shipped in two lots of 250 each on the Scindia and Simla, which will call at Vizagapatam on the 2nd and 5th October respectively, on their way to Burma. Forage for the sheep, and an agent to take charge of them, go from Madras.

THE Inspector of Police and thirty constables sent from Rangoon to the assistance of the Pegu police, to aid in apprehending the runaways from the Kyouktan lock-up have returned to Rangoon, the Superintendent of Police, Pegu, thinking it unnecessary to detain them further. Reports from Kyouktan say that in the affair which led to the reinforcement of the police there one Punjabi constable was killed and five were wounded; two prisoners were killed and a few others wounded. Those prisoners who escaped carried off five snider, some muzzle-loaders and about 200 rounds of ammunition. The country surrounding Kyouktan is being scoured in search of the runaways.

THE latest official summary from Upper Burma reports in Mandalay town a dacoit gathering which was discovered in time and attacked by the police. The leader was shot, two wounded and two captured. The northern part of the Mandalay district is still disturbed. Three dacoities, one with murder, have occurred. There have been several dacoities in Shwebo. Myadoung is fairly quiet. Dacoity is still going on in Sagaing, but three leaders have been captured. In Ava there have been four dacoities, in one of which the villagers, though apparently able to defend themselves, offered no resistance. Yeu is quieting down, and several important captures and surrenders of dacoits have been made. Chindwin is fairly quiet. The Kota Prince is still at large. A body of 300 rebels were attacked by troops north of Kante, and severe loss inflicted on them.

AFTER examination of the records of district courts for a period of seven years, the Judicial Commissioner of Lower Burma expresses the opinion that the Burmese are not a litigious people. He thinks they will learn the troubles of litigation from the Madrassee and Chinese money-lenders who settle among them and teach them to meet temporary financial pressure by the illusive expedient of borrowing. His picture of Burmese happiness is as graphic as it is simple. He says:—"I know no country in which the national wealth is more evenly divided than in Burma. Nowhere is the peasantry more prosperous than here. In my tours during the past two years I have everywhere seen substantial houses, well fed, well dressed, healthy people, and other unmistakable signs of prosperity. The cultivation of the rice crop hardly occupies the people for more than five months in the year, and much of that labour is done by coolies from Madras. Outside the coast towns professional beggars are hardly to be seen. The milt of the Swiss cantons and the savoury messes of Western cuisine are largely imported for the use of Burmese agricultural labourers."

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

THE Report of the Punjab Registration Department shows that the people are slow to realise the importance of registering documents which may be disputed in courts of law. Registration of most documents relating to immovable property is compulsory, but in cases where it is optional last year's returns show a decrease in the number of documents registered. The annual number of wills registered has increased in the last eleven years from 100 to 427, but even 427 is a very small number.

THE railway-borne trade of the North-West Provinces and Oudh for the second quarter of the current financial year amounted to only 101 lakhs of maunds, against 189 lakhs of maunds in the corresponding quarter of 1886. The decrease was general in both imports and exports. In exports, specially in wheat, and other grains and oil seeds; and in imports in gram, tobacco, salt, cotton goods, and coal. The decrease in the export of wheat was entirely confined to that with Calcutta, which fell from 2,360,164 maunds to 1,810,111 maunds, whilst that to Bombay increased from 228,218 maunds to 567,509 maunds.

THE land revenue of the North-West Provinces and Oudh for last year amounted to Rs. 4,28,14,870, of which 99·3 per cent. were collected. As a rule, the demands for rent were met satisfactorily in the majority of the districts, and in those where any difficulty was experienced it was more from pure stress of circumstances than any objection on the part of the landholders. Still, over eighteen hundred persons were arrested for the recovery of rents due, aggregating about eight lakhs of rupees, as compared with 1,338 persons arrested for Rs. 3,417,000 in the previous year. The fact of arrest seems generally to cause the debtors to pay up, as in only a few instances was there any detention for a lengthened period. Besides the collections of current revenue, those also of arrears from previous years were satisfactory.

IT is stated that Mr. Ross, the defendant in the case of Morgan v. Ross, who has been committed to the High Court for trial on a charge of adultery, and who at present holds the appointment of Legal Remembrancer in the High Court, will be suspended from office until the result of the trial is known.

NATIVE PRESS.

BRITISH RULE IN INDIA.—English administration is good, but costs a great deal of money. In it the money is everything. No care is taken of money when it concerns others. By imposing taxes upon the people the Government has increased the revenues in several ways, but the Government and the people are in the same position. The treasury of the Government is empty, and the purse of the people contains nothing. The Government can borrow crores of money if it chooses, but the people will never be relieved if they once incur debt. Many have been ruined, and are being ruined, by following the example of the Government. The Hindus, the Moghuls, and the Pathans have governed India. They also had luxuries, but their treasury was not empty like that of our present rulers. The people were then solvent. They passed their time quietly by paying tde Government revenue, but now both the Government and the people are in difficulties. The English have sufficient wealth in their own country, where the Government can spend any amount at its discretion. They want to adopt a similar course in this country, but it cannot be done. In India the ruler must act according to the habits of the Natives of India. Brother Natives of India! be careful from this time, otherwise your difficulties will not be removed. You will be ruined if you imitate the rich Englishmen.—The Burdwan Sanjibani.

THE CHRISTIANS, THE HINDUS, AND THE MOHAMEDANS.—The Christians take a great pride in their religion. Its ultimate aim is peace. Philanthropy is its great virtue. Envy and malice have no concern with it. War and bloodshed are looked upon by Christians as sinful acts. According to the Hindus, if any one sacrifices his life in a just war he will be entitled to a seat in heaven. In the Mohamedan shastras, it is stated that those who die in war will go to heaven. The precepts of the Christian religion are full of peace and asceticism, but practically no other race loves war so much as the Christians do. The Hindus never had any strong desire for war. With respect to courage and heroism no other race of this world could rival the Hindus, but they never want to annex another's territory, nor to trample upon a weak enemy. The Mohamedans were bloodthirsty, but have now become pacified, as they have no means to satisfy those desires. The fire of unrest is now burning in Christian hearts. By Christians the earth is being flooded with blood. By Christians peace has been disturbed in Europe. Christ sacrificed his life for others, but the Christians live by taking the lives of others. The Christian religion is heavenly, but in practice it is otherwise.—The Bangabasi.

ENGLAND, RUSSIA, AND PERSIA.—The English fear the subjection of Persia by the Russians, and want to maintain its independence by fighting. Persia does not want such independence from the English. She is desirous of maintaining friendship with Russia. The English fear that, by establishing her influence in Persia, Russia will advance towards India, in the direction of Herat on land, and through the Persian Gulf on water. It is easy to fight the Russians, in words, but practically not so easy. Is it reasonable to suppose that those who have established supremacy over Central Asia will be defeated by England at one stroke? The English have all along shown hostility towards Persia, but the Russians have been friendly to her. The English were all along hostile to the Afghans, and the Russians friendly to them. The foreign policy of the Russians is different from that of the English. The English only exercise their authority over the weak. Who can say that the Persians will not assist the Russians in case a war breaks out? The English believe that the Afghans will assist them. This is hoping against hope.—The Sahachar.

INDIAN PRINCES IN ENGLAND.—On the occasion of the Jubilee celebration some Native princes went to England with a view to display their loyalty, but were frustrated in their hopes. In England they have not been treated with dignity due to their rank. They did not get more honours than ordinary people, so they have returned home with broken hearts. They were lowered in their dignity. The Indian officials are mostly proud. They do not care for any one. These officials do not treat the Native princes properly. The regard of the Native princes for the English would have been enhanced had they received better treatment, but the arrogant Englishmen have not understood this. They never believed that they would be insulted in England, but even there they have been insulted. Of course the officials of England are not to blame for it, but the fault of the Anglo-Indian officials has caused this occurrence. This was the first time the Native princes have gone to England on the occasion of a festival, and they have suffered insults. In future no one will care much to visit England. The English did not consider this, for if they did, they would not have treated these princes in this manner.—The Nababibhaker and Sadharani.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.—The Russians are not, in point of fact, so bad as the English would fain make them out to be. In the settlement of the Afghan Boundary Russia has manifested great self-sacrifice and largeness of heart. Russia has indeed taken somewhat more of land, but in it there is neither men nor cover, and there is only a single well—a single solitary well—within an area of 800 miles. Could any human being live there? The territory acquired by the Russians does not contain a single individual soul, and does not yield a single pice in the shape of revenue. The territory which the Russians have, at the intercession of the English, relinquished in favour of the Afghans is rather more than 700 miles in extent, so that the area of the tract of land acquired by the Russians is more than that of the land acquired by the Afghans by 100 miles on the outside. But, on the other hand, the territory which the Russians have relinquished in favour of the Afghans is filled with grain, and there are nineteen wells in it, and it has a population of 13,000 souls, and yields a revenue of 14,000 rupees. Russia has got a waste dessert in exchange for a garden, still she has expressed no discontent, but England has been grumbling many days, although she has obtained from Russia a tract of fertile land which yields such good crops of grain. Say now which of the two is more large-hearted and self-sacrificing, England or Russia? England has caused Afghanistan to acquire the tract of land on the north, near the river Oxus; Russia has got instead, on the eastern part, some waste land in Khusk Murgha. But the English are afraid lest the Russians should have a convenient opportunity of coming towards India, therefore they are incessantly saying, "By reason of their possession of the land lying within the territory of Khusk in Murgha, the Russians have come nearer to Herat by twelve miles, they have thus paved the way for the fulfilment of their desire." The English have lost their senses in consequence of their fear of losing India. Nevertheless all Englishmen are not desirous of adopting such measures as will ensure their retaining possession of India for ever in uninterrupted stability and calm. This is strange indeed. But that as it may, every one, with the exception of the English, understands that the English will never lose India on account of the Russians. The Russians are only laughing on seeing the apprehensions of the English. One who is the clandestine possessor of another's jewel starts and shrinks at his own shadow, thinking it to be a robber. If Russia were to come to Herat itself, India will be in no danger whatever; then why should we set up a warning simply because Russia has advanced some 10 or 12 miles? We fail to understand why the English are thus making a laughing-stock of themselves.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE SARACENS.*

Of all the marvellous events in a marvellous world it may be questioned whether the pages of history contain a more stupendous wonder than the rise of Islam. Twelve hundred years ago a hapless babe was born on the plains of Arabia, poor, humble, lowly, without an heritage beyond a handful of dates and a cup of milk. Now, in this eighteenth century of grace, upwards of 180,000,000 of souls bow the knee in adoration to the Prophet of Arabia, whe name is venerated as a God, and whose being is adorned with little less fervour than is extended to the Lord of Heaven and earth. Nor is this all. Wonderful as is the spirited history of the Muhammadan world, the worldly conquests of the Saracens is even, perhaps, more astounding. Beginning with a handful of converts, unaccustomed to the use of arms and unacquainted with the rules of warfare, this tiny band by degrees increased in numbers till, with a lordly host, they attacked city after city in Arabia; and as each and every town fell before this irresistible company of martial devotees, ambition raised its head, and the ust of conquest filled the hearts of these Puritans of the East Then followed a train of well-nigh inconceivable successes, till as length Imperial Rome tottered to its base as the great masts of Syria hoisted the standard of the Crescent. Conquests, too, were achieved in Spain, conquests in Africa, conquests in Central Asia, and it needed but little that the Saracenic kingdom extended over the whole civilised world.

Look, too, at the splendour of the capitals. Imagination cannot depict more sumptuous luxury, more extravagant splendour, more superb glory than rises to the mind at the mere mention of the Khalif of Baghdad. The mind is lost in bewilderment, a feeling of confusion creeps over the senses as tale after tale is poured forth of Oriental grandeur, of barbaric richness, and of sovereign power. The glory and might, the riches of Solomon, pale and grown wan before the dazzling splendour of a Khalif, as, sitting on the throne of majesty, he laid empires in the dust, and put the yoke of bondage upon the necks of mighty kings.

Such is the tale which Mr. Gilman tells us—not that his narrative has any pretence to novelty. The story has been told again and again—to our mind never with more graphic diction, more stirring language, more literary vigour than in Wollaston's "Half Hours with Muhammad," one of the most charming and brilliant epitomes of a brilliant epoch which it has ever been our lot to peruse. In the face of so many and so talented rivals Mr. Gilman had but little hope for triumph. All he could hope to achieve was to give to the world a concise and accurate summary of the Saracenic story, and in this respect he has fulfilled his task in a most complete and thoroughly satisfactory manner. Not a single error have we been able to detect, and his work may with confidence be placed in the hands of the many who wish to learn, and the few who desire to study afresh the "old, old tale."

ALLEGRA.†

There is something attractive in the title of "Allegra," chosen by Miss West. It gives rise to airy visions of fancy, and inspires imagination with vivid pictures of sunny Italian life. Nor will the reader be disappointed. Seldom does it fall to the lot of a reviewer to criticise a novel so rich in promise of future greatness. To assert that the fair writer has somewhat to learn is only another way of stating that this is a first attempt; but there is a sound basis whereon to build the edifice of success. In the first place Miss West does not indulge in the common fault of depicting persons at the beginning of the tale as they develop towards the close; her characters grow. Take, for example, the instance of Signor Catarra. He appears first of all as a patriot, active and eager, more or less—perhaps the less predominates over the more—to take part in the revolution which was to free Italy from the grasp of Austria; but his thoughts, as it turns out in the end, were concentrated on himself rather than his country. A dandy, a self pleasing, selfish fop, the battlefield had no charms for such a son of Adam; so again, when he becomes engaged to the fair Allegra, it gradually dawns upon the reader—and ultimately upon the heroine herself—that his love is the love of possession, the love of vanity; his motives, though not base, were sordid; his aspirations soared no higher than to captivate a lovely being with a lovely voice, destined, as he hoped and thought, to take the world by storm and—enrich him as her husband.

This is sound, good literary acumen. At times there are touches of little less than genius. The character of the father—passionately attached to his children, yet more devoted to his violin—who allows his business to slip from his grasp, his family to be wrecked, his very means of existence imperilled while he is living in an atmosphere of pure, unalloyed bliss in the region of musical bliss, is worthy of Dickens. Is it not, too, a flash from the skies which prompts the happy conception that the soul of the dying parent should be wafted to heaven in strains of harmony?

Take, again, the heroine, the charming, captivating Allegra, depicted in a variety of circumstances. She is always high-minded, always simple, always unaffected, always noble, always lovable and loved. Sweetness exhausts itself in envying her, gentleness steps aside to allow such an exquisite daughter of Eve to monopolise all worship and praise; but even with all this her character is enhanced, admiration for her increased by the simple, yet patriotic circumstance that when her father died she treasured as the most valued possession on earth the violin which had for ten long years afforded the poor old man solace, and lent happiness to his declining years. Yet, withal, when for a second time Italy tried, and successfully, to be free, she sold the precious heritage, and why? Owing to poverty? No; but merely to enable her husband to take part in the national rising with dignity and position. Such conduct is surpassingly great and heroic.

It would be easy to multiply instances calculated to raise Miss West to a pinnacle of fame, despite her omission at times to rise to the greatness of her "situations," and her tendency to advance too rapidly—as, to quote an example, where she makes the heroine's sister—a most modest, sweet child—agree in a few short moments to elope with a man whom, albeit she loved, she should have despised.

Miss West has made a most promising début. It may be hoped she will, on the second occasion, fly higher towards the Elysium of success.

SONNETS AND QUATORZAINS.*

The book of "Sonnets and Quatorzains," by "Chrys," contains some pretty poetry. It does not, we presume, aim at high art, but there is a sweetness that should please; and the subject-matter of all the 145 stanzas is irreproachable. The author has a pleasant power of harmonious language, but he maintains a dead level of merit, and seldom if ever rises above himself. Perhaps the best verses in the book are headed "Regret," beginning

"Who would not wander back across the years
That link us to our childhood's happy days,
If 'twere but possible? The thorny ways
We've travelled since, bedewed with little tears;
How glad if we could wake and find them all
Mere nightmares of our brains—disordered dreams!"

This is not great, but it is pretty. It is a poetry of a nature to enjoy when sitting down by a village rill or contemplating the beauty of a pastoral scene, where nature is quiet, peaceful, and at rest. The keynote of the author's efforts cannot better be given than in his own words addressed to the reader:—

"Oh! make me Nature's lyre, that I may thrill
Responsive to her subtle melodies;
And may thine eyes sweet, gentle tears distil
For all that suffers pain lives and dies.
And all my years with purest passions fill
'Mid woods where lilies bloom 'neath vernal skies."

INEXPENSIVE AND GENUINE WINES.—Anglo-Indians will be glad to know that it is still possible to procure good champagne and claret at moderate prices. Messrs. John C. Hands and Co., of 99, Gresham-street, E.C., have for many years past contracted for the sole right to sell the entire produce of the Gevency District. This champagne has been analysed by Professor Wenkly, the well-known analytical chemist, who states, "The alcoholic strength is quite compatible with absolute freedom from brandy, and there is no sophistication." We have tasted the champagne, which we consider sound and wholesome, the flavour and bouquet far excelling many champagnes at double the price. The "Gevency" Champagne is sold for 30s. per dozen. The clarets are all excellent, and equally moderate in price. The enterprise of this firm in bringing good, sound, and cheap wines before the public is deserving of every patronage.

AN excellent opportunity will be forthcoming during the cold weather to survey the land communication between India and Burma. The main operations during the winter in Burma are to be undertaken in the Yaw country, a region which lies immediately to the east of Lushai and the Arracan hills. The troops working up from the Irrawaddy will, at the end of the operations at the foot of the hills, be in an admissible position to despatch a survey column across them. It is to be hoped this opportunity will not be lost. The establishment of land communication between India and Burma is of immense value both from an economic point of view and for the pacification of the border region.

THE NATIVE PRESS AGAIN.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs that the seditious tone of the Native Press is again troubling the minds of the loyal journalists in India. The Pioneer, which has the credit (or discredit, according to Native journalism) of representing official opinion, is calling attention to these seditious utterances, and demanding Government interference to put them down.

We think this to be a mistake. It may be open to question whether the Paramount Power in India should have granted to the vernacular Press the full liberty which it has done, but such liberty having been accorded any attempt to curtail it now, especially upon political grounds, will only be misinterpreted and misunderstood. The vernacular newspapers have not yet got to a circulation or a power amongst the masses from which an influence for good or evil could be traced. It is therefore better to leave them alone. We do not hold with the Pioneer that "the minds of the people are being poisoned against their rulers, and it is obvious to the most careless observer that the hostile attitude of the Native Press and its disgraceful license are every day rendering the administration more difficult." This is giving the Native Press too much credit for evil power. It has not, we are happy to believe, that power. The law, as it stands at present in India, ought to be sufficiently strong to curb what is amiss without the Government seeking for extraordinary powers to deal with seditious writing. The Pioneer, careful as it always has been of official reputations, says that "Native editors have come to see that no matter how they write they enjoy the most absolute impunity, and they have consequently become so emboldened that they now recklessly indulge in the most disgraceful vituperation." If this be so those who have the administration of the law in their hands are to blame. No Press gagging act is required, but simply the prosecution of the editor and proprietor of any Native newspaper indulging in libellous vituperation. The way to the heart of a Native journalist, be he proprietor or editor, is through his pocket. Let him be made to pay heavy damages for his false and impertinent criticisms on public men and measures, and it will soon come to pass that he will find loyalty to British rule the better paying game. At the same time Government, as we have said before, should take care that the honour of its servants is not wantonly attacked. If it be true that such attacks, especially on Native officials, have now reached an unheard-of pitch in Bengal, we quite agree with our Indian contemporary that some alteration should be made in the rule which at present forbids defamed officials to prosecute or institute civil suits for damages. Let such liberty to prosecute be freely given. The Native libeller will very soon cease from his trade when he finds that it is an expensive one.

THE INDIAN PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION.

(COMMUNICATED.)

ONE of the constantly smouldering, and sometimes burning questions connected with our Indian administration is that of the employment of the people of that country in the higher ranks of the public service. Hence it may be well to recall a brief reply on this subject given by Sir John Gorst to the member for Northampton in course of the Indian Budget night — that dreary occasion during the dying moments of the session. The Under-Secretary said: — "As to the allegation that Natives are excluded from the more highly-paid posts, one-sixth of them are filled by Natives, and they are admitted in still larger proportions to the less remunerative and uncovenanted branches of the service." This statement, take it as we may, proceeds on some utter mistake—and Sir John gave not a line or figure in its support. The "more highly paid posts"—except two or three of the High Court judgeships, which do not count for this purpose—can only be taken as applying to the Covenanted Civil Service. But what is the fact? In 1876, when Lord Lytton framed or adopted the well-known dispatch, one object of which was avowedly to contrive some formal method—within the four corners of the Acts of 1853 and 1861, which established free and open competition—whereby Natives of India might be excluded from the Covenanted Service proper, there were, at that date, nine Indians in the Covenanted Civil Service, which consisted of nine hundred members. Those nine "sons of the soil" had succeeded in passing before certain adverse changes had been imposed on the regulations for competition. Since that period two or three more have entered. What, then, becomes of the somewhat hasty statement of the Under-Secretary about one-sixth of the highly-paid posts being now filled by Natives of India? The most likely explanation of the mistake is that Sir John Gorst was groping after, but missed remembrance of the scheme by which, under the "Statutory Civil Service," there may eventually be one-sixth of the whole "Covenanted" and "Statutory" posts (counting both) held by Natives of the country—if that abortive scheme shall last long enough. At present there are about thirty of these hybrid or "Statutory-Covenanted" Civilians; but what is thirty, and adding the ten Native competition men, compared with the nine hundred? That this very misleading—though unintentional—mis-statement by the Under-Secretary was allowed to pass without contradiction, is one among several instances in that melancholy debate, proving, once more, the utter inadequacy of this annual function for the purpose of reviewing our administration of India.

There was another remark by the Under-Secretary bearing on this deeply important question, which it is desirable to notice. He said, "As to the complaint of the non-employment of Natives in large numbers in the public services, that was exactly the subject on which a Commission had been sitting for some time." Here, in passing, mention should be made of an observation—not reported, by the way—made by an honourable member (Mr. R. T. Reid), in which he drew attention to an instance that he took as a typical one, showing that a European officer, who had testified before the Commission to the advantage of Native Indians being appointed to higher posts, was snubbed and "sat upon" for having expressed his honest opinion to that effect.

It is not desirable to anticipate the disappointment, not to say derision, with which Sir John Gorst's off-hand reference to the Public Service Commission will be received in India. Curiously enough, in one of the Native journals to hand by the mail following (the Indian Spectator of Bombay) occurs a passage that might have been written to supply the answer to the Under-Secretary, which there was no one—if we except the passing criticism just mentioned—to give him in the House. Here is what the Indian journalist says:—

> Look at what is happening before the Public Service Committee. The witnesses are generally either departmental subordinates or outsiders. The former dare not speak out, and the latter can speak but at random. And what is the result? Your official experts, who know everything and fear nothing, neither conscience nor authority, simply swamp the Native evidence. Department after department is being declared too sacred for the children of the soil. Were it not that an Englishman like Sir Charles Turner is at the head of the Committee, we would have given it up in despair. We do not wish to be captious even at this stage, but it is impossible to refrain from saying that the sons of India in the service of their own country are being condemned unheard, and without having a fair trial. This unfortunate turn was anticipated by not a few of our Native contemporaries about the time the Public Service Commission was appointed, and we are not surprised at their now writing bitterly about what they expected having so far come to pass. After this, India can have but little interest in committees and commissions of inquiry, even in Royal commissions, about which some of us have been clamouring for years. Our only chance, and that luckily is our best, is to ask for the timely fulfilment of the pledges given us in the Great Charter of 1833, and subsequently in Her Majesty's gracious Proclamation.

This concise description of the nature of the "evidence" which the Commission is recording—and it is confirmed from many sources—should be borne in mind when the Report shall be presented (many months hence) with the India Office's conclusions therein. As to the timely fulfilment of the Charter and Proclamation pledges, that, notwithstanding the pathetic hopefulness of our Indian fellow-subjects, will soon become, in the estimation of many of them, a matter past praying for.

BURMA: OUR GATE TO CHINA.

In the October number of the Asiatic Quarterly Review (London: T. Fisher Unwin), Mr. Archibald R. Colquhoun has in an article under the above title the following:—

There seems to be reasonable ground to believe that some of these resources will prove of considerable commercial value. The most important will probably be coal and petroleum, which may prove of enormous value. It is of the first importance to us to possess on the eastern side of our Indian Empire oil-fields, and there seem good prospects that in North-east Assam, Upper Burmah, and its Shan States we shall find such a supply as may place us in the position of a petroleum Power. In working the mines and other industries it is to be hoped that their exploitation will not be over-hampered with Government restrictions such as have proved so detrimental to similar undertakings in India. It is satisfactory to know that the oil industry has been left open to all comers. The petroleum industry of Russia is the only one in that country in which absolute freedom from protection or control exists, and its progress dates from the day on which the Government abolished all privileges. While the mineral wealth of Upper Burmah is likely to attract speculators, it is in the fertility of the soil and riches of the forest that the main wealth of the country will be found. Upper Burmah is more generally fertile and has a greater future before it than Lower Burmah. With a stable and just government, and a contented and rapidly increasing population the development of the country must be rapid.

The wealth of Upper Burmah, including its resources in Western China, the Shan States, and Siam, is incalculable, but it lies fallow at present for want of communications. It has been too commonly assumed that the annexation would be followed by complete order and an immediate and widespread increase to our trade. Order will come and wealth will certainly follow, but to ensure this we must lay down a network of communications over the new province, and extend our trade with China by a railway along which trade will naturally flow. Without facilitating our communications we need expect no great extension of our commerce either in China, Burmah, or other parts of Indo-China. The laying down of a comprehensive system of railways and of feeder roads to open up the country to the railways and main river communication will involve a considerable outlay for some years to come, but the money thus invested will be richly repaid in Upper Burmah, more amply than the capital expended in Lower Burmah has paid, notwithstanding the gloomy prophecies of the pessimists who find it impossible to look forward a few years.

It is eminently satisfactory to note that the treaty lately concluded provides that both England and China shall "protect and encourage trade between China and Burmah," and arranges for a delimitation commission to define the frontier between Yunnan and Burmah. It is to be hoped that advantage will be taken of the opportunity to have a study made of the features of the British Shan country intervening between Burmah and China.

Burmah, we must remember, is our gate to China, and therefore our north-eastern frontier is of vastly greater commercial importance to us than our north-western one. Compare the two for a second. On the latter the railways are mainly strategic and political, hardly in any sense meant to attain any commercial object; they are purely defensive, and lead to barren regions. On the former we move towards a friendly and peaceful Power, offering us new markets, with well-founded hopes of vast future expansion. The opening of such markets must lead to an enormous development of our mutual trade.

We have now an unrivalled opportunity of reaching the markets of Southern and Western China, and of commercially cementing our relations with the other Peace-Power of Asia by the extension of our railway system to Ssumao, the south-west gate to China. Exploration after exploration has proved that the most practicable route is the one traced by Mr. Holt Hallett and myself after five years' study of the question and services rendered gratuitiously to the country, both in the field and at home. It is to be hoped that this railway, so vital for the extension of our commerce, will be undertaken without delay.

COMMERCIAL.

Messrs. Hawes and Co.'s Fortnightly Indian, Ceylon and Java Tea Report says:—The auctions have comprised 70,882 packages, but in spite of the increased quantity offered prices have been generally well maintained. The Indian deliveries for last month amounted to the large total of 7,015,000 lbs., and of Ceylons of 1,197,220 lbs. Ceylon teas continue to meet with general favour and active competition at advancing rates. Indian Teas: 63,388 packages have been catalogued and mostly sold. Common to Medium Broken Pekoes are required by the trade, and from the limited offerings realise full prices. Medium to fine remain steady, although they have been printed very freely of late. Finest show considerable irregularity, but quotations are mostly unfavourable to Importers. Common to medium Pekoes at from 8d. to 10d. per lb., from the good demand ruling, meet with ready sale; medium to fine show great uncertainty of value, generally being of good appearance, but wanting much in liquor; still they appear comparatively cheap; and finest, especially when of good appearance, are competed for at very firm rates. All grades of Souchongs and Pekoe Souchongs are firm and freely taken. Broken Teas mark little change. Ceylon Teas: During the past two weeks 6,773 packages have been auctioned, show ing but a slight increase in quantity offered during the previous fortnight. For all sorts a good inquiry has existed, and prices have been fully maintained, and in many cases an advance established for choice Pekoes and Broken Pekoes. The demand for Pekoe Souchongs and Souchongs has kept good pace with late supplies, the bulk of which has been generally of more than average good quality. Java Teas: Only a very moderate quantity has been offered for sale, viz., 721 packages. The demand for these was good, the improved quality of most of these Teas drawing extra attention. Small leaf Pekoes are readily taken for export at previous quotations. Pekoe Souchongs and Souchongs are well competed for by the home trade, and realise good prices in comparison with those ruling for Indian growths. Broken Pekoes, especially when of good appearance, sell with competition at hardening rates. Broken Teas are scarce, without change in values. We quote the following sales :—

	Pekoe No. 1.	Pekoe No. 2.	Pekoe Souch.	Bro. Pekoe.
Bagelen	1s. 1¾d. to 1s. 2d.	—	7¼d. to 7¾d.	8¼d. to 8¾d.
Jasinga	—	8¼d. to 10d.	6¼d. to 7d.	8¼d. to 1s. 4¼d.
Tendjo Aijoe	1s. 1d.	8d.	7¼d. to 7¼d.	8¼d.
Tjikoya	1s. 1½d.	—	6¾d.	5¼d.

Messrs. Elliot, Lack and Porter's Circular says :—The quieter tone n China Teas spoken of in our last has continued, and where merchants have been anxious to realise they have had to accept easier terms. Public sales catalogued 23,162 packages, which went with less spirit than heretofore, buyers seemingly being full of most sorts, and some little time must be given them to work off the weight of late purchases. Recent arrivals show a marked falling off in quality, and holders require the same rates that were paid for earlier and better parcels. The appended figures again show a serious falling off of deliveries of China Congou, being nearly two million lbs. behind last year. Of Ceylon Teas 4,345 packages have been sold this week. The assortment offered has been of rather a mixed character; for some invoices of inferior quality the biddings were slack and below sellers' ideas, but all Teas with desirable and fine liquors were well competed for at firm rates. PAPER STOCK AND FIBRES OF BURMA.—A correspondent of Indian Engineering points out that the fibre industry of Burma is well worthy of attention and development, at a time when energy and capital are being expended in increasing the resources and industries of that province. The country abounds in fibre-producing plants, and the different species of bamboo, China grass, and pineapple grow wild everywhere. Some years since an American missionary in Toungoo prepared a quantity of paper stock and fibre from these plants and sent it to the United States, where it was manufactured into a superior kind of cloth, much resembling silk, and also into paper of different qualities. Subsequently the same gentleman modelled a loom from the bamboo which he instructed the Karens how to use, and coarse cloth is now woven by them for their own use. Bamboo is pre-eminently the best substitute, if properly prepared, for esparto grass, rags, and other materials used in the production of paper, and it has been so stated by one of the leading authorities in England on commercial fibres. In Burma the bamboo grows in profuse luxuriance and variety. It ranges from the thickness of the ordinary rattan to 2ft. in circumference. The stems of the latter, the bambusa gigantea, are used by the Natives for water-pails. The bamboo needs preparation to fit it for commerce like hemp, jute, and other articles, and this preparation, the writer argues, should take place in Burma. Favourable sites for erecting factories for this treatment are to be found on the banks of the Irrawaddy and Salween, where communication is easy both with the interior and the principal seaports. The fibres of bamboo, China grass, and pineapple can be treated in the same manner as jute, and spun so fine that an expert could barely distinguish the product from real silk. These fibres possess an advantage over jute in that they require little chlorine when bleaching and they remain stronger in consequence. At present large quantities of cloth woven from China grass and bamboo are brought into the Rangoon markets by Chinese from Bhamo, and although the material is not manufactured with modern looms, the quality appears so fine as to resemble tussore silk. The cultivation of jute as an experiment undertaken by the Government was very successful; with a view to encourage the industry the authorities offer to purchase good jute from Karen cultivators.

THE IMPERIAL INSTITUT.—The Maharajah of Mysore has contributed Rs.50,000 to the funds of the Imperial Institute.

THE Government of India has lately made a concession to railway servants with regard to fees for medical attendance. A question arose as to whether the railway employer or the railway servant was to pay for a consultation fee charged by a medical man called in serious cases by the railway company's physician. The Government has now decided that the railway companies' employés are entitled to medical aid gratis, and that, therefore, the consultation fee should be paid by the railway.

GENERAL SIR ARTHUR MITFORD BECHER, K.C.B., Bengal Staff Corps, died last week at Winchester, aged seventy-one. He obtained his first commission in 1833, and served in India in 1838-39. He was present at the siege of Ghuznee and the occupation of Cabul, and in the Sutlej campaign of 1845-6. He was quartermaster of the army from 1852 to 1863, and in that capacity was present with the army headquarters at the siege of Delhi, &c., in 1857, when he was severely wounded. He commanded the Sirhind Division (Bengal) from 1865 to 1869. The late Sir Arthur obtained the rank of major-general in April, 1861; lieutenant-general in June, 1870; and general in June, 1877; was made a Companion of the Order of the Bath in 1858; and a Knight Commander of the Order in 1873.

BROAD ARROW

AND

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially-interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE O INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

SYSTEMS OF

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. NORMAN SHAW, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., Architect.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to purchase and work the Gold Mines of "Inyoko," in the Kingdom of Attuahbu or Eastern Appolonia, in the British Dependency of the Gold Coast, West Africa.

The Gold Coast has been famous from time immemorial as a gold-producing country.

The country was brought under the direct control of the British Government at the conclusion of the Ashantee War, and is now practically a British Colony, and security of tenure and freedom from disturbance are thus guaranteed.

The fact that the lease is free from royalty is most favourable to the lessees, as not only is the possibility of dispute as to the same thereby prevented, but the saving to the Company will be great, as such royalties frequently run to 10 per cent. upon the output.

The late King of Appolonia (Kwako Akka), described by Sir Richard F. Burton, the eminent African traveller, as "rich in blood and ore," and who was deposed by the British Government on account of his cruelties, obtained most of his wealth from this gold-field. The immense quantity of gold so obtained was, however, only from the surface, the natives being in absolute ignorance of the commonest mechanical appliances, and unable, therefore, to sink to a depth of more than a few feet. Thus a rich harvest remains to be reaped from the underlying reefs by the application of proper engineering skill and appliances.

Inyoko Hill is only three miles from the sea, in a due northerly direction over gently rising ground, which presents no difficulty to the construction of a tramway to the coast. Both wood and water are in abundance in the immediate neighbourhood, and by the terms of the lease the Company will be allowed to cut and take timber, to construct roads, tramways, or railways, or for other purposes, as required. The seaport for shipping is Axim, which is within 12 miles of the mines, is only 23 days' steam from England, and there is regular communication by steamer every fortnight.

A perusal of the following extract from the work of Sir Richard Francis Burton, F.R.G.S., F.S.A., "To the Gold Coast for Gold," will show the value of this concession :—

"My companions found the shaft still open, and observed that the valley contained many holes and washing pits. One was pointed out to him as having yielded twenty ounces of dust in one day ; these reports recall the glories of California and Australia in the olden time. The little Etubu water, which runs 200 yards from the shaft, would easily form a reservoir, supplying the means of washing throughout the year. Here, then, are vast facilities for hydraulic work, millions of cubic feet can be strained of their gold at a minimum expenditure. There will be less 'dead' work, and getting would be immediate. Thus, too, as in California, the land will be prepared for habitation and agriculture, and the conditions of climate will presently be changed for the better."

Sir Stephen J. Hill, K.C.M.G., C.B., formerly Governor of the Gold Coast, writes to the vendor under date April 14th, 1887 :—

"I know Appolonia well. As Governor of the Gold Coast the late King Kwako Akka (mentioned by Sir Richard Burton) was my prisoner in Cape Coast Castle. Six thousand pounds (£6,000) in gold were found in his possession when he was captured, together with a solid gold bar representing a walking-stick. In conversation with him, he told me that he had hidden or buried a large quantity of gold, but no other person than himself knew the place, as he had killed the men who carried the bags.

"I can endorse all that Sir Richard Burton says relative to gold in Appolonia. The country is, in my opinion, rich in gold. Native labour you can get in abundance, but practical miners, under a mining engineer, are required to teach the natives. Properly worked, no country would produce more gold than the Gold Coast of Africa. Gold is found in every river, or wherever it is looked for."

The amount to be paid to the vendor under the contract mentioned below is £55,000. Of this, the vendor has agreed to take one-third in cash, the remainder in cash, debentures and shares, as the Company shall determine.

By the Engineer's report (which can be inspected at the office of the Company, or a copy will be sent to any subscriber upon application), it will be seen that this property has been carefully examined and fully reported upon ; and he says that, independently of the results to be obtained from working the quartz reef, which contains visible gold, that the loose earth on the surface produces at least 1 oz. of gold per ton. Although it is anticipated that a greater yield than this will be obtained by going deeper, yet, allowing that the yield will only be 1 oz. per ton, the following statistics will show what results may be expected from the crushing of 100 tons, which may reasonably be considered a fair day's work :—

100 tons, producing 100 oz. per diem, at £4 per oz.... ...	£400
Less cost of production at 30s. per ton	150
Net daily profit	£250
Multiply by number of working days in the year	313
	78,250
Less 10 per cent. interest on £25,000 Debentures	2,500

which would represent a profit of 125 per cent. on the first year's working.

In this estimate 30s. per ton is allowed for the expenses of production, but gold can be produced under ordinary circumstances for 10s. to 15s. a ton. In addition to quartz mining, the Company has the advantage of rich surface deposits, and as surface washings can be made to pay at sixpence to ninepence per ton, it is believed that a very large profit can be realised from this work alone. Surface washings realise from £2 to £16 per ton. It is intended to commence operations at once, and the vendor himself will go to see matters are started in a satisfactory manner. Mr. Stewart Burton, who was three years with Mr. Stanley up the Congo, has accepted the position of manager to the Company in Africa.

The Directors receive no fees until fifteen per cent. per annum has been paid upon the paid-up share capital of the Company. The lease and copies of memorandum and articles of association may be seen at the office of the Company. Immediate application will be made for a settlement and an official quotation upon the Stock Exchange. Application for shares or debentures must be accompanied by a deposit, as before mentioned. In case a less number of shares or debentures than is applied for is allotted, the surplus of the deposit will be applied in whole or in part, as the case may be, to the payment of the amount due on allotment, any remainder being refunded to the applicant. In case of the deposit being insufficient to cover the amount due on application and allotment, the balance required must be paid forthwith. Where no allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full.

The vendor of the Company, in addition to the ordinary business contracts, has entered into contracts with Brokers and others, with reference to subscriptions of capital, but in order to prevent any question, applicants must be deemed to waive any further reference to such Contracts which might be required by Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867. The Company has entered into a contract, dated the 26th September, 1887, and made between Henry William Ventnore Fullford, the vendor, of the one part, and the Company of the other part. This Contract may be seen at the Office of the Company, where the form of Debenture and Trust Deed can also be seen.

Prospectuses and forms of application for shares and debentures can be obtained at the Office of the Company, or from the bankers or solicitor.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

H.E. THE VICEROY in his forthcoming frontier tour will hold durbars at Quetta, Dera-Ismail-Khan, and Dera-Ghazi-Khan.

THE programme of the Commander-in-Chief's tour has been modified, as the dates on the frontier did not coincide with the Viceroy's. Their Excellencies will now be at Sibi, will visit the Kwaja and Khojak Passes together, and will go through Quetta, Karachi, Dera Ghazi, Dera Ismail, and Peshawur on the same dates.

GENERAL CHESNEY and Sir T. Hope will make a tour on the frontier about the same time.

LORD REAY has opened a new paper mill at Poona.

CONSEQUENT upon disturbances with the Native Police the 17th N.I. has been summarily removed from Bombay to Mhow.

GHOLAM HYDER is cautioning his troops in the Hotak country, so as to be ready to check any new rising among the Ghilzais.

THE last rumour of Ayoub Khan reports him to be near the Beluchistan frontier, south of Seistan.

AT the Mysore Representative Assembly on October 1st the Dewan announced a surplus of 18 lakhs. A large irrigation scheme was foreshadowed on the Dewan's Address.

THE farewell ball given to Lady Lyall by the civilians—the culminating event of the Naini Tal season—took place on October 3rd. The Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West left for Bareilly and Simla. His Honour and party will probably be back at Naini Tal about October 15th.

THE railway bridge over the Chinese Creek, near the Custom House at Karachi, is fast approaching completion, and the railway authorities hope to be able to convey the Viceroy over it from the camp to Keamari during his visit there in November.

THE total area irrigated in the Punjab last year was 940,507 acres, being an increase of 78,400 acres as compared with the previous year.

AT the meeting of the Council held at Simla, October 6th, the Hon. J. B. Peile, in moving leave to introduce a Bill to amend the law relating to the regulation of the police, said that under the present Act the employment of police officers was restricted to the Presidency or Province of the police establishment of which they were members. This occasioned much inconvenience, especially in the case of railways passing through territories under several administrations. The Bill empowered the Government to create general police districts embracing parts of two or more Provinces, and to enrol for service therein a special police force under special police authorities. It also provided for the temporary employment of police officers out of their own district.

NOTES.

THE intelligence wired by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times this morning, to the effect that Lord Dufferin's intended visit to Quetta has been abandoned until next year, will not be held to be very satisfactory news. The danger of cholera is one which would hardly have deterred Lord Dufferin himself, but a durbar of Afghan and Frontier chiefs, with whom the doctrine that cleanliness is next to godliness does not hold, might be a serious danger in case of an epidemic breaking out. It would not be contrary to Afghan nature to assert that any mortality ensuing had been caused by English treachery, such as poisoning the drinking water; it would be considered rather in the light of diplomacy than of murder, which is not recognised as a crime, but practised as a fine art in Afghanistan.

NEVERTHELESS, at the present time, with the clouds which are said to be gathering on the North-West Frontier, a meeting between the Viceroy and the Afghan Chiefs would have been one of political significance, and of good augury for the future. It would have been a strong hint that "the strong man armed" (the British) intended "to keep his goods" (India) "in peace."

WE are glad to see that the leading Indian journals in India are protesting, as we have so often done, against the circulation of the sensational rumours which certain correspondents and agents wire to the Press in England regarding Afghanistan and Central Asia. These rumours find refuge again in India, and do incalculable mischief. They are concocted, as we have before pointed out, in the Peshawur or Simla bazaars, then wired or written to Calcutta, and thence telegraphed to London. There have lately been all sorts of reports of the failing health of the Amir, but it now appears that Dr. O'Meara, the well-known dentist of Simla, who went to visit him at Cabul, returned to India only a few days ago, and reports that Abdurrahman Khan is not only in fair, but in robust health.

IT is a matter for serious regret that a fracas should have taken place between the Sepoys of the 17th Bombay Native Infantry and the police, resulting in orders for the removal of the regiment from Bombay. The police say that the soldiers were in fault, not the police. The police in the way of asserting their own innocence are much the same all over the world, but we think that the colonel of the corps was right in asking the Press to refrain from passing judgment against his men until the result of a Court of Inquiry ordered should be made public. The Press complains that the Court should have been an open one, but military Courts of Inquiry need not necessarily be so. Sometimes Indian editors want to know too much, and then make very bad use of the information they get.

The opening of the Simla Fine Arts Exhibition by the Lieutenant-Governor in the presence of his Excellency the Viceroy, Lady Dufferin, Sir F. Roberts, and the Simla public came off with the usual éclat it always does, and, of course, the usual speech was made regarding the pictures and amateur art generally in India. But his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor touched on other topics. He said: "There were people who were fond of saying nasty things about Simla, who charged them with spending all their leisure time in nothing better than dances, big dinners, gymkhanas, tennis, and flirtations. They all knew this was a horrid calumny." He told them, further, that they were what the Americans called very high-toned people, and much more æsthetic than their calumniators said. There are many of those calumniators who would be glad to hear this even at the expense of a little surprise.

His Honour, however, has good authority to fall back upon. Some years ago the poet of the Punjab, Lepel Griffin, in bidding good-bye to the mountain for the season, wrote in melodious verse of the virtues he had discovered there:—

"Farewell to Peliti, whose menu delicious,
Has helped our digestion the long season through;
Farewell to the scandals, so false and malicious,
And all the more piquant for not being true.
Au revoir to the ladies; farewell to them never;
Who are most of them pretty and all of them good,
Whose saintly example and gentle endeavour
Would surely reform us if anything could."

This, as a local editor wrote at the time, has all the veracity of verse to recommend it.

But the Lieutenant-Governor made another statement which possibly cannot be called in question. The Simla Municipality does not seem to be in a very flourishing condition, notwithstanding its Kursal and æsthetic tastes. His Honour hoped that Indian Municipalities would become munificent patrons of art; but the Simla Municipality does not appear likely to give much encouragement to that hope. It had, said his Honour, spent all the money it could get or borrow, and had therefore been obliged to charge the Exhibition 300 rupees for the hire of the room.

Poona had also an Exhibition opened by his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and the Governor of Bombay. It was an exhibition of flowers, at which two prizes were offered for the prettiest dinner-table decorations for a party of eight, but the people of Poona appear to be too æsthetic. The decorations are described as having taken up nearly the whole of each table, so that a dinner plate of ordinary size must have been tipped into the lap of any guest who ventured to use his knife and fork. Upon this an indignant and possibly hungry correspondent writes to his editor, "The most ethereal prefer sitting down to a table suggestive of getting a comfortable dinner rather than to one totally given up to decorations." We think so too, and also agree with him that "wet moss should be sparingly used in table decorations."

Wherever the British flag is flying deep regret will have been felt at the news of Lady Brassey's death. Her beautiful yacht, the Sunbeam, was gladly welcomed at all the many ports of the world it visited, for the bright and winning sympathies of the lady who has given the stories of her travels in a genial, unpretending style. The visit of herself and her popular husband to India would doubtless have been so recorded, too, had she lived. For that bereaved husband every sympathy will be felt, but there is something not inappropriate in the fate that one who had loved the ocean so well, and had sailed so often over it, should now find her last resting-place in its bosom:—

"The strong, sad sea, in its eternal swell, Something of strong, sad fellowship has given."

The P. and O. new steamer Victoria, from London, arrived at Bombay at 7 A.M. on Saturday, being only eight days six hours from Suez, and fourteen days eleven hours from London, viâ Brindisi. These are the fastest runs ever made to Bombay.

(BY TELEGRAPH.)
(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

Calcutta, Oct. 23.

The Viceroy's intended visit to Quetta has been postponed till next year, in consequence of the occurrence of some cases of cholera there. The Surgeon-General has advised this postponement on the ground that, considering the present sanitary conditions of Quetta and the Pishin district, it would be undesirable to hold durbars, or otherwise bring together a large concourse. It is very unfortunate, from a political point of view, that any occasion should have arisen to defer this visit. A telegram just received from Quetta states that it has been formally announced that the Viceroy's visit to the border province has been abandoned on account of a representation by the Surgeon-General that a cholera epidemic may be engendered and the garrison's health endangered by the assembling of the retinues of the chiefs summoned to a durbar on November 9. These apprehensions are not locally considered to be justified. Only a few sporadic cases have occurred of late, and these were entirely confined to those Ghilzais who have recently arrived. The rapid approach of cold weather, moreover, removes all risk of a cholera epidemic. The abandonment of this tour will doubtless prove a source of serious disappointment to the frontier chiefs.

At the last meeting of the Indian Council the legal member moved that the Game Protection Bill be taken into consideration. He said the opinions laid before the Committee showed a general consensus of opinion in favour of the Bill. The objections raised were not to the principle of the measure, but were to the effect that its scope was not sufficiently extensive. Endeavours had been made to meet this argument by including peacocks, reverenced by the Hindoos, and also insectivorous birds, valuable for the destruction of insects, which were being exterminated for the sake of their plumage. Many thousands of black partridges had been killed last year for the same reason. The Madras Government was especially anxious for the protection of such birds. Power was also given to local Governments to extend the provisions of the Bill to animals and game other than birds.

The Bonded Warehouse Bill was passed.

Intelligence was received in town yesterday that another of the British India Steam Navigation Company's steamers, the Arcot, Captain Parsonage, had, while crossing the James and Mary bar, stranded in the Muckraputty sands. The vessel is a total wreck alongside the Mahratta whose masts are still visible above the water. According to the Telegraph Gazette the accident happened at 1 35. p.m., when two other steamers, the Armenia and the Clan Matheson, were also about to cross the bar. The Arcot was just ahead of the Armenia, which was again closely followed by the Clan Matheson. Details are not yet forthcoming as to the real cause of the disaster, but there is little doubt that whatever the cause the unfortunate vessel was forced out of a safe channel by the strong tide, and, like the Mahratta, became unmanageable, struck the sand, and capsized.

The Armenia and Clan Matheson were also on the point of crossing the bar at the time, and therefore could not render any assistance to the Arcot. To attempt to do so would have been to court certain disaster themselves. The steamer Rewa, however, which was some distance behind these three vessels, seeing what had occurred, instantly let go her anchor and stood by to render assistance, and with other help all hands were saved except five passengers who are reported to have been drowned. Those on board the Clan Matheson who witnessed the accident state that the Arcot capsised almost instantly after she touched the sand.

The Governor of Madras, responding to the toast of his health proposed by the Maharajah of Travancore, said that his Highness had very naturally and very properly first recounted the advantages which his State derived from its connection with the British Empire. He added:—

"It is always a great satisfaction to those who represent the Queen to recollect that those who rule over Native States thoroughly appreciate the advantages of that connection; and it is extremely agreeable to me, as representing our Sovereign on this occasion, to hear from the lips of his Highness that, as one of our oldest allies in India, he is alive to the advantages of that position. I can only say that I hope that connection will long remain as it is, and that while the British Government affords its ægis and protection to this Native State, as well as to all other Native States in India, the Native rulers will at the same time be allowed to enjoy that amount of independence which they now possess, and that we shall see them going on endeavouring to do their best as Native rulers to govern according to the dictates of enlightened humanity.

"I trust that the alliance between those States and England will long remain as cordial as it is at present, and that those relations which exist between them will continue to be as firmly cemented as they now are. If at any time it may be our duty, from causes which I must say I do not think very likely to arise at present, to ask the Native Princes to put forth their strength in defence, not only of their own territory, but also of British territory in India, I am quite certain that we can rely upon the loyalty of all our Native allies, and that they will rally round the British Government, knowing that in doing so they are defending their own country and their own homes."

It is stated that the Government has refused to sanction a survey for the Hyderabad-Pachbadra Railway. The proposed line would cost 245 lakhs, without the prospect of sufficient return for the outlay. The practicability of a feeder line from the Indus to Mirpore has been suggested.

The Jubilee subscriptions to Lady Dufferin's fund amounted to Rs.4,78,000 in India and £1,700 in England. This amount is exclusive of funds paid direct to the branches. Even this sum, considerable as it is, is entirely incommensurate with the magnitude of the work to be done. The women of India at the last census numbered 124,000,000. To alleviate the preventable sufferings which a large portion of this number have to endure through ignorant treatment would require an enormous increase of subscriptions. Energetic endeavours are being made in every direction to excite Native interest in the scheme. Forty-seven girls are now studying at Agra under a matron and two lady doctors holding diplomas. The like arrangements have been made at Calcutta, Durbhunga, Lahore, and Alwar. The supply, however, falls far short of the demand. Lady Dufferin has been well supported by the Maharajah of Durbhunga, who has founded a hostel for the Native students at a cost exceeding Rs. 55,000. A hostel has also been opened by the charitable Maharanee Surnomoyi, in close proximity to the three Native hospitals of Calcutta. It is urgently desired in order to promote the philanthropic object of the scheme that the association should be largely recruited in England.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE COST OF BENGAL AND BOMBAY.

(Englishman.)

A comparison of the cost of administration of Bengal and Bombay, under the various heads of expenditure, brings to light some extraordinary and some altogether unaccountable differences. The population of the Bombay Presidency, as shown in the Administration Report for 1884-85, is 16,454,414, excluding the Native States; that of Bengal, as given in the Local Administration Report for the following year, is 66,691,456, or almost exactly four times that of the Western Presidency. The civil charges of governing Bombay are £1,748,665; and those of governing Bengal are £2.276,768. The general heads of these charges may be found at page 6 of the Finance and Revenue accounts of the Government of India. They are as follows:—

	Bengal.	Bombay.
General Administration ...	£198,241	£173,310
Law and Justice...	973,943	509,196
Police	486,531	496,751
Marine	82,907	6,136
Education	329,453	265,985
Ecclesiastical	19 899	32,521
Medical	143,974	143,372
Political	2,940	80,487
Minor Departments	38,880	40,916
	2,276,768	1,748,674

If we return to the details, which are given in pages 66-85, we shall find curious discrepancies. For example, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal costs, in salary, £9,503, and for his household and staff, £2,734, or £12,237 in all. The corresponding charges in Bombay, which are divided between the Governor and the Commissioner of Sindh, amount to £21,907 for salaries and £17,690 for staff and household charges, the total being £39,597. On looking at these figures together the question arises at once, Is the difference between a Governor and a Lieutenant-Governor worth £27,000 a year? Or, to put it another way, worth more than the Viceroy's salary? Again, the Legislative Council of Bengal costs £1,955 a year, while the Executive Council of Bombay puts a charge of £12,286 on the revenues. That extra charge of above £10,000 a year would not be necessary if Bombay could be content with a Lieutenant-Governor. Then there must be added to it £8,581 for a Military Secretary at Bombay, an officer whom Bengal is able to do without. The country, therefore, pays more than £45,000 a year, simply because Bombay is governed by a Governor in place of a Lieutenant-Governor.

If we proceed to compare some of the requirements of the two Presidencies, we shall be met by some startling facts. We have quoted the population of Bombay at 16,454,414. That of the single Patna division of Bengal is not much less—it is 15,063,944. Thus a mere Commissioner, without any staff or office beyond the establishment of a district officer, is able to look after the well-being of a population nearly equal to the population of the Bombay Presidency. We may show, on the other side, that Bombay has no Board of Revenue, and that the charges for the Secretariat are less in Bombay than in Bengal, although these are less only relatively, not by any means proportionately to the sizes of the two administrations. The touring charges of Bengal are also more than those of Bombay, being respectively £8,453 and £1,772 a year. But those charges have since been much reduced, and from the details given in the Finance and Revenue Accounts, it seems the main item consisted in allowances to clerks and servants. It may be interesting in this connection to mention that the whole touring charges of the Indian Governments are put down at £115,133, of which the Supreme Government is responsible for £85,480. The N.W.P. Government incurs £11,095, the Bengal Government, £8,453, the Punjab Government, £6,587, the Bombay Government, £1,772, and the other Governments, sums under £1,000.

Passing from touring charges to charges under the head "Law and Justice" we find that these in Bengal are scarcely double what they are in Bombay, although the population of Bengal is four times that of Bombay. The relative aggregate amounts of civil suits in the two administrations are much more in proportion to the populations if we may compare Bombay in 1884 with Bengal in 1885-86, for we have not the means to compare the figures in the same year. These charges are:—Bombay in 1884, £148,361; Bengal in 1885-86, £490,131. Looking into details the comparison in some instances is very striking. Thus, Magistrate's establishments in Bombay cost the enormous amount of £33,157, against £40,894 for Bengal. Again, Bombay spends £15,018 in travelling allowances, against Bengal's £8,302.

Under the heading of "Police," the charges against Bombay are only £10,000 less than Bengal, notwithstanding the enormous disparity of population and crime. Among the items under which Bombay makes up its excess, the following are prominent:—£50,510 are paid annually for the Bombay Presidency police, against only £29,432 in Bengal, and, we may add, £16,001 in Madras. The Provincial police cost less in Bombay than in Bengal, but not nearly as much less as we might expect from comparison of the populations. The District Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents cost a little more than half in Bombay what they do in Bengal. The cost of the subordinate officers and constabulary is £268,187 in Bengal, and £257,651, or only £10,536 less, in Bombay. To show the work done by the two bodies, the Bombay police investigated 61,407 cases of cognizable crime in 1884, and the Bengal police 107,884 cases in 1885. The towns of Bombay and Calcutta are included in these figures. Neither city has much virtue to boast of; the crimes of Bombay were 16,880, and the crimes of Calcutta 18 more.

Owing to the heavy pilotage salaries £61,232, the, marine charges in Bengal mount up to the high figure of £82,907, but these are more than met by the receipts, £85,100. Under the head of "Education," £141,593 is debited to Government schools in Bombay, and only £65,173 in Bengal; but the "payments by results," which appear in a different column are more equal, being £154,697 in Bombay, and £138,345 in Bengal. Primary education is clearly more favoured in Bombay. The large expenditure on the Government book depôt in Bombay is balanced by nearly equal receipts. The Ecclesiastical establishment cost much more in Bombay than in Bengal. It is not as easy to account for "Medical Charges," being only £602 more in Bengal than in Bombay. "Vaccination" costs £26,759 in Bombay, inclusive of the Sanitary Commissioner's pay, but in Bengal only £18,369. Government pays but £39,581 for hospitals and dispensaries in Bengal, while it gives Bombay £53,690. The Bombay lunatic asylum costs within £62 of the sum correspondingly expended in Bengal. The political charges in Bombay are necessarily heavier than those of Bengal, and the minor departments do not call for notice. The charges in Madras, though very heavy in proportion to Bengal, are light compared with Bombay, where, after making due allowance for the increased cost of living, it seems certain that a judicious application of the pruning-knife would render the income-tax unnecessary.

THE PROBATIONER.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

He had been in the regiment quite a long time—some two years and upwards—and, as he was also one of the first of the youngsters, since the arrival of the corps in India, who had been sacrificed to the Moloch of parental economy, everybody felt his departure a good deal. I suppose all probationers do feel leaving what they speak of affectionately as the "old corps," but the wrench must be harder for those who have put off the evil day as long as possible; who have hoped that the "governor" would become possessed of a noble property; or that they themselves would learn how to live on two hundred a month and an occasional fever, and have consequently worried along somehow until the terror of home letters has become more than unpleasant. If a disagreeable thing must be done it were well that it were done quickly, and the young warrior who realizes that the Staff Corps is for him, had better join it before the severance from his first love unduly rends his heart strings.

Martin Wildman always did himself pretty well; it was quite out of the question that he should not have a share in anything that happened to be going on, so that his stud and his monthly wine bill were generally both a little magnificent; and sometimes, too, his relations with the regimental paymaster were rather strained towards the end of the month. He was generally said to be a sportsman; by this I believe it was meant that he rode about a good deal at a gallop, and had an especially correct costume for any amusement in which he happened for the moment to be engaged. Your true sportsman is always rather horsey, and would never dream of doing anything particular unless he happened to be suitably dressed for the part. In this sense Wildman was emphatically a sportsman. His bearer could, at a moment's notice, lay his hand upon any get-up which his master might require—from the varminty rig of a man going to kill rats to the orthodox frock coat and trousers of matrimony. As a case in point, I may mention that I was on one occasion dressing for a wedding (not my own, by-the-bye), at which civil garb was de rigueur. All my young friends, who uninvited came to see me dressed for the part, one and all took exception to my necktie as not being sufficiently appropriate. In this desperate strait we invoked the aid of Wildman, who at once presented me with a satin tie of a most delicate salmony-pink which subsequently turned the bridegroom almost green with envy. Martin Wildman was among other things, our theatrical manager, and did his best to keep in some sort of subjection the unruly pack who compose a regimental troupe. He experienced the very greatest difficulty, prior to the production of a piece, in persuading each lady in turn that hers was the leading part; for it was not to be expected for one single moment that Mrs. Schoolmaster Hicks was going to play second fiddle to Mrs. Corporal Robinson. I admit that Wildman's tact and address were all that could be desired in a theatrical manager, but his ideas on costume were certainly rather vague. He cast me once for the part of a small gentleman farmer in one of those remarkable pieces amateurs sometimes select for representation. I asked him how I should dress the part, upon which he waived his managerial hand in an airy way and said, "Oh! anything, anything!" After a few days I took him on one side and said firmly that I must wear something. He was reasonable enough to see this and referred me to Corporal Robinson, husband of the heroine, who knew all about it and kept the key of the wardrobe. Corporal Robinson, after much cogitation, presented me with the following garments, which were, he said, "the very thing"; item, one scarlet full-skirted coat richly laced with gold; item, one tie-wig much too small for me, and in which the white ants seemed to have taken some interest; item, one pair of yellow knickerbockers constructed for low comedy and padding; item, one pair of ladies' black hose, known, I believe, in the trade as "women's slenders"; and this was all. I felt somehow that gentleman farmers of small means have rarely dressed themselves so tastefully and with such a disregard for expense. However, finding Corporal Robinson to be very firm I rolled the things up and took them away, but was glad when the play fell through, owing to a slight misunderstanding between the leading ladies.

When our friend first sent in his papers for the Indian Staff Corps he announced that he was going into the Bengal Cavalry; this is generally proposed by the candidate, but the father, who is always a narrow-minded man with ridiculous ideas about providing for the rest of his fourteen children, disposes otherwise. Martin Wildman did not get a cavalry but an infantry corps divided into detachments in an inaccessible part of the country. Since he joined his corps—merely as a matter of form—he has spent a good deal of his time away from it; for garrison classes, language leave, etc., are really very excellent things. Wildman is, of course, trying for something else—this is one of the very first principles of Staff Corps lore—but I am not quite certain what it is; and I rather fancy that he has not made his final selection himself yet. But I know that it is either a Goorkha Regiment, or the Commissariat Department, or the Transport, or the command of one of the Burma Police Levies, or Military Accounts, or something which requires special qualifications.

Meanwhile, his comrades in the "old corps" are doing his work, as they have not yet got anybody out from home to replace him; and everybody says that the system of officering the Staff Corps is an admirable one—for the Staff Corps.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE IN 1886.

"The year 1886 has not been a very eventful one to the Indian Medical Service," writes the Indian Medical Journal. "Its chief landmark is the Burmese war, which, in one form or another, has been dragging its slow length along from the beginning to the end of the year. In addition to the large number of Indian Surgeons serving with their regiments, or drafted from their regiments in India to field hospitals in Burma, many more have been called up from Civil employ for service in the field. All three Presidencies have been thus drawn upon. In the Bengal Presidency, Lower Bengal has thus contributed ten men, the North-West three, and the Punjab two. Happily the campaign has not yet cost the life of any member of the Indian Service, which has been more fortunate in this respect than the Medical Staff.

The Bengal Service, which had been steadily sinking in numbers for the last six years, is now numerically slightly stronger than it was at the beginning of the year, having for the first time for five years seen more admissions than casualties. The sanctioned strength of the Service is 341. In the spring of 1882 it was 355 strong; by December, 1885, it had sunk to 321. During the year sixteen casualties took place, viz., three deaths and thirteen retirements, not counting the retirement of two Surgeons on temporary half-pay; and two batches of eight and sixteen members respectively were admitted, while one Surgeon came back from the half-pay list, thus bringing the numbers to 330 in all. Ten new appointments were instituted during the year, viz., the Medical Officer of the Second Battalions of the 1st, 2nd, 4th, and 5th Gurkhas; Professor of Anatomy, Lahore Medical School; Medical Officer, Gwalior; Civil Surgeon of Mandalay; Principal Medical Officer Quetta (formerly held by the Medical Staff); and Principal Medical Officer, Upper Burma, held by a Deputy Surgeon-General, but doubtless only a temporary appointment. In addition, a Professorship of Physiology in the Lahore Medical School and Civil Surgeoncies of Sibi and Jhansi were instituted, but were placed on the list of appointments which may be held by an Uncovenanted officer. Five appointments were abolished; viz., one Deputy Sanitary Commissionership in the Panjab, the post of Superintendent of the Meerut Central Jail, the jail itself being closed, and the Garrison Surgeoncies of Fort William, Fort Chunar and Fort Attock. It is said that the Finance Committee have reccommended the abolition of Sanitary Commissioners. On the other hand, a new Battalion will, no doubt, soon be added to the 3rd Gurkhas, the only Gurka regiment which has not yet got one.

Three members of the Service died during the year—Surgeon-Majors A. P. Holmes and E. B. Gardner (killed at polo at Bareilly), and Surgeon J. L. Corbett. Deputy Surgeon-Generals A. J. Dale, J. Brake, C. Planck, and H. W. Bellew; Brigade-Surgeons J. Fairweather, J. Browne, and R. S. Bateson; Surgeon-Majors J. C. Whishaw, R. T. Lyons, J. Kelly, R. Power, and A. Grant, and Surgeon R. J. Taaffe, retired; while Surgeons F. J. Tuohy and E. L. Robinson were transferred from the half-pay list to retired pay. Brigade-Surgeon J. H. Thornton was promoted into Dr. Dale's place, while Brigade Surgeon-General Farrell filled that of Dr. Brake's, Brigade-Surgeon J. C. Morice taking his place with temporary rank during his absence as Principal Medical Officer in Upper Burma. The two vacant Sanitary Commissionerships were filled by Surgeon-Majors Richardson and Stephen; but the rank of Deputy Surgeon General will no longer be given to the Officers holding these appointments on the completion of twenty-six years' service, as has hitherto been the case. Surgeon-Majors C. P. Costello, J. Duncan, E. O. Tandy, and J. H. Condon were promoted to Brigade-Surgeons. The C.B. was conferred on Deputy Surgeon-General G. Farrell, shortly before his promotion, and the C.I.E. on Deputy-Surgeon General A. M. Dallas; while the latter order was also bestowed on Dr. J. W. Tyler, of the Agra Central Jail, and Dr. G. Watt, of the Calcutta Museum, for their services in connection with the Indo-Colonial Exhibition at South Kensington. Twenty-six Officers, several of them of very junior standing, obtained substantive appointments for the first time during the year; while forty-one were transferred from one substantive appointment to another. Three men were confirmed in Civil employ in Lower Bengal, four in the North-West Provinces, and four in the Punjab.

In Madras and Bombay, too, the numbers of the Service have been steadily sinking, no appointments having been made to these Services since 1883, more than three years ago. There are however, twenty-five Surgeons on probation at present at Netley, and twenty-eight vacancies are advertised for competition in February; so, doubtless, these Services will receive some addition to their numbers during 1887. In Madras Surgeon J. Leonard died; Surgeon-General M. C. Furnell, Deputy Surgeon-General W. H. Rean, Brigade-Surgeons W. H. Morgan and C. T. Eves, and Surgeon-Majors H. A. Busteed and C. R. G. Parker retired Deputy Surgeon General G. Bidie became Surgeon-General; Brigade-Surgeon W. F. de Fabeck was promoted to Deputy Surgeon-General; and Surgeon-Majors H. Griffith, A. Porter and S. B. Hunt filled the vacant Brigade-Surgeoncies. Surgeon-Major C. Sibthorpe was also specially promoted to Brigade-Surgeon for service in Burma, and the C.B. was conferred on Deputy Surgeon-General Donnelly for the same reason; while the C.I.E. was conferred on Surgeon-Major H. A. Busteed and on Deputy Surgeon-General Francis Day, both on the retired list. In Bombay no deaths occurred, but Deputy Surgeon-General H. Cook, Brigade-Surgeons C. Joynt, C. K. Colston and H. R. L. McDougall, and Surgeon-Majors J. P.

Stratton and T. B. W. P. Johnston retired, the last from half-pay; Surgeon-Majors H. J. Blanc, W. Dymck, and E. Sexton were promoted to Brigade-Surgeons.

A number of retired Officers of the Indian Medical Services have also died during the year. Among those on the retired list of the Bengal Service were Inspector-General J. Balfour, Surgeon-General, C.I.C.; Deputy Surgeon-General Norman Chevers, C.I.E., for many years Principal of the Calcutta Medical College; Surgeon-Majors F. Douglas, J. N. B. Wise and T. Oxley, the last the sole survivor of the defunct Prince of Wales Island Medical Service, which he outlived by more than half a century, as it was abolished, and its personnel transferred to Bengal in 1830; and Surgeon H. A. Ebden. The Madras retired list contributes the names of Inspector-General C. C. Linton, Deputy Inspector-General W. Mudge, Deputy Surgeon-General J. W. Joseph, Surgeon-Major J. F. Arthur, C.S.I., and Surgeon W. Middlemass and R. Langton. Surgeon-Majors E. P. Burrows, E. F. Wheatley, H. J. Gane, and Assistant-Surgeon T. Boycott, late of the Bombay Service, also died during the year.

Two important works were published by retired members of the Services during the year. The first was the volume in which Dr. Chevers embodied the result of his long experience in India, "A Commentary on the Diseases of Tropical Climates," finished only a few years before his death; the second was the volume of "Lectures on Diseases of Tropical Climates," published by Surgeon-General W. C. Maclean, for so long Professor of Military Medicine at Netley. The subject-matter of this volume will be familiar to most of our readers. The Parkes Memorial Prize of £100 triennially awarded for the best essay on a given subject, fell due during 1886, and was won by Surgeon Andrew Duncan, of the Bengal Medical Service. It will be remembered that the last award of this prize, in 1882, was also given to a Surgeon of the same Service, Dr. R. J. Polden.

BENGAL.

THE stamp revenue in the Punjab for the year 1886–7 amounted to Rs. 34,94,398, which was larger than in any previous year, and was chiefly due to the increased sale of non-judicial stamps. This, however, by no means indicates an increased state of prosperity in the country, as the larger sale of ordinary stamp paper is said to have been due to the cultivators having to borrow large sums of money owing to the spring harvest having been very bad in many parts.

A CALCUTTA paper calls attention to the insanitary condition of Hastings, a ward in the Municipal sub-division of Calcutta not under the jurisdiction of Fort William. Hastings, besides being the residence of a number of soldiers, is the spot where the large majority of the troops going to and returning from Burma have embarked and disembarked during the two past cold seasons. Again this year it will be largely utilised for the same purpose. It has often been brought to the notice of the Municipal Commissioners that the sanitary condition of the ward is most deplorable, and that the troops residing there or halting on the adjoining maidan, and the garrison of Fort William, run great risk from their contaminated surroundings. The evils complained of, however, remained uncorrected, and a further appeal is now made to Government to interfere with the action or rather inaction of the Municipality.

ROBBING A GOD OF HIS THRONE.—A Brahmin, named Gopal Chunder Gangooly, was recently charged at the Calcutta Police Court by Narain Chunder Mookerjee, on behalf of Baboo Kanye Lall Dhur, with the theft of a gold throne of the Hindoo god Shalgram, valued at Rs. 600, a gold Brahminical thread, and a gold umbrella belonging to the god. On the night of the 25th Sept., the accused was arrested in the street with the articles in his possession, except the umbrella. On the 26th September, Baboo Kanye Lall Dhur, who had a poojah at his house, discovered that the throne of Shalgram, which was placed in front of the goddess Doorgah in the dallan, was missing, and also the gold Brahminical badge and umbrella of the Shalgram. Information was given at the local thannah, and accused was identified as having been at the Baboo's poojah house on the night of the 25th on two occasions, the last being at about 11 P.M., when he was asked how he came to be there without an invitation, and replied that he had come to see the poojah. The throne found with the accused was identified by the complainant as his property. Inspector Davis informed the Court that there had been three other similar cases on the three successive nights of the poojah's, which were still undiscovered, there being no trace of the property stolen or the thieves. Accused pleaded not guilty, but was convicted and sentenced to nine months' rigorous imprisonment.

ACCIDENT ON THE DARJEELING RAILWAY.—A serious trolly accident occurred at noon on September 3rd on the Himalayan Railway, half a mile below Kurseong. A trolly carrying Mr. Prestage, an official of the Railway, Mr. Martin and Mr. Warren, with three Natives, was proceeding down the line towards Silliguri, when it unexpectedly met the up-mail train for Darjeeling. Everyone on the trolly jumped off before the collision occurred, Mr. Prestage and one Native escaping unhurt. Mr. Martin, however, sustained a severe cut on the back of the head, besides another contusion; Mr. Warren injured his leg, and two of the Natives were seriously hurt; one of these men broke his collar bone and leg, and was also dangerously cutabout the face. The trolly was completely smashed up by the engine of the mail train. Medical assistance was promply rendered by Dr. Smith of Kurseong, the two injured Natives being removed to the Kurseong Hospital, where they are now lying.

MADRAS.

THE name of the Guntakal station on the Madras Railway is to be changed to Timmancherla, as verified by the Revenue Department, instead of Timmicherla, as suggested by the Railway authorities—the former being the name of the village near the railway station. The change has been found necessary in view to prevent confusion in the address of parcels, &c., to the Guntakal station, and to the Guntakal Junction station.

THE Resident of Mysore having wired to the Madras Government, stating that pilgrims from Tirupati infected with cholera still keep pouring into Bangalore, and suggesting that, for the safety of that town, pilgrimage to Tirupati be for the present interdicted, he has been informed, in reply, that, while this cannot be done, instructions have been issued to the Collector of North Arcot for taking all sanitary steps to prevent the contagion and to the railway authorities for the rigid observance of the rules laid down for the conveyance of passengers infected with contagious diseases, and for the disinfection of vehicles used by such passengers.

ABOUT three months ago it was announced that the Finance Committee had recommended the reduction of the salaries of three of the law officers of the Madras Government as follows:—That of the Advocate-General from Rs. 2,187 to Rs. 1,800 per mensem, that of the Government solicitor from Rs. 1,225 to Rs. 750; and that of the Government pleader from Rs. 500 to Rs. 250. They also proposed to abolish the office of Clerk of the Crown, suggesting that a portion of the duties of that office might be done by the Crown Prosecutor, while the remainder might be performed by the Deputy or the Assistant Registrar. We now learn that the Government of Madras has sanctioned the reduction of the salary of the Advocate-General from Rs. 2,187 to Rs. 1,800 per mensem, subject to confirmation by the Government of India, and to take effect on the receipt of such confirmation. The salary of the Government Pleader is to be reduced from Rs. 500 to Rs. 350 per mensem, to take effect on the occurrence of a vacancy, and that of the Government Solicitor from Rs. 1,225 to Rs. 1,100 per mensem, to take effect at once. The office of Clerk of the Crown is not to be abolished. The Advocate General will be relieved of all Sessions' work, and the Government Pleader is to receive printed copies of the records as heretofore.

A SHORT time ago a proposal was made in Madras to establish a school in the Presidency town for the sons and relatives of Native chiefs and noblemen. The question, after some discussion, was referred to the Court of Wards for their opinion, and these gentlemen have now replied that the large majority of States in that Presidency are too poor to afford the expenses which will be entailed by the measure proposed. They further state that the question has been considered by the Court on several occasions during the last thirty years, but that difficulties were always found to exist, and they do not at present see their way to overcome them. The local Government, however, is not satisfied with this reply of the Court, and has directed that they should make further inquiries.

BOMBAY.

H.E. LORD REAY, accompanied by his personal Staff, was to leave Gunesh Khind, on the morning of the 11th Sept., for Sangli, by the Southern Mahratta Railway. After a stay of two or three days at Sangli, where great preparations are being made by the Chief for a suitable reception, his Excellency will leave for Kolapur, where he will be the guest of Colonel Reeves, the Political Agent of the Southern Mahratta Country, and after a few days' stay there, his Excellency will leave for Mahableshwar.

A CURIOUS feature of the educational system in the Berars is the boarding-house attached to the high schools and Hindu and Mahomedan boarding-houses, which are managed by the boarders themselves. Each boarding-house is under the general supervision of an assistant master, who is called the superintendent, and who prepares monthly returns of the institution under him. But the internal affairs are managed by a committee of boarders appointed by the boarders themselves. One member of the committee is elected head manager, and his duties are to supervise the work of the other members and to preserve orders. The boarders are divided among the different dormitories, and one of each group is appointed "monitor of the room," whose duty it is to keep order and discipline in his room.

MR. H. M. PHIPSON, Honorary Secretary of the Bombay Natural History Society, has a theory of his own regarding the supposed deafness of snakes. Replying to a correspondent in an up-country paper, who asks how it is that snakes are so difficult of approach, he writes:—"The explanation lies, I believe, in the fact that although snakes cannot hear air-vibrations, they are particularly sensitive to earth-vibrations, and can, on a dry soil, feel the foot-fall of any animal at a considerable distance. The result is that one generally gets only a glimpse of the snake as it is making off and, as the Irishman said of the flea, 'when you get to where he is, he isn't there.' Three-snakes may, however, be easily approached, as they lie coiled up in the branches of a bush. The 'checkered water-snake' (Tropidanotus Quincunctiatus) and the common 'dhaman' (Ptyas Mucosus) may also constantly be seen lying on rocks 'basking,' or more probably waiting for frogs or small fish. If there is any water between you and the snake it naturally acts as a buffer to the earth-vibrations, and, so long as the snake does not see you, you may approach it and talk as loud as you like without disturbing it."

Whatever difficulties there may have existed as to Barristers practising in his Highness the Nizam's Courts, they have now been removed. Hitherto Barristers were not permitted to practise in the Nizam's Courts unless they had been regularly enrolled and produced a Sanad from the Madras High Court. This, at all events, was the recognised custom, although, it may be mentioned, no rules were established for the purpose of enrolment. A regulation has now been published on the subject, and is to the effect that any Barrister who, according to the practice obtaining in the United Kingdom, has obtained a certificate of call to the Bar may make an application to his Highness the Nizam's High Court that his name may be enrolled on the Register of that High Court. If the Court find he is a Barrister as described, and that there is no special objection, having regard to his character and conduct, his name shall be duly enrolled on payment of a fee of H. S. Rupees 500, and such enrolment shall be published in Official Gazette. A Barrister thus enrolled shall have permission, without presentation of any vakalatnama, to practice in the High Courts, and all Courts subordinate thereto, in his Highness the Nizam's Dominions.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

The capital and revenue accounts of the Clerks' Quarters Project at Simla having shown what is considered to be an unsatisfactory financial result for the year 1886 87, the net earnings amounting to Rs. 11,210 only, or 3·53 per cent. on the capital, the Government has decided to increase the rent of all the Government cottages at Simla.

The vital statistics of Assam for the year 1886, if they can be relied upon, which seems rather doubtful, show that the birth rate was 27·55 per 1,000, and the death-rate 27.77 per 1,000. In every district of the Assam Valley, and also in Kachar, the death-rate was higher than in the previous year, while in Sylhet and the selected areas of the Khasi and Jaintia Hills the opposite was the case. Throughout the whole of Assam, with the exception of Lakhimpur and Darrang, the birth-rate has decreased. The returns from the Tea Gardens are considered to be more reliable, and they give a death-rate of 38·25 per 1,000 and a birth-rate of 29 95. The only district in which the birth-rate exceeded the death-rate was in Kachar.

NATIVE PRESS.

THE NIZAM'S OFFER.

H.H. the Nizam's offer to the Government of India, though it does not take away our breath, says the Indian Spectator, as it seems to have taken away the breath of some of the romancing chroniclers of London, has certainly set us thinking. It is a princely offer, to be sure, and reflects credit on the foremost Native State, the owner of which owes so much to British suzerainty and friendship. It is an offer, too, of which the Government of India may well be proud, though it has no need to be so elated as some of our contemporaries make out. The Nizam has but done his duty in offering this splendid contribution of sixty lakhs; and we shall be disagreeably surprised if the Government of India, in its turn, fails to acquit itself equally well by declining the offer with thanks. We say this not from a feeling of jealousy, and that we mean kindly by both parties in this instance will be seen by our stating incidentally that we have not been actively opposed to the Gwalior Loan about which so much has been written of late. Gunpatrao may or may not have advanced the money in good faith; but it is well invested in the circumstances of Gwalior, and the interest can as well be devoted as any other proceeds to the prosecution of public works in Sindhia's territories. The case is different with Hyderabad. She is poor and heavily weighted in spite of her Oriental shows and vauntings. The condition of her ryot has been deplorable. We have not heard of one serious effort during this decade to save him from the unscrupulous Tahsildar or to bring him within reach of health and competency. Lord Dufferin, who loves our princes and people alike as a father, has a golden opportunity presented to him of advising the Nizam to spend at least a portion of this sixty lakhs on sanitary and agricultural improvements. Twenty lakhs a year to the Government of India is like a drop in the ocean, while it may seriously cripple the resources of a State like Hyderabad. It would be another thing if those Native Princes, who had large reserves, were to unite in offering a lump sum once for all in view of the financial difficulties of the Government. But we are not sure if the Imperial Government would be wise in accepting even this combined offer of a crore or two. It is a cruel mistake to say that Native States in India enjoy the benefits of British protection for nothing, as it is a terrible certainty that whatever contributions the Princes make will be ultimately wrung out of the hapless ryots. This aspect of contributions from Native States, however voluntary and loyal, have often deterred Government from accepting them with that alacrity to which all spontaneous offerings would be otherwise entitled. In most such cases an offer is good in the making more than in the accepting.

The Late Disturbances in Bombay.—The Native Opinion says:—Not long ago there was a military row at Hyderabad, and we have just one in our very midst. The cause of the quarrel between the police and the military has yet to be investigated, and until that is not done we had better keep silence. But there is one thing which deserves consideration. The duties and the sphere of operation of the police and the military are quite different, and yet they often come to blows, when they ought to assist one another in keeping peace among men. This is rather inexplicable, and requires minute scrutiny. The military is conscious of his position, and being proud of it, is naturally inclined to be more offensive than other people, and the result may be easily imagined. It is this attitude of the soldier that requires stringent restraint, and for the very reason the frequency of their visits requires to be controlled. The non-issue of ammunition is no doubt a boon, but to render its utility more effectual a stronger restraint upon them is necessary. Nobody looks upon the soldier as a savage of the field; as a member of society he is as much entitled to associate with civilans as civilians themselves, but when quarrel and bloodshed are the result of such association restraint must only solve the difficulty.

OBITUARY.

SIR HENRY WILLIAM GORDON, K.C.B.

Sir Henry William Gordon, K C.B., died suddenly on Saturday afternoon at his residence, Oat Hall, Hayward's Heath, Sussex, after an illness of a few hours. He was a brother of General Gordon, the hero of Khartoum, being a son of the late Lieutenant-General H. W. Gordon, R.A., by Elizabeth Goodson, daughter of Mr. S. Enderby, of Croom's Hill, Blackheath. Sir Henry, who was born in 1818, was educated at Sandhurst, and entered the army in August, 1835. He served in the 59th Foot, and was employed on the staff in the East and West Indies and China, retiring from the army in 1855. CAPTAIN H. E. WALTER BEVILLE.

Captain H. E. Walter Beville, who was killed in the Chindwin district, Burma, on the 16th inst., while leading the attack against a large band of insurgents, was the son of Major-General Beville, C.B., of Burfield Hall, Wymondham, who served throughout the Rohilkund campaign in 1858, and the Abyssinian campaign, being present at the assault of Magdala. He entered the army at an early age, and had seen twelve years' service. He became a lieutenant in 1874, and had lately belonged to the 83rd Foot. Captain Beville had previously served in Scinde, and had joined the Burma Commission in March of this year. He acted as assistant magistrate in Rangoon, and had volunteered to serve in Upper Burma, and was posted at Chindwin. He also served with distinction in the Afghan war of 1879 and 1880, and was present at the engagements of Kelat-i-Ghilzai and Sir-i-Asp. For his services he received a medal, and was mentioned in despatches.

MR. J. A MACKINTOSH.

The Bombay papers regret to announce the death of Mr. J. A P. Mackintosh, the oldest established freight broker in Bombay, and senior partner in the firm of Messrs. James Mackintosh and Co. Mr. Mackintosh was much esteemed by all who knew him, more especially by the mercantile community of that city; and his death at a comparatively early age will be deeply regretted by all who came in contact with him, his uniform kindness and urbanity of manner rendering him exceedingly popular with all, both Europeans and Natives. Mr. Mackintosh went home in the Kaisar-i-Hind last March. He was then suffering from an acute attack of gout, which, with other complications, has terminated fatally. Out of respect to his memory, all the freight brokers suspended business and closed their offices for the day.

THE LATE SIR MAXWELL MELVILL.

The Bombay Government Gazette publishes the following despatch from the Secretary of State, in reference to the death of Sir Maxwell Melvill:—

"I have received your letter of the 9th ultimo, No. 10, reporting, in continuation of your Excellency's telegram of the 6th idem, the death from cholera on the 5th of August of Sir Maxwell Melvill, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., a Member of the Council of the Governor of Bombay.

2. My message of the 6th ultimo has informed your Excellency of the deep regret with which I received the intelligence of this event. I have now, in my own name, and in that of the Council of India, to convey to your Excellency in Council our entire concurrence in the record of the services rendered by the late Sir Maxwell Melvill, which you have notified in the extraordinary issue of the Bombay Government Gazette dated the 8th ultimo, and I have only to add that I agree with your Excellency in Council that, by his death, the Public Service has been deprived of a distinguished officer and a wise and valuable statesman.

It is notified that Mr. J. B. Richey, C.S.I., has been permanently appointed to fill the vacancy in the Governor's Council, caused by the death of Sir Maxwell Melvill.

THE CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.

The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of this bank was held on the 17th inst., at the offices, Old Broad-street.

Mr. J. N. Bullen, who presided, stated that the profit of the half-year, after providing for all bad and doubtful debts and all expenses of management, had been £52,527, which was a larger profit than they had made in any six months since the June half of 1884. Considering the excessive competition which now existed in Eastern Banking, and the difficulties of conducting exchange operations owing to the incessant fluctuations in the relative values of silver and gold, they would, he thought, regard the result of the half-year's working as satisfactory. There had been some reduction in their sterling deposits, which they had quite expected, owing to their having reduced the rate of interest. That falling off, however, had been made up by the increase in their deposits abroad. Their note circulation showed considerable expansion, although they had now no circulation in Ceylon, where the circulation was in the hands of the Colonial Government. There had been some change in the securities. The Colonial Bonds and the bonds of the Port Trust which they held on Dec. 31 had been realised, and they had also sold a portion of their Indian Sterling Loan. On the other hand, they had rather increased their hold in Indian railway stocks, which were really debentures, which fluctuated very much less than the sterling stocks, and were more desirable to hold. Their freehold banking premises stood at the same figure as before. Their premises upstairs were still unlet. The difficulty in letting them was their great height from the street level. People did not like to go up fifty steps, but they were now fitting a lift, and were led to believe that when it was in working order the rooms would be let. They had not abandoned the hope of selling their premises as a whole. The only other item he would refer to was the profit and loss account. Of the £53,962 net profit they had appropriated £18,750 to the payment of a dividend for the half-year at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, and they had carried forward the balance, which would be dealt with at the annual meeting, when, if all went right, they would be able to restore to the reserve fund a sum at least equal to that which they had to take from it on the last occasion. The motion, which was seconded by Mr. Richardson, who congratulated the meeting on the improved position of the bank, was put, and carried.

The meeting then resolved itself into an extraordinary meeting, and the Chairman stated that the original charter was granted for a term of twenty-one years from Sept. 15, 1857. It was subsequently renewed for ten years, and would expire on Sept. 15, 1888. Following recent precedents the treasury might require them to accept a model charter which would not affect their rights and privileges, and would leave them in substantially the position they were in now. It was also proposed to alter the provisions of the deed of settlement as to the notice required for calling general meetings. He moved that the directors be authorised to apply for and accept any renewal or supplemental charter, or any extension of the time for which the existing charter of the corporation is granted. Mr. Castellan said the Bank of Egypt and one of the Australian banks had registered themselves under the Limited Liability Act, and he asked if that would not be the simplest course to adopt. The Chairman stated that under the model charter the liability of the shareholders would be precisely what it now was, £25 a share. If they were to register under the Limited Liability Act their credit might possibly be affected; and difficulties might arise as to their note circulation, which was a very valuable portion of their privileges. Their charter was sufficiently wide for all their purposes, and under it the liability of the shareholder was practically limited. The resolution was then put, and agreed to, as was also another altering the provision of the deed of settlement as to the notice required for calling general meetings, so that the notice be not less than fourteen days instead of four months, as heretofore. The meeting was then brought to a close by a vote of thanks to the directors and the staff.

An extraordinary meeting of the bank will take place on Feb. 21 next, to confirm the above resolutions.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA

An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China was held on the 19th inst. at the City Terminus Hotel; Mr. William Paterson presiding. The chairman stated that during the half-year they had been going on satisfactorily on the whole, seeing that business had undergone little, if any, improvement. They would remember that when they last met a Royal Commission had been sitting on the vexed question of the currency, but owing to various causes when Parliament was prorogued the matter was left to another Session. The subject continued to be of importance to the bank, although, as the shareholders were aware, they had already provided for the depreciation in the sterling value of their silver assets. The matter still caused them, however, some anxiety, dollars and rupees being the coinage or currency which had to be constantly dealt with at their agencies. There were no accounts to submit on that occasion, but the directors had gone carefully through them, and they saw no reason whatever to anticipate that they would be otherwise than satisfactory when regularly balanced at the end of the year. He concluded by proposing the declaration of an interim dividend for the half-year, ended June 30, at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, payable on and after the 26th inst. Mr. Emile Levita seconded the motion, which was unanimously agreed to.

The Chairman afterwards proposed the election, as a director, of Mr. John Howard Gwyther, observing that that gentleman came before the shareholders more than sixteen years ago as chief manager, having previously filled important offices abroad and at home, and as they had always most cordially joined in acknowledging his zeal and ability in the conduct of the bank's affairs, he felt sure it would be supererogation in him to do more than ask them to confirm the election of Mr. Gwyther to a seat at the Board. Mr. Christian said he had much pleasure in seconding the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. Gwyther thanked the shareholders cordially for thus endorsing the directors' action, which he considered a very sympathetic one. He hoped that if he had given any satisfaction in his individual capacity as manager he would not less deserve their praise in his now dual position.

A cordial vote of thanks to the chairman and directors was then passed, and, at the instance of the Chairman, was extended also to the officers of the bank, both at home and abroad, whom he characterised as a valuable staff, having done its duty in a remarkable way in troublous times, and therefore well deserving the thanks accorded them.

Mr. Gwyther acknowledged the vote of thanks on behalf of the staff, and the proceedings then terminated.

THE P. AND O. STEAMSHIP BRITANNIA.

The new steamship Britannia, of 6,500 tons and 7,000-horse power, constructed by Messrs. Caird and Company, of Greenock, for the P. and O. Company, made her official trial trip on the Clyde on the 14th inst. The mean speed of six hours' continuous steaming under unfavourable conditions of weather was 16¼ knots an hour. The Britannia is the second of the large steamers recently added to the P. and O. Company's fleet, and selected by the Admiralty to be placed on the list of armed cruisers. She is appointed to sail for Australia direct on Nov. 4. The Britannia is a sister ship to the Victoria, and has been constructed by Messrs. Caird and Co. in the short period of ten months. Her dimensions are:—Length on load water line, 465 feet 9 inches; breadth (moulded), 52 feet; depth, 37 feet; and gross tonnage, 6,267 tons. She is supplied with powerful engines on the triple expansion principle, with all the latest improvements, developing about 7,000-horse power (indicated). The diameters of cylinders are 40, 60, and 100 inches respectively, the length of stroke being 6 feet in each. The engines of this vessel are guaranteed to give her an ocean speed of over 14 knots per hour, and burning 110 tons net of coal per diem. The boilers are six in number (double-ended, and constructed entirely of steel), having 36 furnaces, being adapted for a proof pressure of 300 lbs. per square inch. She has besides a three-furnaced auxiliary boiler for general purposes. Her water tanks, structurally built in compartments, are designed for safety and for adjusting the trim of the vessel under varying conditions of loading or when passing over a bar. Being a large freight carrier, she is equipped with all modern appliances for loading and discharge of cargo, including several hydraulic hoists and cranes by Sir William Armstrong and Co. With regard to her passenger accommodation, she is designed to carry 154 first-class saloon passengers, 156 second-class saloon, and 460 third-class passengers. Every attention has been paid to the ventilation; and in this vessel a mechanical system has been adopted by which fresh air is forced through the ship and the vitiated air extracted. The ship will be lighted throughout by electricity, for which purpose she has two engines distinct from other work, and duplicate dynamos, furnishing power for 500 incandescent lights. Arrangements are made for the carriage of a very large supply of fresh water, in addition to which the vessel carries two Normandy's condensers. There is plenty of bath accommodation and other effective sanitary arrangements. Every provision has been made to ensure the safety of the passengers, crew, and ship. The arrangement of boats is ample to meet all requirements. The structural designs and general arrangements of the vessel have passed the Director of Naval Construction, and her name has accordingly been placed on the Admiralty list for employment in case of need as a fast cruiser. In that connection she could carry 1,200 soldiers, and, in case of national necessity, she could accommodate on her main and lower decks 2,700 men. It may be mentioned that the vessel is also fitted with one 70,000 cubic feet per hour delivery compound duplicate refrigerating machine, weighing 60 tons, supplied by the Haslam Foundry and Engineering Company, Derby.

THE REAY PAPER MILL.

POONA, OCT. 5.

A paper mill, which bears the name of Lord Reay, was opened this evening with ceremony by his Excellency the Governor. His Excellency was accompanied by Lady Reay, and a distinguished company of Europeans and Natives of both sexes was present on the occasion. Their Excellencies were shown over the mill by Khan Bahadoor Dorabjee Padamji, one of the directors. Having seen the various processes which rags undergo before they are turned into paper, the company adjourned to a shed erected in the vicinity, where Mr. Nowrojee Padamjee delivered an address, giving the history of the mill.

It appeared from the directors' address that the first conception of the undertaking was due to the Government of India's resolution issued five years ago, expressing readiness to encourage private enterprise in the production of paper in this country. A beginning was made after the promoters had been satisfied from careful inquiries that the mill would succeed if established on a sufficiently grand scale. The capital consists of five lakhs, divided into shares of Rs. 500 each. Great care has been taken in the selection of machinery, which has been purchased from different manufacturers, who have made particular branches of paper machinery their specialties. The selection was made by Mr. Nowrojee Pudumjee, one of the principal promoters of the mill, who had gone to Europe at the directors' request to acquaint himself with the working of paper mills in England and on the Continent. The directors acknowledge with feelings of heartfelt gratitude the generous and liberal spirit in which the Bombay Government has from the beginning taken up the proposal of the Supreme Government, and they further express themselves deeply indebted to the Government for the assurance given of readiness to enter into a contract for five years for the purchase of paper turned out by the mill. The directors are negociating for the construction of a railway station near the mill, which they are confident would be beneficial alike to the Railway Company and to those interested in the new enterprise. It is stated that the traffic in raw materials and coal consumed by the mill and in produce sent out will come to about twenty-five tons per day. The address concluded by thanking Lord Reay for consenting to perform the opening ceremony. The address was printed on paper made in the mill, and is a very fair specimen, though as the labourers get experience of their work paper of much superior quality will no doubt be produced.

The Governor then made a long speech, dwelling upon the importance to India of technical institutions, and commending on the care and caution displayed by the promoters of the mill in accomplishing their object. His Excellency complimented the directors on what he called a most important new departure in this part of the Presidency, the number of men engaged in developing the resources of India and in increasing its prosperity was extremely limited both in the agricultural and industrial departments. His Excellency wished the number of such men, who were worthy of all esteem and praise, to increase largely. He was glad to see Poona was becoming more and more deserving of being called an industrial city. His Excellency concluded with the hope that every one present would earnestly pray God to bless the undertaking begun that day.

The speech was very cordially received, and the company dispersed after having partaken of refreshments.

ARRIVAL OF THE TROOPSHIP "CROCODILE."

Her Majesty's troopship Crocodile, 4,173 tons, Captain Richard Evans, arrived in harbour on Wednesday, at noon, from Portsmouth, which she left on Sept. 7, calling at Queenstown on Sept. 9, and Suez on Sept. 23, with drafts, consisting of 129 men of the 1st Worcester, 103 men of the 1st North Lancashire, 106 men of the 2nd Somerset L.I., 118 men of 2nd Norfolk, and other details, the whole draft consisting of 49 officers, 18 ladies, 7 children, 1,081 men, 35 women, and 45 children. LAST year a trial was made at the Nagpore Experimental Farm of preparing cotton seed for sowing by the use of sulphuric acid, as is often done in America. About two ounces of the acid are used to a pound of cotton seed, and the woolly fibres adhering to the seed are thus dissolved away, after which the seed is immersed in lime water to neutralise the acid. Another advantage of soaking the seed in the lime water is that the worthless seed floats to the top and the sound ones are sent to the bottom. Four experiments were tried, two of which the seeds had been prepared with acid, and in the other in the ordinary way, while two of the plots were manured, and to the others no manure was applied. The result was in the manured plots largely in favour of the seeds treated with acid, but in the other two plots, those prepared in the ordinary way had the advantage. The experiment, however, seems to be likely to prove of very little use, as the Director of Agriculture admits that the cost of sulphuric acid and the difficulty of procuring it would place it beyond the reach of the ordinary rayat.

"THE gloriously amateur character of Indian racing," writes an up-country paper, "has been well brought out at Dehra. Two events had been disposed of, when the third unfortunately happened to result in a very close finish, so close that it appeared to be a dead-heat. Of course there was a rush to hear the decision of the Judge, and then, and only then, it was discovered that that important office had been left unfilled. The result was naturally chaos, and a reference to the Stewards, who no doubt in due course will pass the case on to Calcutta. The Indian turf in its present condition appears to exist for the purpose of affording the maximum of squabbles and scandals with the minimum of sport. One would be not prepared to say (vide to-day's telegrams) that unpleasantnesses as great do not appear elsewhere, but the wonder about the Indian turf is that it manages to rival them with such scant materials. Besides, it is one thing to read that Sykes or Marwood has pulled a horse, and another to hear Colonel So-and-So of the Staff has succumbed to the same temptation for Rs. 200 and a half of the lottery, or that Raja Goolab Sing, of the Viceroy's Council, has been caught entering a horse for a selling race under an inaccurate description."

EARLY MARRIAGE.—Agitation has been going on against early marriage for about twenty-five years. Has any one considered the state of Hindu society during the period? Is the marriageable age of boys and girls increasing or decreasing? Are the boys and girls now married at the same early age as before? In the house of orthodox Hindu unmarried girls of the age of eleven and twelve are to be found and unmarried girls of the age of thirteen and fourteen are generally to be found in the houses of educated Babus. This proves that Hindu society is practically going against early marriage. If so much has been done in the last twenty five years, can we not expect more in the next twenty-five years? But we entertain grave doubts whether Hindu society will ever adopt the marriage custom of the Europeans.—The Suravi and Pataka.

THE Review by the Government of India on the Jails Administration will this year comprise the reports of all the local Governments, so that the Review will be the most comprehensive on the subject that has been yet attempted.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.*

Professor Terrien de Lacouperie, who, in a recent issue of the Journal, gave some very noteworthy "Notes" on Formosa, opens the present number with a few remarks on the Stone-men of Corea, a country "which was till lately the last but one of the 'Forbidden Lands.'" These Miryeks, of one of which an illustration faces p. 553, "are huge half-length human figures carved in stone, and looked on as relics of a religion of former times." The average height of these singular remains is about twenty-five feet, but that figured in the illustration referred to approaches the dimensions of the Colossus of Rhodes, being, though but half-length, more than sixty feet in height. The learned writer assigns reasons (especially the presence of the or urnæ mark between the eyebrows, "one of the thirty-two lakchanas or characteristic physiological marks by which every Buddha may be recognised") for assigning to these statues a Buddhist origin.

In a paper on "The First Mandala of the Rig-Veda," Mr. Frederic Pincott makes public some discoveries, which his singular faculty of solving linguistic and antiquarian difficulties has enabled him to make respecting it. He had previously shown that while the other Mandalas have the hymns arranged in the order of their diminishing length, the First Mandala, differing from them, had a special arrangement of its own. The thesis which Mr. Pincott sets himself to prove is, that this First Mandala did not differ from the others without good cause, it being, in point of fact, "an orderly ritual. To make this clear," he says, "I will first indicate the influence under which the Sanhitâ was arranged; next, I will show that the first Mandala is, in a way, eclectic; thirdly, I will point out unmistakable evidence of orderly arrangement; and, lastly, I will adduce some proof of its ritualistic character." We will refer our readers to this essay, the most remarkable paper in the number, for the detailed observations in which Mr. Pincott supports, and, to our thinking establishes, the above somewhat startling conclusions. It may suffice here to say that the 191 hymns of this Mandala are arranged in equal numbers before and after the hymn of Kasyapa and the Five Rishis, which, offering the libation of the Soma, formed the culminating point of the ceremonial of which the entire Mandala forms the liturgy or ritual.

Many readers will be much struck by the Babylonian Chronicle, of which Mr. T. G. Pinches (at p. 655) lays before us, first a facsimile, then a "decypher," and, finally, a translation, of a tablet in the British Museum, recounting the events of Babylonian history for many years previously to the murder of Sennacherib, and the accession of Esarhaddon (2 Kings xix. 37, Isaiah, xxxvii. 38), which events it includes. It bristles with names familiar to every reader of Scripture.

"The Origin and Development of the Cuneiform Syllabary," a matter which has exercised all Assyriologists, finds an exponent no less competent than, as we gladly acknowledge, lucid, in Mr. G. Bertin, whose paper is a welcome contribution to the literature of the subject, while the identity of Zenobia with Zebbain is investigated by Mr. Redhouse, who pronounces against it.

We note with satisfaction that the Committee appointed by the R.A.S. have brought prominently to the front the unaccountable paucity of English workers in the illimitable field of Oriental literature. It is no credit to us, the owners of a vast Oriental Empire, that (p. 716) "of twenty-nine English translations of the 'Sacred Books of the East' issued from the Clarendon Press, fourteen are by German scholars." The translation of Al-Beruni, too, paid for by the Indian Government, was by a German. While no less than twenty (and among them some of the most important of the few posts open to Oriental scholars) are held by foreigners. The harvest truly is plenteous; would that the British reapers were more numerous!

A DIGEST OF MUHAMMADAN LAW.†

When the Prophet of Arabia passed from the scene of his earthly triumphs, the Muslim world was rent in twain with a dispute as to the succession. On one side were the Sunnis, who accepted the Khalifat of Bakr, Omar and Othman; on the other the Shi'ahs, who ignore them as usurpers, and regard Ali, the son-in-law of Muhammad, as the first Imam. Then followed Hasan, Husain, and Zainu'l Abidin, on whose death a further schism took place, some being partizans of the son by name Zaid, others acknowledging Muhammad Bakir, another of his sons, as fifth Imam. Next on the list was Ja'far Sadiq. These two latter are the great heads of the Imamiah School of Law.

The volume which Mr. Neil Baillie has given to the world, and of which a new edition has just appeared, is "intended to exhibit the doctrines of the Shi'ah sect, or the most important of the subjects to which the Muhammadan law is applied by British Courts of Justice in India." It is, of course, entirely a work of reference, and has for many years been a standard authority on the vexed questions which come up for decision at every turn. Its value is derived chiefly, if not solely, from its accuracy, and this remains unimpeachable. We cordially welcome this reprint of a work which has done good service in its day, and is likely to hold its own in the domain of utility so long as India continues an appanage of the Crown of England.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"Other Suns than Ours," by Richard A. Proctor (W. H. Allen and Co.); "The Gnostics and their Remains," by C. W. King (David Nutt).

THE Central India Times publishes an account of a serious riot at Ujjain, Gwalior territory, between Hindoos and Mahomedans on Dussera day, in which about five Mahomedans were killed and several wounded.

MR. JAMES ARCHER, of the Royal Scottish Academy, who is in Simla, has, it is said, been commissioned to paint the memorial portrait of the late Sir Charles MacGregor. Mr. Archer is also designing the obverse of the MacGregor Medal.

PETROLEUM IN BILUCHISTAN.—The Bombay Gazette says that in another fortnight the deep borings for mineral oil at Kattan, in Biluchistan, some fifty miles from Sibi, which were determined upon some time since by the Government of India, will be begun by Mr. Townsend. The commencement of the work has been delayed through the great drought which has prevailed in that part of the country; but the machinery is now in place, and the deep boring was to have been begun at once. The indications already obtained by moderate borings shows that at a depth which is now attainable of two thousand five hundred feet an annual yield of fifty thousand barrels of oil can be obtained when once the live oil has been reached.

MOST people are familiar with the dried fruits which are sold all over India by Kabulis, but few can be aware of the enormous aggregate of such fruits which find their way to our markets through the Punjab and Sindh, and by the Persian Gulf. A published return shows the imports into the Punjab alone, last year, to have been nearly 166,000 maunds, which represented a value of more than eleven and a-half laks of rupees. Our principal export into Afghanistan is wheat, the trade in which has gone up very rapidly. The figures of the last three years for the two provinces of Kabul and Sewestan only, are Rs. 39,617, Rs. 1,27,877, and Rs. 2,07,463.

AN "Uncovenanted" correspondent, touching upon the question of Service Pensions to his class, writes as follows to the Pioneer:—Much has been written and more has been said on the question of payment of the pensions of Uncovenanted servants in sterling, but I have not seen a single practical proposal—that the Government may be reasonably expected to consider—put forward. To imagine that Government, merely to stop the agitation that is now going on, would agree to pay the pensions of those Uncovenanted servants who, for their own convenience may settle in England or in the Colonies, at a sterling rate, is manifestly absurd, and may be rejected altogether; as by doing so, the action would constitute gross injustice to the large majority of Uncovenanted servants who settle in the country and draw their pensions in rupees. That Covenanted servants receive pensions in sterling is no analogy, because those gentlemen practically contribute towards the greater part of their retiring allowances by subjecting themselves to monthly deductions from salaries. Does the Uncovenanted servant during his term of service contribute a single rupee towards his pension? He does not, and the amount he gets comes solely from the pockets of Government; so that in reality he is indefinitely better off with his rupee pension than the Covenanted Civilian with his sterling pension. But there is another side to the question. The Uncovenanted servant who, from circumstances rather than choice, is obliged to settle in England must feel the fall of the rupee considerably, and in his case the payment of pension in sterling would be a real boon for many reasons. To meet such cases the simplest course would be for Government to extend the principle of monthly deductions from salary that has worked so well in the Covenanted Service to those members of the Uncovenanted Service who desire to draw their pensions in sterling. What the monthly deductions from salary should be I leave to the experts of the Financial Department to determine, but the principle of deduction seems to be sound and fair to all concerned. The amount so recovered during term of service will hardly be felt by those making the contribution; and while, on the one hand, it will secure the Government from loss in exchange, it will, on the other, stop discontent on the part of the majority of Uncovenanted servants who settle in the country and receive their pensions in Indian currency. If the Government of India would consider this matter from the point of view I have indicated, I have no doubt that we will soon see our way to the solution of a question that has occupied public attention for some considerable time.

WHO MAKES HISTORY?

WHEN Mr. Dick, in David Copperfield, puzzled about an historical question regarding the head of King Charles, which was always getting into his petition, asks, "Does history never lie?" David replied, indignantly, "Never!" but added in his autobiography, "I was young and ingenuous, and thought so then." And, indeed, we fear that the lies of history would vastly exceed in number its facts. Lord Bryon wrote,—

> "I've stood upon Achilles' tomb,
> And heard Troy doubted;"

but his lordship might have stood on spots of much more recent interest, and heard historic doubts. The late Archbishop Whateley published once a very amusing tract under that heading, giving logical and historical reasons, showing that no such individual as Napoleon Bonaparte had ever existed. But other tracts and books of a more serious character have been written to disabuse the public mind of doings and sayings which only yesterday had been universally accepted as incontrovertible truths and facts. We have been told that the famous signal which England since the battle of Trafalgar has believed as part of the story, "England expects every man to do his duty," was never made by Nelson at all, but that the order was, "Swab your lower decks," or something of that sort. Then, again, the Duke's cry at Waterloo, "Up, Guards, and at them!" is now said to have been a fiction, although the great Captain did not deny that he might have used some such expression, only he pleaded that he had not so much trouble in winning the battle as he had in afterwards answering questions about it.

The latest contribution to historic doubts concerns India, and sprung up, we are sorry to say, from a social gathering. At the Lucknow dinner General Macleod Innes, or General Olpherts, dropped some remarks as to an opinion, which had been expressed elsewhere, as to whether the garrison could have held out longer had not Havelock and Outram come to their relief. It seems that this opinion had been expressed some years ago at a discussion at the United Service Institution at Simla, and that the utterer of it was Sir Donald Stewart, the then Commander-in-Chief. It appears to have been interpreted as a slur cast upon the relieving force, making light of their splendid efforts. Sir Donald Stewart has endeavoured to explain that to attach such a meaning to his words was absurd; but soldiers are naturally jealous of their honour, and consequently a somewhat painful controversy has arisen in the columns of a military contemporary. It is greatly to be regretted that such a question should have arisen, especially now, when the survivors of the defence and of the relief are wearing distinctions of which they may well be proud in recognition of their heroic exertions, and when the dead are sleeping in honoured graves. The time was out of joint surely for raising controvery on such a subject. But as it has been raised General Innes's own assertion may be accepted as the correct one, viz, that the beleagured defenders were in dire extremes. His splendid despatch, which the late Charles Dickens said was one of the most affecting documents he had ever read, told the tale of that thrilling time in words of eloquence which moistened many an eye, and made many an Englishman's heart beat quicker. The relief was a splendid achievement, too, carrying undying honour to those who made it. Why should brave men question each other of their brave deeds which their countrymen have accepted as part of the glory of England?

THE Queen has been pleased to approve the appointment of Sir Alexander J. Arbuthnot, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., to be a member of the Council of India, on the expiration of the term of office of Sir Robert Dalyell, K.C.I.E., C.S.I.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The appointment of Major-General S. de B. Edwardes, C.B., Bombay Infantry, to the divisional staff of the Bombay Army, in succession to Major General A. Carnegy, is gazetted.

Lieutenant Arthur Campbell Yate, having completed eleven years' service, has been promoted to a captaincy.

Lieutenant William Loraine Conran, 1st Royal Irish Fusiliers, Officiating Wing Officer, 23rd Bombay Infantry, having completed his period of probation, has been admitted to the Staff Corps.

Private William Mathews, of the 4th Battalion King's Royal Rifle Corps, was tried by Court-Martial at Peshawar, and found guilty of murdering Aumed Gul, a camel driver, when on the line of march between Sealkote and Chappri. The Court recommended him to mercy on the ground that they consider him a man of weak intellect. This sentence was sent back for revision, when the Court found that he was guilty, but was insane at the time of the commission of the offence. This last finding has been confirmed by the Commander-in-Chief.

Sergeant D. P. Sunderland, a clerk in the office of the Military Secretary to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief at Simla, has been appointed to a commission in the 6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers) at Sealkote.

Orders have been issued for the withdrawal of the 25th Bombay Light Infantry from Burma, and for the 27th Beluch Light Infantry to remain.

The rumoured resignation of Lieutenant-Colonel Hay, Assistant Secretary in the Military Department, is contradicted.

Captain R. L. Milne, 2nd Battalion Liverpool Regiment, Deputy Assistant Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, 2nd Brigade, Upper Burma Field Force, has vacated his appointment on proceeding on sick leave to Australia, and been succeeded by Major Hilliard of the King's Own Light Infantry.

Under instructions from Army Head-quarters, Bombay, Lieutenant-Colonel Pemberton, 25th Bombay Light Infantry, on being relieved from the command of that Corps by Lieutenant-Colonel Tandy, will proceed to Bombay, and report his arrival to the Adjutant-General, Bombay Army.

The 1st Battalion (King's Own) Yorkshire Light Infantry will embark on the Clive at Rangoon on Nov. 4th for Calcutta, en route home by the troopship leaving Bombay on Nov. 25th.

The 2nd Battalion East Yorkshire Regiment will relieve the 2nd Battalion North Staffordshire Regiment at Aden next trooping season, and will proceed home in the following year.

Lieutenant Dyas, Hampshire Regiment, attached to the Intelligence Branch, Burma, has been permitted on medical grounds to return to India and rejoin his battalion at Secunderabad.

Surgeon W. B. Day, M.B., M.S., has been appointed to the medical charge of the Brigade Staff, 4th Brigade, Burma Field Force.

A wound gratuity of one year's full pay of his regimental rank has been granted to Lieut. H. W. Mercer, of the 26th Madras Infantry, on account of wounds received in action in Burma. There was a difference of opinion between the President and Members of the Board whith sat upon Lieut. Mercer as to the gravity of his wound—the members considering the wound very severe and almost equivalent to the loss of a limb, while the President did not think so. The Surgeon-General H.M.'s Forces and the Commander-in-Chief agreed with the members, and commended the grant of a pension temporarily for one year, rerenewable from year to year according to subsequent medical reports. Government have accordingly sanctioned, in the first instance, a gratuity of one year's full pay of his regimental rank, viz., 5s. 6d. a day. On the expiration of a year from the date of the wound, Lieut. Mercer will be examined by a medical Board at the India Office, in view to his claim to further gratuity or pension being determined.

The following postings are ordered:—To 1st Battalion: Captain J. H. E. Reid, King's Own Scottish Borderers; Second Lieutenant F. L. V. Jenkins, Royal Irish Fusiliers; and Captain E. T. C. Bower, Oxfordshire Light Infantry. To 2nd Battalion: Captain J. W. Godfrey, King's Own Scottish Borderers.

The rainy season, which is now drawing to a close in Burma, has been a much less unhealthy one for the troops than its predecessor, but the horses have apparently fared rather worse than better. Out of the four Cavalry regiments now in the country, three at least have suffered wofully. The 7th Bengal Cavalry has lost fully 160 horses and have surra in their lines at the present moment, so that they will require all the remounts they can get from India to be thoroughly fit for work through the cold weather. The 1st Bombay Lancers have lost, we believe, about seventy horses, and are now attacked with anthrax; while the 3rd Hyderabad Contingent have not only buried close on 240, but have nearly 100 more down with kumri. Evidently in their case the relief will not come too soon.

Major A. L. Lane, R.A., has been ordered to proceed to the Cape of Good Hope to join the battery into which he has been promoted.

Captains C. E. Goulburn and J. R. B. Davidson, R.A., proceed home on pr motion.

The 16th Bengal Cavalry will join the Lawrencepur Camp instead of the 1st, who have to furnish an escort for the Viceroy in his trip up the Khyber. Colonel Warter will command the artillery at the camp, the original idea of the senior officer on the spot being given the command having been reconsidered. The other staff officers will be Lieutenant-Colonel Wardrop, Assistant Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, and Captain Anstruther Thompson, 17th Lancers, Captain Wood, 10th Bengal Lancers, and Captain Beatson, 11th Bengal Lancers, as brigade majors.

A question having been raised whether a medical warrant officer should be promoted to a higher grade after he has been invalided by a Medical Board, and while awaiting the orders of Government transferring him to the pension list, the Government of India have ruled that if a man is declared physically unfit for further service, he should be considered disqualified for further promotion. It is thought unnecessary to make any alteration in the existing regulations, as it will probably be sufficient if Medical Boards are instructed that, before finally invaliding a Medical subordinate, some discretion should be used in regard to the circumstances of the man's length of service qualifying him for promotion to the next higher grade. The case which gave rise to this decision occurred in Bombay, where a Second Grade Apothecary of the Subordinate Medical Department was ordered to appear before a Medical Board, but before the Board sat upon him, he obtained, in due course, his promotion to a First Grade Apothecary. The question then arose as to whether he was entitled to the pay of his new rank from the date of the order directing him to appear before the Board. The Government of India have held that he was entitled to the pay of a First Grade Apothecary from that date and the pension of that grade, as his promotion took place when he was still on the effective list.

The 2nd Battalion Cheshire Regiment embarks at Calcutta on the 26th October for Burma, in relief of the 1st Battalion (King's Own) Yorkshire Light Infantry, and will remain there until 1888 89, when the battalion proceeds home. An Indian depôt will be left at Umballa.

The 1st Battalion (King's Own) Yorkshire Light Infantry will concentrate at Mandalay on the 23rd October, and will embark for Rangoon on the 26th October, arriving there on the 3rd November, and will leave in the Clive on the 4th November, for Calcutta en route to England, embarking at Bombay on the 25th idem.

Officers commanding Native regiments in the Poona division have been authorised to call up the Active Reserve men for training in the months of January and February, as may be most convenient.

Colonel Lance, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, will be President of the Remount Purchasing Committee for the Punjab this winter.

The Secretariat of the Military Department Government of India is undergoing a rapid change in its personnel. Colonel Newmarch, Secretary, does not return; Colonel Crookshank has already left to take up the command of a regiment; Major Deane is to officiate for Colonel Ben Williams as Director of Army Remount Operations; and Lieut.-Colonel Hay retires from the service at the end of the year. About the same time, too, Major J. Robertson, C.I.E., will also retire on pension.

1st Bengal Cavalry.—Colonel R. Morris, Squadron Commander, to be Commandant, vice Colonel Chapman, vacated; and Major F. C. Burton, Squadron Commander, to move up in grade succession.

7th Bengal Cavalry.—Lieutenant-Colonel E. Hay, to be Second in Command, vice Colonel J. L. Ferris, and to remain seconded while employed in the Military Department; Major E. W. Pollock, Squadron officer 8th Bengal Cavalry, to be Squadron Commander, vice Captain Renny; and Captain W. C. Pollard, Squadron Officer, to be Squadron Commander.

THE CRY OF THE CHILDREN-WIDOWS.

God made the light, and gave us eyes to see,
Our fathers' brothers fain would have us blind.
No movement of our bodies that is free:
No fetters like our bondage of the mind.

Outcast from every joy of love and life,
How can she know what love or life doth mean,
The widowed maiden who was never wife—
From seven to seventy years a thing unclean?

Unclean! Because her innocence is clear
As sun and moon, the child who was the light
Of home, and by all ties of nature dear,
Is stricken by a strange demoniac blight.

Inhuman, fathered by no creed or law
But cruel custom. "O it must not be"
We cry in vain, and tears of pity draw
From alien races over land and sea.

Saved from the funeral pyre that was our doom
Sadly the thought of that release we keep;
For Death were mercy to the living tomb
Our kindred build around us while we weep.

Is there no hope of succour, strong right arm
And heart of England? Hear us, widowed Queen!
O brothers of our blood, who guard from harm
The snake that kills, and hurtful things unseen.

Slay not by inches those ye once held dear:
Your hearts are ours—if only they had eyes.
Now slowly dawns the day, a change is near.
Brave souls who best can help, arise, arise.

INDIAN TEAS.

Dealers in Indian Teas are doing a large business, and the heavy auctions have passed with rather better spirit, previous rates being generally maintained, whilst attractive liquoring B. Pekoes sell readily, with occasional improvement in price, and P. S. with good quality mark in some cases a fractional advance. Pekoes 9d. to 1s. 2d., although cheap, continue neglected. Assams are mostly of useful quality, and meet with a fair reception, Teas for appearance excepted. P. com. to ord., 9d. to 11½d., good to fine, 1s. to 1s. 8½d. P. S. and S., 7½d. to 8½d.; good to fine, 9½d. to 1s. 0½d., finest 1s. 1½d., finest B.O.P. 2s. 7½d. Cachars and Sylhets are in better request generally, the quality of the former showing some improvement. P. com. to ord. 7½d. to 9½d., good to fine 11½d. to 1s. 5d. P. S. and S., com. to ord., 6d. to 7½d.; good to fine, 9d. to 11½d., finest, B.O.P. 2s. 3½d. Darjeelings and Terais: The former are plentiful, and ordinary qualities cheap, the scarcity of Ceylons having directed attention to them. P., com. to ord., 7d. to 9½d., good to fine, 11d. to 1s. 5½d. P. S. and S., com. to ord. 7d. to 8½d., good to fine, 9½d. to 1s., finest B.O.P. 2s. 2½d. Dooars: Rather better supplies and improved quality. Fine kinds scarce.

As regards Indian Tea continued heavy supplies have met with a fair reception; the earlier sales of the week passed somewhat flatly, but at to-day's auctions bidding was spirited and previous rates generally maintained. Continued irregularity in medium and Fine Pekoes and Broken Pekoes, although the latter are in better request, and an occasional fractional decline on Pekoes 9d. to 1s., and the less attractive Pekoe Souchongs are the only noteworthy features. Assams: Full supplies and satisfactory quality generally, although with an occasional downward tendency. Finest scarce. P. com. to ord. 8½d. to 10½d., good to fine 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 5d., finest 1s. 6⅝d. P. S. com. to ord. 6½d. to 7½d., good to fine 8d. to 11d., finest B. O. P. 2s. 5½d. S. com. to ord. 6½d. to 7½d., good 8d. to 10d., finest B. P. 2s. 1⅝d. Darjeeling and Terais: The latter generally poor in quality, and Darjeelings, a mixed assortment, few choice invoices brought strong competition. P. com. and ord. 8d. to 9½d., good and fine 11d. to 1s. 8½d. P. S. com. and ord. 7½d. to 8½d., good 11d. A fine invoice from Margaret's Hope Estate brought P. 1s. 7½d., O. P. 2s. 0½d., B. P. 2s. 5½d., P. S. 1s. 2d., P. F. 1s. 3½d. Arrivals: Sutlej 3,200, C. of Calcutta 19,900, Horne Head 17,500 packages.

BROAD ARROW

AND

Every Saturday. Price Sixpence.

'The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette' has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

INDIA.

HERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate: that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. Norman Shaw, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

Hon. Curate of Holy Trinity, Milton-next-Gravesend; Medallist of the Roman University de Propaganda Fide; First Class Honour Man in Arabic, Syriac, and Hebrew; and Proxime Accessit in Classics. Formerly First Class Interpreter to the Allied Forces in the Crimea; K.C. of the Order of the Medjidie, &c., &c.; Author of the "Levant Interpreter" and the "Egyptian Handbook"; and Reviser of the Arabic Prayer Book, &c., &c.

"Dr. Tien's little book will be found a valuable guide to the traveller who wishes not so much to talk as to understand what he hears spoken and sees written in common Arabic. In the course of a hundred pages a clever summary is provided of Arabic grammar, which will be found sufficient for all ordinary purposes, and which may easily be made the subject of further instruction from the native teacher."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"The most useful portion of the book consists of the dialogues, the idiomatic exercises, the vocabulary, and other additions of practical usefulness, such as lists of official titles, of tribal names, and information on the divisions of time, on weights and measures, currency, and commercial, legal, and political terms."—ATHENÆUM.

"The perusal of Dr. Tien's admirable work will be of the greatest value to officers and others under orders for the East."—MORNING POST.

"Will be found very useful by soldiers, officials, students, and merchants desirous of obtaining a certain degree of proficiency in the spoken language, which is becoming in these days of increasing importance."—DAILY NEWS.

"Dr. Tien's Manual can be confidently recommended as the most simple, practical, and trustworthy guide which has yet appeared."—OVERLAND MAIL.

"The rules and explanations are clear, terse, and to the point, and we cordially recommend his book to all who wish to acquire a conversational knowledge of Arabic." TRUBNER'S RECORD.

"The book is of a handy and convenient size, and both author and publishers have rendered important service in placing it within reach of students."—INDIAN DAILY NEWS.

"The author of the volume before us has done good service in compiling this Manual, in which the difficulties—and, it must be confessed, they are not a few—in mastering Arabic are reduced to a minimum."—BROAD ARROW.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This caution is necessary, as many persons suffer purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Cholera & Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best; and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. Kaye, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scene from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 14th October; from Allahabad and Madras to the 12th October; and from Calcutta to the 11th October.

THE VICEROY at the date of the mail leaving had gone to Mushobra for a week or ten days' rest, previous to the official departure from Simla.

HIS EXCELLENCY will hold levées at Quetta and Karachi on the 6th and 11th November respectively, and at Lahore on December 3rd.

THE Viceregal escort to the Khyber will consist of the 1st Bengal Cavalry from Peshawur to Jamrud, whence the Guides Cavalry and two companies of Infantry will take the party on to Ali Musjid and Lundi Kotal.

THE Bengal Government have published a resolution regarding the foundering of the Sir John Lawrence, in which it is stated that the actual cause which led to the disaster was the rashness of the commander in taking the vessel into a cyclone in spite of the clearest indications of danger.

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, has just made a short tour of inspection.

THE Bombay Government has again pressed on the Government of India the urgent necessity there is for some legal enactment regarding land within cantonment limits.

THE Bombay Legislative Council have passed the Gambling Act Amendment Bill and the Public Conveyance Act Amendment Bill.

THE police Sepoy who was recently assaulted by some men belonging to the 17th Native Infantry has died from his injuries.

THE Excise Revenue in Upper Burma during 1886-87 was Rs. 1,86,637 (or 7·68 per cent.) more than in 1885-86.

THOUGH there was an increase in the revenue there was a decrease in drunkenness.

THE Bengal Presidency Rifle Meeting will be held this year between the 1st and 10th of December, the centres being Rawul Pindi, Meean Meer, Meerut, and Lucknow.

AN increase of fifty has been made in the numbers of the second class of the Order of British India for the Native army.

H.M.S. Ranger has arrived in Bombay from the Persian Gulf, for the purpose of paying off her crew and being re-commissioned.

A REVIEW on the jail reports for the year 1886 shows that there were 748 jails and lock-ups in British India in that year, with 364,934 prisoners of all classes, an increase of 13,969 over the previous year.

THE net cost of the jail department to Government was Rs.36,08,672.

THE total number of deaths from cholera in the North-West Provinces during the month of August was 30,780, as against 41,000 in the previous month.

A RESOLUTION is to be issued shortly giving the results of the final detailed surveys for the Umballa-Kalka Railway.

IT has been decided that the Public Service Commission shall reassemble in Calcutta and not Allahabad, the first meeting being held on November 15th.

RAO BAHADUR SETT PREMABHOY HEMABHOY, a late member of the Bombay Legislative Council, died at Ahmedabad on the 10th inst.

MR. D. W. CAMPBELL has been appointed Agent of the East Indian Railway in the place of Sir Bradford Leslie, retired.

THE Macgregor medal, which Mr. Archer is designing, will display on the obverse a group of sepoys and a Highlander, and on the reverse a profile head of Sir Charles Macgregor. The medal will be one inch and a half in diameter.

HIS Highness the Maharaja Kishore Sing, Commander-in-Chief of the Jodhpore army, has subscribed five hundred rupees towards the Macgregor Memorial Fund, and has offered to place an oil painting of the late General in the United Service Institution at Simla.

THE making of deep borings has been sanctioned by the Government of India to test the full capacity of the petroleum fields near Sibi.

THE ship Earl of Jersey, bound from Chittagong to London, with a cargo of jute, has been wrecked near the former port.

THE Commander-in-Chief is now at Chakrata, on the way to Mussoorie.

GENERAL CHAPMAN, Q.M.G., and General Nairne, D.G. of Artillery, have left Simla for Quetta to examine the defences there.

THERE has been one or two fatal cases of cholera at Quetta, in addition to deaths among the labourers on the Peshin Railway; it is also prevalent at Kandahar, where from twenty to thirty deaths are occurring daily.

THE Public Service Commission, as previously stated, reassembles at Allahabad on the 1st November, and is expected to sit till about the 30th. On the conclusion of the work Mr. Daukes, the Secretary, takes short leave to England.

THE evidence collected by the sub-committee of the Public Service Commission is now being carefully summarised in Simla. Each department dealt with is being taken in turn, and the views expressed by various witnesses put into a concise shape.

THE supply of ponies in Upper Burma has from the first been insufficient to meet the demand created by our extensive employment of mounted infantry. What it has sunk to now may be gathered from the appearance of an order warning officers of that useful service that no pony can be cast unless there is absolutely no chance of its becoming fit for work within four months.

MADRAS was visited by a cyclone on October 9. The shipping in the roads was ordered to sea in the morning, while considerable damage was done among the cargo boats and pleasure yachts lying in the harbour.

IT was decided on Monday that the Public Service Commission should reassemble in Calcutta, and not in Allahabad as first intended. In consequence of Mr. Peacock's absence on leave the Commission will not meet till November 15th. Although it seemed at one time desirable that the interval between the departure of Government from Simla and its reassembly at Calcutta should be utilised by Sir Charles Aitchison in the conduct of the deliberations of the Commission, yet his presence in Calcutta for the transaction of the routine business of Government appears to be required during the absence of the Viceroy and the other Councillors. By this arrangement further time will be afforded for deliberation.

THE Amir returned to Kabul on the 20th September from the Paghman Hills in good health, and held a military durbar in the citadel and inspected the fortifications. His Highness is reported to have made good progress during the past summer on his strategical roads between Balkh and Kabul. They are now practicable for artillery even over the mountain passes.

The Patiala Durbar have sanctioned the payment of the bonus promised for the engineering staff employed in the construction of the Rajpura-Patiala Railway.

The crop and weather reports of the North-West Provinces and Oudh for the week ending the 5th inst. show that the Kharif is being cut and that the prospects continue good. The markets are full and the prices continue steady.

Almost at the same time that the King of Oudh died at Garden Reach Nawab Nizam-ud-Dowlah, whose father and grandfather were Viziers to the Kings of Oudh, died at Cawnpore at the age of ninety. He is said to have enjoyed a pension from the Government of Rs.4,000 per month.

News has been received from Palpa of the capture of another emissary sent by the exiled Nepalese Sirdars, now residing in British territory, with the object of inciting the garrison to rebellion against the present ministry. The man will shortly be hanged at Khatmandu.

The Indian Salt Revenue for the first five months of the current financial year has amounted to Rs. 2,57,63,000 on 13,331,000 maunds as compared with Rs. 2,52,31,000 on 13,084,000 maunds in the corresponding period of last year.

The following are balances held in cash in the Civil Treasuries of the Government of India and at credit of Government in the Presidency Banks and their branches on the last day of September, 1885, Rs. 10,86,86,000; 1886, Rs. 11,62,51,000; 1887, 10,78,51,000.

NOTES.

Everything comes to him who waits. "The Earl of Lytton, G.C.B., has been appointed Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris." If report speaks truly this has long been the post most coveted by the ex-Viceroy of India. He goes to it at rather a critical time in French politics certainly, and his work may be more serious than he could have anticipated a month ago, but with Lord Salisbury at the Foreign Office little anxiety need be felt. The new Ambassador will be popular in Paris, for he knows and loves Paris well. If he goes there under more serious circumstances than those under which he has been a sojourner there before, let it be hoped that it is not with the sad reflection:—

Qui n'ont pas d'ami,

but rather to recall the lines of Owen Meredith:—

Kind memory lay
My head upon thy lap, and tell me tales
Of the good old time when all was pure and gay.

The Times correspondent, telegraphing from Calcutta yesterday, says that "several Indian newspapers strongly urge Mr. Colquhoun's claims to the appointment of Chief of the Delimitation Commission between Burma and China, and there can be no doubt that his experiences as a traveller and his official services eminently qualify him for the post. No doubt of it; these views will be generally endorsed. But by the mail of October 14th just to hand we find the following in the Times of India:—

Mr. A. R. Colquhoun, who is at home just now, has, we hear, applied for the command of the Burma-Chinese Delimitation Commission. He is so exactly fitted for the post by years of experience and travel and study that his natural claims can scarcely be passed over.

Does the Times correspondent wait until the Indian mail reaches London to wire part of its contents? The telegram from Calcutta and the paragraph by post from Bombay are very similar—"Cæsar and Pompey very much alike, sar!"

It is satisfactory to find a Native newspaper published in the vernacular telling its readers that the statement in the Moscow Gazette, that the people of India look to Russia to liberate them from the British yoke, "deserves neither attention nor contradiction, for no one required in India to be told or convinced that it was a pure concoction of the Russian brain." The statement made by the Muscovite organ was made in reference to Dhulip Sing's present attitude towards England, and his Bobadil boasts that he was prepared to take part in a Russian invasion of India at the head of the Sikh soldiery who, according to himself and the editors whom he has instructed, are ready to join him whenever he unfurls the old Khalsa banner.

Upon the subject of Dhulip Sing himself the same Native newspaper quotes an interesting extract from a book lately published by Babu Pratap Chunder Mozoomdar, "The Life and teachings of Keshub Chunder Sen." Keshub Chunder visited Bombay in 1864 when Maharaja Dhulip Sing was there, and was introduced to him by the late Dr. Wilson. What impression the Maharaja left on Keshub Chunder's mind is told as follows:—

Dhulip Sing was at this time a strait-laced Christian bigot. In his reminiscences of Bombay, Keshub and the friend who accompanied him related how the Sikh prince asked them whether every orthodox Hindu, both ancient and modern, was not a "liar," and would not descend into the nether regions. And then he volunteered the information that his own ancestors were what he believed all Hindus to be, and had long made their way into the hot depths below. Dhulip Sing impressed Keshub as a weak-minded voluptuary, who had picked up his religious views from extra-Calvinistic tracts and truculent missionaries to the heathen.

"This is interesting," observes Mr. Mozoomdar, "in view of what Dhulip Sing is now." We should think so; and the Native paper has done loyal service in giving publicity to the above. It ought to be interesting, certainly to the Maharaja's Sikh "subjects."

Whatever hesitation there may be on the part of the British Government to accept the Nizam's money, or whatever differences of opinion there may be amongst English journalists as to the policy of acceptance or refusal, the Native Press of India seems to be in accord on the matter. The general verdict seems to be that the gift should be accepted in the same frank and cordial manner in which it was offered. Native public opinion is certainly against extravagant expenditure of money on the North-West Frontier; but this is a matter separate, it declares, from that of the Nizam's offer. The Indu Prakash and other Native journals consider that that offer is a proof that the Native Princes are not wanting in loyalty, and are as anxious as the Paramount Power itself to maintain the stability of the British rule in India, and that it is calculated to create a greater bond of union between the Government and its Feudatories.

But English journalists agree to differ on the subject, and some of them continue to insist upon looking a gift horse in the mouth. A military contemporary, however, takes a different view. The Broad Arrow of last Saturday says:—

We are free to confess that we see nothing suspicious in the chivalrous generosity of a young Indian Prince who has been the pupil in statesmanship and diplomacy of one of the most intellectual and liberal minded Asiatic Ministers that India ever produced—namely, the late Sir Salar Jung. The Nizam evidently entertains a less optimist view in regard to "the persistent advance of another great military Power towards India" than Sir West Ridgeway, who seems to put more faith in his own boundary marks and milestones than a sharp look-out upon the movements of his late coadjutors of Zulficar, Pul-i-Khatun, Ak-Robat, and Penjdeh.

"India," says the Daily News, "like too many Anglo-Indians, has no Constitution. India never has had a Constitution, and would not at present know what to do with it if she had." The italics are ours, and we emphasise the remark because we think that the majority of Anglo-Indians could give ocular demonstration and medical testimony to satisfy even the robust and sturdy editor of the Liberal organ himself that he is in error. He need not look further than the present India Council for this. Let that taunt pass, however; but what of the other taunt that India would not know what to do with a Constitution if she had one? This is strange language from the great Gladstonian paper, which looks upon Home Rule as a right to be claimed, not as a concession to be asked for. The Daily News thinks that there is a difference between the intellect of an Irishman who desires Home Rule and that of a Hindu who wants it also. No doubt there is; but we are not quite sure that in astuteness and watchfulness of his own interests Ram Jam Tunda Ghost of Radha Bazaar, Calcutta, would not beat Pat Murphy of Michelstown, Ireland, hollow. The Gladstonian print is not logical—and to India evidently—not liberal.

IT is to be hoped that the Civil and Military Gazette of India is not returning to its old panic-mongering ways regarding a Russian invasion of India; but in a late number of that paper there is an article which bears much similitude to those which used to flow from the pen of a certain gallant colonel whose Russophobism was a proverb, and who still continues to warn and advise in the columns of his journal at Karachi. But a paper published like the Civil and Military Gazette at the headquarters of the Government of the Punjab, and almost within touch of the Supreme Government at Simla, ought not to encourage hysterics or give way to unreasonable fears. To be perpetually telling the people of India that they are in momentary danger of a Russian attack is a very foolish proceeding. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. The Civil and Military Gazette, in the article we refer to, does not, however, seem to think so. The article, which is headed "How to meet Russia," takes it for granted that what it considers the inevitable had at length arrived. "In the great struggle which is before us," so it commences, "there are two resources available to us." We hope that there are many, but here are the two which are specially recommended.

THE Lahore journal advises the immediate raising of contingents of horse and foot to the number of about 50,000 or more from the tribes in Biluchistan and Hazaristan, to be officered by "men of the stamp of Hodson and Watson," the foot to be armed with Snider rifles, and the horse with the rejected carbines of our Native cavalry. These contingents, we are told, "should be of incalculable service to our army operating on the Helmund." The attraction of operating upon the Helmund appears to be irresistible, and to do so all that can be required is, we are told, to have a line of defence covering our North-West frontier border for a distance of 300 miles, the railway pushed on to Kandahar, the concentration of a corps d'armée there, with a further contingent of 15,000 Biluchis working on the left and left front of the Helmund. In addition to these simple arrangements "there should be an agency at Herat with a protectorate over Hazaristan. We should undertake to administer that tract on account of the Amir paying him the revenues collected therefrom, but diverting the subsidy hitherto paid to him in cash to the purpose of maintaining a subsidiary force raised from the Eimak and Hazareh inhabitants of Hazaristan."

THE above is a programme which, to use a familiar phrase, "leaves little to be desired" by even the most watchful of Russophobists. But it may be asked, "Who is to pay for the performance of it?" The English taxpayers will certainly not put their hands in their pockets for such a purpose, and further burdens the people of India can hardly bear. But surely a method of defending our frontier can be found without going into these extraordinary developments of strategy and expense? We have never shut our eyes to the fact of Russian advance towards Afghan-Turkestan and Afghanistan; but in that fact we see no reason for the extraordinary mental agitation which seems to disturb the pens of so many editors and their correspondents, both in India and in England. Why formulate a policy of panic?

SOME months ago another Indian journal published close to the frontier said:—

If Russia never approaches India she can pride herself upon having achieved a moral conquest even more remarkable than a great victory. She can say with perfect truth that she has succeeded in unhinging the British mind upon the subject of the Russian advance. If Russia lifts up her little finger or drives a telegraph post into the ground there is consternation throughout India and England. From Lahore to Karachi, from Simla to Calcutta, from Calcutta to London the wire and cable flash alarm and warning. It is a strange demoralisation and delusion. The Russians are ever coming, and it seems that the British Government is never ready to meet them. This state of constant panic and constant unreadiness will eventually have the same effect as any long protracted war.

The journal from which this extract is taken does not advocate unmasterly or any other kind of inactivity on the part of the British and Indian Governments. It advocates watchfulness and all necessary precautions and preparations. But it condemns Press hysterics and panic—a condemnation which the common sense and common pluck of Englishmen ought to approve of.

WHAT is the meaning of Reuter's telegram dated Simla, Oct. 25th, saying that "In pursuance of the general scheme for the defence of India, arrangements are being made for the construction of blockhouses to defend the principal railway bridges"? Has the possibility of a British defeat on the frontier and a falling back (behind the Indus say) been contemplated? The idea is ridiculous. If the shock of battle ever comes there can be no falling back upon the part of the defenders of the Empire. The fate of India would be sealed were such a step possible; but it is not. So the telegram can hardly refer to the railway bridges behind our frontier line of defence. Railways and bridges in front of it, of course, ought to be defended.

How does the same intelligent creature, Reuter's agent at Simla, know that "the question of the Afghan frontier on the Upper Oxus will be made the subject of joint consideration by England and Russia in the course of next year"? Was this a secret which eked out at the opening of the Fine Arts Exhibition at Simla? Or was it spoken in the Epilogue to the last of the amateur theatrical entertainments there? It matters not; but it is gratifying to learn on the same authority that both Russia and England are going (through a joint commission) to study the geography "of that region." It is quite time that they did so.

THE Russian military gazette, the Invalide Russe, contains the following information respecting the location of the military forces at present quartered in Afghan-Turkestan:—At Balkh, Takht-i-pul, and Masar-i-Sherif, central points of the country, are concentrated 4,000 infantry, one sotnia of cavalry, and 40 siege and field guns. In the western part, at Maimena, there are 1,500 infantry, five sotnias of cavalry, and 12 guns. At Andkhoi, north of Maimena, and about 30 versts from the Russian frontier, there are only 150 infantry, one sotnia of cavalry, and two guns. In the eastern district, at Kunduz and Khanabad, are quartered 2,000 infantry, 10 sotnias of cavalry, and 20 guns. At each of the two points Faisabad and Rustek are 50 infantry, two sotnias of cavalry, and two guns. Besides the regular troops enumerated above there is a considerable contingent of irregular cavalry, about 25,000 men, in Afghan-Turkestan.

THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT, accompanied by Major-General Sir Howard Elphinstone, V.C., and Lady Elphinstone, will join the P. and O. steamer Coromandel at Malta next Friday for passage to India.

LORD CONNEMARA, the Governor of Madras, has been visiting the Malabar Coast, Cochin, and Travancore, and has everywhere met with a cordial reception. His Excellency found the attacks made against the administration of Travancore to be groundless.

ANXIOUS inquiries after Mr. W. Stobie, the author of the article on Bengal planting life in the Fortnightly, have elicited the fact, says a contemporary, that he is a person who left the country for good some time ago, and is now settled in Ireland. The "recent" occurrence which he describes took place, it is said, over twenty years ago, and one at least of the parties concerned is dead. So there need be no hope of a new scandal.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 30.

Full particulars of the loss of the British India Company's steamer Arcot on the 22nd inst. have been received, and prove clearly that the immediate cause of the accident was the parting of the wheel chain at the moment when the vessel was passing the most dangerous spot in the Hooghly, the Mukraputty Lumps on the James and Mary shoal. Two minutes after touching the ground the Arcot turned over on her side, and lay for some time with her deck in a perpendicular position. With the exception of five men who jumped or were thrown overboard and were drowned, all on board scrambled on to the railings and the side and there remained until taken off.

All accounts agree that the captain, officers, pilot, and crew behaved well, and that there was little or no appearance of panic. The whole scene seems to have been almost an exact repetition of that witnessed on the occasion of the loss of the same company's steamer Mahratta at the same spot 1st July. On this occasion, as on that, a number of Native boats which were close at hand refused to approach the wreck, and the first boat to render assistance was again that of the serang or boatswain attached to the Hooghly Point Signal-station. The captain of the steamer Rewa which was close behind, despatched five boats to the spot as soon as she could be anchored, and by the united efforts of their crews everyone was rescued except the five of the Native crew who had jumped or been thrown overboard. The ill-fated vessel speedily settled down, and now only her masts are visible. The officers, passengers, and crew lost everything, and it is not likely that any cargo will be saved. It is somewhat remarkable that the second officer and the fourth engineer were serving in the Mahratta when that steamer was lost, and the former was highly complimented by the Court of Inquiry for the gallantry shown by him on the occasion. The accident seems likely to lead to a controversy as to whether anything can be done to lessen the dangers of the navigation of the Hooghly, and especially of the dreaded James and Mary sands.

Some more accounts of interviews with Indian chiefs who have lately returned from England have been published. Sir Salar Jung informed a reporter of the Times of India that he had spent an enjoyable time and had been everywhere treated well. Being in Turkey during the Jubilee he had no personal experience of the treatment accorded to the Indian Princes on that occasion, but from what he had heard he did not think they had any cause for complaint.

The Rao of Cutch, who also returned by the P. and O. steamer Victoria, stated on behalf of his brethren and himself that the manner in which they had been received and treated was most cordial and gratifying. The Queen and the Royal Family had been most gracious, while Lord Cross had made constant inquiries as to whether their wants were properly attended to. He thought the London theatres very attractive, considered the Derby an imposing sight, and enjoyed good sport in Scotland, which he described as a splendid country. He could say nothing as to the treatment of Holkar.

The insinuations of some native newspapers that the Nizam's splendid gift was actuated by a desire to procure the restitution of the Berars have led that chief publicly and emphatically to deny the existence of any other motive than devotion to the British Government, and an earnest wish for the unity of India. The idea, he adds, of the restitution of the Berars as a reward never entered his mind. When he has that aim in view he will make a straightforward request on the subject. The offer was made for favours past, not to come.

Lady Dufferin has written a letter of thanks to the subscribers to the Jubilee collection of the fund for female medical aid. When the list closed on the 15th inst. the subscriptions amounted to 478,465 rupees in India and £1,770 in England. The system of collecting by cards was very successful, proving that vast numbers of persons interest themselves in the work of the association.

AFGHANISTAN.

The winter frosts have set in in Southern Afghanistan, and for the last ten days all traces of cholera have disappeared in Candahar and from the British side of the frontier.

An escort of thirty troopers for the subsidiary Boundary Commission passed Candahar six days ago without entering the city, and should have reached Girishk yesterday. The Governor of Herat has been ordered to accompany the Commission to the Murghab.

The troops employed in putting down the Fouzkohi rising have made a triumphal entry into Herat, bringing Sharbut Khan, one of the rebel leaders, who was promptly blown from a gun. But it appears that directly the troops departed the Fouzkohis rose again and the roads are still unsafe.

The news from Herat seems to indicate that Ayoob Khan has not left Persian territory, but in Candahar it is confidently asserted that he is in Afghanistan and is sending emissaries to his friends in every direction. A telegram from Quetta states that it was reported there yesterday that he had joined Ibrahim Khan, formerly chief of Cakansur, on the Helmund, and that the two had driven the Ameer's garrison out of that stronghold. Noor Mahomed, one of Ayoob's followers who was taken prisoner, has been hanged at Herat.

The stories of renewed disturbances in the Ghilzai country are reported by the Native correspondents of Indian newspapers to be unfounded. They assert that there has not been a fight of any sort south of Ghuznee since July.

Sir F. Roberts will, it is expected, arrive in Quetta on November 6.

The Bolan railway has recommenced carrying passengers.

Mr. O'Meara, a dentist of Lahore, who lately returned from a professional visit to the Ameer, has given an interesting account of his experiences to a correspondent of a Lahore newspaper. He says that he went under the impression that he was not likely to return, but he found himself treated with every consideration by the Ameer and his people. All his interviews with the Ameer took place in open durbar. The Ameer seemed to be at work all day receiving letters from all parts of the country, writing remarks on them, and then passing them on to the proper officials. He appeared to be in robust health, but Mr. O'Meara thinks he is overworking himself. The durbar seemed to proceed incessantly, and apparently anyone could attend and hand in a petition, or speak personally to the Ameer. Mr. O'Meara describes him as a "grand" man, and says he knows everything that goes on, and is greatly feared.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

KURRACHEE.

(Pioneer.)

Kurrachee needs the advocacy of the Times, for by all accounts it is in a bad way, and report says that many of the agencies there are to be closed until the arrival of better times. Slack trade is a general complaint at all our ports at present, but Kurrachee seems also to suffer heavily from the competition of both Bombay and Howrah, and cannot reach the large marts of the North-West with her imports, owing to the long round by Lahore. The idea of a direct line, however, from Ajmere, which would run through a selection of the worst deserts in India, can hardly be considered as coming within practical politics at the present moment; but the project of a direct broad gauge line from Delhi to Bhawulpore on the North-Western Railway stands on a better footing, and has, we understand, been strongly approved by the Kurrachee merchants, as it would place them at about the same distance from Delhi as Bombay is. This would enable them to compete with Bombay for both exports and imports on even terms, and would, moreover, introduce another aspect of interest. In the fair season, Kurrachee is, it appears, about 200 miles by sea route nearer Aden than Bombay, and in the monsoon, owing to the longer course necessary for steamers from Bombay, it is about 400 miles nearer. Thus, Kurrachee would, by this new line, be placed very favourably as a competitor with Bombay for our English mail service, and not merely for the Punjab, but for the whole of Northern India. In the fair season the run from Aden can be done to Kurrachee in say 18 hours less than to Bombay, and in the monsoon by about 30 hours less. The railway journey from Delhi to Allahabad by mail train would take about 17 hours, so that the time taken by the mails from Aden via Kurrachee and the proposed line to Allahabad would, in the fair season, be almost exactly the same as from Aden via Bombay to Allahabad, and in the monsoon about 12 hours could be saved. Bombay and Madras would thus have to be served by a branch line of steamers from Kurrachee until Government gives them a railway across from Hyderabad to Deesa, the want of which is at present a standing reproach to the Public Works Department. But apart from this view of the matter, the proposed line would certainly immensely strengthen our military position on the North-West frontier. The most rational way of carrying out the proposed line would be to convert the whole of the Rewari-Ferozepore line to broad gauge, join Delhi to Hansi, through Rohtuck and Sirsa with Bhawulpore, the whole being made and taken over by the North-Western Railway. Following on this would come a line from Delhi through Kurnal to Umballa and on to Kalka also on the broad gauge, and a short line from Ghaziabad to Rajghat on the Oudh and Rohilkund. Were all this carried out, as it is certain to be before many years go by, Kurrachee would have little cause to grumble.

THE NATIVE PRINCES AND SIR J. FERGUSSON.

(Times of India.)

The interviews with which the Native Princes have, after their return from England, favoured one of our representatives here, have, we learn, created quite a "rumpus" at the India Office.

Digitized by Google

People like Sir James Fergusson seem to think that because these magnates told them one thing, it was quite impossible that they should have said anything different to our representative. Sir James as an ex-Governor of Bombay should have known better. No European official is ever told the real mind or inner thought of a Native, and no European, official or otherwise, can ever get at them, unless he is enabled to follow their own way of arriving at a given point. Officials are, in a word, told exactly what they are supposed to wish to know. If their Highnesses Holkar of Gondal and the others had been dissatisfied with the treatment they received at home, Lord Cross and Sir James Fergusson would of all people be the last to whom they would mention it. In a letter to the Times Sir James Fergusson talks about the report of what the Thakore Saheb of Gondal is "supposed to have said to an anonymous questioner in Bombay." The duly accredited representative of our paper is no more anonymous than its editor, and when Sir James says that our representative "sought to elicit from him some expression of dissatisfaction with his treatment in England," Sir James states what is not a fact, and what he had no right to state. It was simply to see if we would not officially contradict the exaggerated rumours about Holkar's sudden and sulky retreat from England that we arranged to have Holkar and the other chiefs interviewed. On the whole, our inquiries were satisfactory, though most of the Princes, like most of the Anglo-Indians at home, thought that some of the arrangements might have been better. Holkar may have a bad temper, and be quick to take offence, but we can quite understand his being offended. Anyone who knew anything of India and Indian etiquette would have given him not only four horses to his carriage, but a cavalry escort as well, whenever he went anywhere in state. It was a matter of political importance to please him and to draw a marked contrast between him and the minor princes who were present. The whole thing was turned into a farce when he had to play second fiddle to her barbarous Majesty the Queen of Hawaii, whose pretty little islands could be cornered comfortably in any one of Holkar's districts.

RAIL-BORNE TRADE OF BOMBAY.

(Bombay Gazette.)

While other parts of India have been loudly complaining of the depression in trade, it is satisfactory to observe from the returns of the rail-borne trade issued as a supplement to the local Government Gazette that the Bombay Presidency has to a large extent escaped the evil effects of the general stagnation. It is true that the total rail-borne trade of the Presidency in the second quarter of the year exhibits a slight downward tendency as compared with the corresponding period of last year; but this is more than counterbalanced by the large improvement, amounting to nearly eight million maunds upon the first quarter of the current year. The improvement is not confined to one particular branch of trade, but is observable under all the three heads of imports and exports from external blocks and local trade. Compared with the corresponding quarter of last year the wheat trade, which is constantly expanding, increased to the extent of a million and a quarter maunds. It is curious to note that while the imports from the Punjab have decreased, those from the North-West Provinces and Oudh and the Central Provinces have considerably increased. The falling-off in the imports from the Northernmost Province is, of course, attributable to the bad harvests, and has not been caused by the trade being diverged into other channels. Important increases are also observable in the imports of seeds from the Central Provinces and the North-West, and of sugar, both drained and undrained, from the neighbouring provinces. Serious decreases took place in the import of food grains as compared with the second quarter of last year, amounting altogether to 649,046 maunds, but while there was a decrease of 188,610 maunds in the imports of raw cotton from Berar, those from Rajputana and Central India increased by nearly a lakh and a quarter. A considerable expansion is shown in the exports of many important articles, notably coal, wheat, and food grain, but on the other hand the exports of salt, tobacco, cotton piece-goods, iron, and some other less important articles, fell off by nearly seven lakhs of maunds. These increases and decreases are presented on a comparison with the trades of the second quarter of last year; but, as we have mentioned before, a comparison with the trade in the first quarter of the current year shows considerable expansion all round.

REASONS AGAINST UNIVERSAL MARRIAGE.

(Indian Nation.)

For our own part we think that universal marriage can never be of good to a nation. It is all very fine, very romantic, and very puritanical, to say that boys and girls must be married, one and all, as soon as they are on the verge of puberty, and that that otherwise immorality must be the consequence. But the physical demands whose gratification is food, are certainly more imperious and abiding, and more regularly recurring than the demands which are sought to be quelled by marriage. How is a poor man to maintain not only himself, but wife and children? It is a beautiful cycle which Indian life presents. Every man and every woman must marry. When they have children they must seek not only to maintain the children but to provide means for their marriage. A man must marry, have children, and get them married. The children in their turn will do the same. And so life goes on, marrying and marrying and marrying. Money is required for marriage and of existence. Marriage and money are, therefore, the ends of existence in this country. The student cannot absorb himself in study, for he has to think of his wife and children. The man settled in life, if he is asked whether he is enjoying life or pursuing any good idea, has his answer ready: "What enjoyment is possible? Must I not save money for my daughter's marriage? How can I contribute to public funds, or purchase books, or even take hearty meals, when I have a daughter (or several daughters) growing up rapidly in my home?" If the clerk, when he has received a kick from his official superior, is asked to resign his office, his answer is: "My dear fellow, I have not simply to think of my own stomach. I could satisfy my own wants somehow. But have I not a wife and children? What do I lose by pocketing an insult?" Whenever a man is invited to any sort of adventure, his answer is: "How can I risk life or property? We must apprehend the worst; and if that comes, my wife and children will be starving." There is no use of enlarging the picture. All efforts are paralysed, all adventure abandoned, all projects discarded, all public movements starved, because every mother's son in the country must marry himself and marry his children. Marriage "makes cowards of us all." But in the Hindu régime marriage is inevitable. There are men who would go to England or send their sons to England, only if they had no daughters to marry. There are men who would do a great deal for themselves and the country if they had not daughters to marry. Now, we ask, is this the highest ideal of life? Are we born only to marry? Must we leave the future to take care of itself and marry as early as possible? Has life nothing brighter to offer, no more solemn duty to present, than a ceaseless round of marriage? Must we abandon all hope of perfecting ourselves and giving the world all we can, only that marriages may be performed without let or hindrance? Is man a marrying animal, and nothing more? Are the real or imaginary physical demands of puberty the strongest calls of duty in this world?

THE KOLAR MINES.

(Madras Times.)

Those who are in any way interested in the Kolar Gold Mines and who have studied the quotations on the London Market for the last few days may well ask what is the real value of these mines. On Sept. 23 the Mysore Gold Mining Company shares were quoted at £5, and subsequently at £3. Thus in a few days there was an apparent depreciation (on a capital of £135,000) of £270,000 in the value of the mine. This, of course, is absurd, but the question naturally arises, Has the mine really depreciated in value, and if not, what is the cause of this sudden fall? From careful inquiries and from authentic information we can assure our readers that the Mysore Gold Mine is of more real value at the present time than it was when the shares were quoted at £8 10s. a year ago. As we pointed out a short time back, the most important result yet obtained on the Kolar Gold Field was the cutting of the rich lode in the Mysore Mine at the 400 feet level, in July last, which proved the continuity of these rich lodes in depth. The cutting of the lode at this depth added greatly to the value of the mine. Nor is this all. The seven shafts started (including some old ones re-started) during the past year are now beginning to give satisfactory results, and will, we believe, within a few months, when greater depth is obtained, largely augment the returns. It is difficult to understand why, in the face of these facts, the value of the mine should during the past few days have depreciated on the London Stock Exchange in the way it has done, and if asked for an explanation we could only say that it is because it is on the London Stock Exchange, and that it is due to a move on the part of the "bears" to recoup themselves. It is believed that several thousand pounds worth of shares in the Kolar Mines had been "beared" months ago at prices which did not leave the sellers any margin of profit until the last week, when, with a weak market and most people away on their holidays, the "bears" appear to have made strenous efforts, and, by crying down the mines and heavy inter-selling, succeeded in bringing down the price of the Mysore Mine to £3 on Tuesday last, after which, the public confidence began to reassert itself, and on Thursday the shares were quoted at £3 12s. 6d. This process of "bearing" is extremely unpleasant for genuine shareholders and investors in the mines, but in the case of any Company with a large capital which is quoted on the Stock Exchange, it cannot be prevented. The fact that Captain Plummer is to leave the Mysore Mine in October has been made use of by the "bears," but this has been known to the public for many months past. Besides, with all due respect to Captain Plummer for the energy and zeal which he has displayed in bringing the Mysore Mine to the front, his leaving the mine does not mean that he will pack in his portmanteau the gold which is there and take it away with him. Whether Captain Plummer goes or remains cannot effect the mine itself.

Digitized by Google

We mention these facts in order that those of our readers who are shareholders in the Kolar Mines may not be misled into believing that there is something wrong with the Mines and part with their shares. In fact the Kolar Mines never appeared so worthy of confidence as at the present moment. The Nundydroog has done exceedingly well during the past two months, and during the next six months we expect to see much better returns than those at present being made. The Balaghat has some very rich stone, and when the crushing of the quartz which has been obtained has taken place, we believe that it will greatly strengthen the confidence in this mine. The Kolar Mine of the Indian Consolidated is also doing very well, and should shortly be able to make handsome returns to the Company. The two mines recently started, the Eastern Mysore and the South East Mysore, have each come across rich lodes. In fact the Kolar Mines are, generally, infinitely better at the present moment than they were a year ago; and yet, notwithstanding this, the shares on the London Stock Exchange are 50 per cent. less in value than at that time. We would advise those of our readers who are shareholders not to be frightened by this effort on the part of the "bears," but to hold on in full confidence that the shares will soon recover their former value.

THE ALLAHABAD UNIVERSITY.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The selection of Sir John Edge, Chief Justice of the North-West Provinces High Court as Vice-Chancellor of the new Allahabad University, commends itself to us on the same grounds that we approved of the selection of Sir Comer Petheram for the Calcutta University. Unfortunately in this country, so far as the Punjab may be accepted as a type, academical affairs are not always conducted with that serene exclusion of worldly topics that a hallowed seat of ancient learning like Oxford can command. We have planted the fresh seed of learning on a soil which grows weeds with singular freedom, and all kinds of useless and poisonous products are the result. Degrees, cheap as blackberries and useless as Dead Sea fruit; departmental squabbles, straggling like briars over the whole institution; bribery, theft of papers, personation, insinuation, investigation, condemnation, and outside contempt, flourish, like toadstools in the dark; and to deal with these satisfactorily we think a trained lawyer or judge makes undoubtedly the best Vice-Chancellor. He can prevent the Senate from running into uncomfortable legal predicaments, can supervise the investigation of criminalities; and generally be a solid terror to evildoers. The time may, of course, come—when the ground has been weeded, and the gardeners grow expert by practice—when an Indian University shall no longer seem to the Native a market-garden for cheap degrees, which can as often as not be stolen with impunity. Then the average European will regard it with less of humorous contempt; and, judging the work by its fruit, acknowledge its degrees as worthy objects of scholarly pride and its Vice-Chancellorship as a post fitted by great lights of scholarships. Till then a Chief Justice seems to us a very suitable occupant; and we do not know that policemen would not make the best door-keepers.

BENGAL.

THE following changes in the Bank of Bengal Establishment have been notified:—Mr. A. M. Lindsay, to be Acting Agent at Rangoon, vice Mr. Gillam, who has obtained leave to Europe. Mr. C. J. Michôd on return from leave has resumed charge of the Lahore Branch, while Mr. W. W. Kennedy has been appointed Acting Accountant at Bombay.

MR. D. W. CAMPBELL, C.I.E, and A.D.C. to the Viceroy, whose appointment as Agent to the East Indian Railway in succession to Sir Bradford Leslie was announced recently, has been acting as Agent ever since Sir Bradford Leslie's departure, and has also acted in that capacity on several previous occasions during the absence of his chief. Mr. Campbell may be said to have been connected with this railway almost ever since it commenced working, for he first came to this country in November, 1858, as Assistant Locomotive Superintendent under Mr. Lingard Stokes, and was posted to Allahabad, and ultimately succeeded that gentleman as Superintendent.

MESSRS. MACNEILL AND CO. have purchased the Assam Railways and Trading Company's flotilla for close upon £60,000. "This," says the Englishman, "puts an end to the threatened opposition which has of late caused so much uneasiness."

THE Assian understands that there is no truth in the report that the Arab Eclipse has been purchased by the Maharajah Pertab Sing. Negotiations were going on for the deal at the price of Rs. 10,000, but the owner demanded ready money down, and as this was not forthcoming he decided to keep the horse, which will, it is stated, be put under the care of Mr. H. E. Abbott for the Calcutta meeting, where, if all that is said of him is true, he should be able to pick up the principal Arab races.

MADRAS.

HIS EXCELLENCY LORD CONNEMARA, attended by Major Stewart-Mackenzie, Military Secretary, and Lord Marsham, A.D.C., visited the Neilgherry Brewery on the 27th ultimo, and was met by the manager and his assistants, who with the workpeople drawn up in line in their ga'a attire, were ready to receive him at the gates. After inspecting the Native staff, his Excellency went over the maltings, and saw the malt in the various stages of preparation. From the maltings he proceeded to the brewery, and here the process of malt grinding, mashing, boiling, cooling, fermenting, racking, and bottling, were shown and explained to him, as also the wiring, labelling, and packing of the bottled beer. After tasting samples of the Commissariat draught and bottled beers, which were much approved of, his Excellency expressed his pleasure at the very satisfactory condition of this great industry, which supplies daily bread to hundreds in Ootacamund and elsewhere. His Excellency was much interested also in the samples of local barley which were shown him, and it is satisfactory to learn that this year there is a considerable improvement in the quality, owing to the distribution of English seed by the Collector, and the greater care exercised in the harvesting of the grain by the Badagas. Barley-growing on the Neilgherries may now be said to have got past the experimental stage, and it merely requires some further encouragement by the Government to make it a perfect success. The establishment of these industries, barley growing and brewing, will be a great boon to this and the surrounding districts, and it is to the interests, both of Government and private individuals, to give them their full support.

THE Madras Mail has been favoured by the editor of the Madras Times with an inspection of the evidence for the authenticity of the account of the interview with Sir Charles Turner regarding the Public Service Commission, which appeared in the Madras Times at great length, and the accuracy of which is reported to be repudiated by Sir Charles. The Mail has no hesitation in saying that the evidence is absolutely conclusive, and that the articles in question gives an accurate account of the interview as recorded by a shorthand reporter at the time, and afterwards corrected by Sir Charles himself. Whether Sir Charles intended it to be published in the form in which it appeared is a matter concerning only Sir Charles and the editor of the Madras Times.

THE Muslim Herald naturally approves of the Nizam's offer to the Government, and remarks:—"Would that some of our other Native royalties would follow the Nizam's example and run him close for first place, instead of wasting their substance on courtesans athletes, cock-fighting and other vanities. With a great military power, like Russia, for her next-door neighbour, India, among her other acquisitions of civilisation, must be prepared to bear philosophically the burden of 'bloated armaments.' We cannot express too warmly the pride we feel at seeing a Muslim Prince in the forefront of the preparations for the coming fray."

BOMBAY.

THE REV. W. CLARK, M.A., Joint Chaplain of Poona, is granted furlough to Europe for one year.

MR. J. W. A. WEIR, C.S., Assistant Collector in Sind, has been allowed one year's medical leave.

THE REV. G. GOTHARD, M.A., Chaplain of Ahmednugger, and the Rev. E. J. BOWEN, M.A., Chaplain of Ghorpuri, change places, the former also acting as Joint Chaplain of Poona.

THE Bishop of Bombay has started for Rajputana on visitation tour, and does not return to Bombay till the 14th proximo. He has requested that no business letters may be sent after him.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay presidency report for the past week:—Good rain in most districts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country, but urgently required throughout Gujarat and in parts of several other districts. Crops suffering for want of rain in parts of Ahmedabad, Wadhwan, Dharwar, and Rutnagherry; and from blight in parts of Hyderabad and Rutnagherry. Kharif harvest and rabi sowing in progress in several districts. Cholera in parts of seventeen, fever in parts of twelve, and cattle-disease and small-pox in parts of seven districts. Cholera ceased in Khandesh.

THE Chairman of the Kurrachee Chamber of Commerce has received a letter from the President of the London Chamber of Commerce on the Omerkot-Pachpadra Railway, expressing sympathy with the object in view, and stating that steps have been taken to ensure its early consideration by the London Chamber. The salient points of the Kurrachee Chamber's Memorial to the Viceroy will be brought under the notice of the London Chamber and all Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom through the medium of the Press. A member of the Kurrachee Chamber, Mr. H. J. Rustomjee, now in London, paid two visits to the London Chamber with reference to the railway about which the Kurrachee Chamber is agitating, and the president of the London Chamber has requested the officials to give him every assistance in bringing the project under the notice of influential persons.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

THE cholera mortality in the North-West Provinces during August exhibits a decline on the figures for June and July, but it was still very unusually heavy. The Meerut Division, which had escaped comparatively easily before, was visited by the epidemic in its full severity, there being over 3,000 deaths in Bulandshahr district and over 1,300 in Aligarh. The unfortunate Lucknow Division does not show very much abatement, Barabanki recording 2,600 deaths, Unao 1,500, and Lucknow over 1,600. Some half-a-dozen other districts have a mortality of above a thousand. The total number of deaths during the month was 30,780, as against 41,000 in July, and 50,000 in June. But abnormal as the cholera figure is, it is worth remarking that it amounts to not a third of the losses from fever which in the same short period claims a roll of 95,000 victims.

AMONG the two thousand five hundred Punjabis who were enlisted for the Burma police last year, more than five hundred were Volunteers from the Punjab Police, and the force still feels the loss of that large number of withdrawals.

IT was not only at Lahore that the Punjab Police displayed an inconvenient interest in M. Notovitch and his friend. A luckless person who went in the hopes of getting service with him in Simla had hard work to convince the police that he was neither the bearer of treasonable correspondence, nor a rival spy.

BURMA.

THE supply of ponies in Upper Burma has from the first been insufficient to meet the demand created by our extensive employment of mounted infantry. What it has sunk to now may be gathered from the appearance of an order warning officers of that useful service that no pony can be cast unless there is absolutely no chance of its becoming fit for work within four months.

MINBU telegrams, dated the 10th inst., report that a well-planned attack took place on Friday upon Yenangyoung, the seat of the earth-oil industry, by a body of 200 dacoits. The dacoits attacked simultaneously by land and river, and 100 houses and much oil were destroyed. Eleven boats containing 170,000 viss of oil, belonging to Messrs. Findlay, Fleming & Co., were burnt. A flotilla flat loaded with oil, belonging to the same firm, escaped. The sepoys were only able to fire one volley owing to the great confusion which prevailed. Three wounded men are in hospital.

THE Chief Commissioner has recommended the construction of a railway up the Valley of the Moo river, which is closed in on the east and west by mountains. The Valley consists of rich paddy land, and its trade is capable of great extension, provided an outlet for surplus produce is obtained.

OWING to the difficulty of communication the country is liable to the depredations of dacoits, who can only be reached with much difficulty and at great cost. Therefore, if a railway is not constructed it will be necessary to maintain a large force of troops and police always in the neighbourhood.

THE estimated cost is Rs. 60,000 per mile. Assuming that money for construction is obtainable at four per cent. on the annual cost of the railway less earnings Rs. 1,200 per mile against Rs. 1,422 for a road, there is little doubt the railway would pay at least four per cent. in a few years.

TEA.

(BY ONE WHO HAS TRIED.)

A question not seldom put for the discomfiture of persons who do not pretend to be wise, by persons who do so pretend is, how is it that men can be found to invest their money in tea? The work is hard, the life monotonous, the surroundings uncongenial. The country (I am writing of Assam) has not advanced in its geological formation beyond the warm mud stage. The sky is a lidless eye of molten brass. The atmosphere for one-half year is that of a steam laundry on a washing-day; and for the other half is made of layers of clammy grey blankets. As for the thing you grow, tea, everything else combines to attack and destroy it. The nimble cricket establishes himself beside it in its infancy, lives upon it until it is leafless, and then cuts it down. In its youth a "loathly worm" takes apartments in its inside, and eats out its marrow, and it gives up the ghost just as it is growing into the gracious symbol of a dividend. In the riper years of its much-worried existence, it will afford great comfort and support to the venomous bug—the green fly—the orange beetle, and the red spider, not to mention its occasional sufferings from an internal disorder, resembling colic in its effects, which gripeth it o'nights; and makes it double up its leaves and refuse to look at the sun in the morning. The merry hailstorm and the insidious flood are also eminently calculated to make tea culture a thing of joy, and the unspeakable coolie, with his unspeakable little ways, you have always with you; together with the execration, after its kind, of that wise and beautiful institution, the Native Press.

It is my destiny to know, and perhaps to write, the history of a certain tea estate started, puffed and promoted one year in the tea-mad fifties by old Grog and Glory, who, starting as a boy on the Blenheim line-of-battle ship became by constant exercise of all the qualities that make life dreadful, industry &c., the captain of an inland steamer, and a tea proprietor. The crickets, the red spiders, and all the plagues did their best to "bust up" that estate and failed. So a powerful flood took it in hand, and did its business very effectually in the reputable timing of six and-a-half hours. Old Grog and Glory never smole again, with or without a tumbler, and shortly after took his watch below (underground I mean) for good. Verily, therefore, in the season of floods, let your daily prayer be apres moi le déluge. Indeed, even if the calamity does not actually befall you, it will not fail to yearly threaten you. This is what happens. The morning in July or August is a bright clear sunshiny one. In your garden drains, on one side of your estate, you see rising an impure fluid, the colour of stale and watered porter, which distils in evaporation an odour like unto that which pervades Wapping at low tide but on the marshy land you see a dull sheen among the reeds, and you know then that the waters are rising around you. So you betake yourself to the river side of your estate, and you find all the low land between you and the stream submerged, and under yellow water. This you discover has risen to within just a foot or so of the crest of the dyke, your only barrier against watery destruction. The still surface of the flood shines amid the trees and low jungle, like the belly of a snake. You cannot help standing and watching it. It fascinates you with the treacherous unfathomable intelligence of its deadly purpose. You imagine it creeping—creeping up the outside of your defences, till it turns up a thin tongue into a crevice near the top, and then curls itself over, and leaps down with a roar, and then—why then you find yourself afloat astride the factory rum cask, with the factory cash (if there is any), your total abstinence certificate, and a tin of marmalade; seeking painfully your centre of gravity and finding it not! Eventually you are picked up by a P. and O. steamer bound for China—gone a little way out of her course. And you are hoisted up in a blanket, the touring round the earth in search of equilibrium having somewhat damaged your subsequent portions. But previous to these crowning catastrophes you keep trotting in the blessed sun, between the black water on the one side, and the yellow water on the other. Your very helplessness forces you into activity, and you scan fearfully, at least twice a day, the water level. You meet on these occasions, and not infrequently, the homeless snake, who promptly heaves up a yard and-a-half of shoulder at you, and opens his countenance for business. Him you grimly slog across the ear with your stick, and he suddenly coils off his mortal shuffle. This is soothing, but it is not enough Nothing short of a hecatomb of slain could relieve the pressure of that black and yellow water on the brain. All around you nature is disorganised. The paddy birds sit in clusters on the half-drowned trees, holding throaty discussions over the probable rise in pollywogs next spring. The parrots curse more vehemently than ever as they rush between the pitiless sky and the pitiless water. Wild animals, who would not otherwise meet, congregate on the high lands, and the dear gazelle and the tender pigling lie down beside the tiger with rather less hesitation than usual. But there is a Nemesis! This easy life demoralises the tiger, and he waxes fat and forsakes the wild sports of the forest for the butcherlike pursuit of killing simple oxen in the open whereby he himself comes to be slain. For the hunt hear of it, and compass him with sweet observances in the form of giving tethered kine, the meat he loveth; and catch him at the cold beef tiffin, and—habet—one little hole behind the shoulder! The very musquitoes are crowed out and washed, as it were, into your bugalow in billions. The domestic lizards, who take charge of the musquito returns, and check over population, have then to give it up. Most of them commit suicide. You hear them, in the silence of the night, throwing themselves off the walls, and dashing their brains out against the floor. And these things go on for days. At last, when you feel your bump of don't-care a-damnativeness" becoming excessive, and that you "can't keep your hair on much longer," the waters vanish. You wake one morning, and behold they have glided away; but leaving—oh, such a smell behind! And that smell you inhale oft in the stewy night. It makes you cough. So you sprinkle phenyle or something about, and produce a compound odour which keeps you sleepless and bathed in profanity till sunrise. But the smell goes on accmmulating until it shapes itself into an immense concrete mass pervading all lower space. Then a N.E. wind comes and trundles it away south, and it breaks against the Cossyah Hills, and fragments float up to Shillong, and there are people tilt their hats back to catch it, and sniff and smile and say," dear! dear! quite a briny smell." Thence cometh "Assam Brain" in high-places and many evils.

Sell, therefore, your estate for four times its value to the promoters of Companies, and spread your pinions for the West. Better the raptures of Piccadilly and the roses of Monte Carlo for even but a twelvemonth, than a cycle of the green pastures and cloudy waters of Assam.

MR. CHARLES DU VAL has returned to town, having completed a professional tour of Ireland. His appearances in Dublin, Belfast, and Cork have been completely successful, and during his provincial tour he has visited almost every part of the country. He contemplates a tour of the East, to include China and Japan, and will probably return by the new Canadian Pacific route from the latter country. Mr. Du Val intends to reproduce in book form his impressions of the places he will visit en route.

THE QUEEN'S HIGHWAY.*

What is the "Queen's Highway" to which Mr. Cumberland alludes? It is the new route to India, China, and Australia, opened up by the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway from the Atlantic at Halifax to the Pacific at Victoria. Is this new line to be the route of the future? Mr. Cumberland says yes, and writes in glowing colours as to the benefits which the magnificent enterprise is destined to pour into the lap of old England. First as to time. From London to Hong Kong will take from thirty-three to thirty-five days, as compared with thirty-three to thirty-seven days viâ Suez—a gain of a day; from London to Shanghai thirty-two days, as against thirty-seven to forty-two days viâ P. and O. boat; Yokohama twenty-seven days, instead of forty-one to forty-five days; Sydney about thirty-two days, in place of forty days. As regards India no time would be gained, and the advantage of the new line would only be that it affords an alternative route. As regards expedition, then, it must be conceded that the Queen's Highway has much to recommend it. But there are disadvantages which are, to say the least of it, at once formidable and irremediable. First of all, there is a disembarkation and re-embarkation both at Halifax and Vancouver. For passengers this is none too pleasant, especially should they happen to possess heavy and valuable luggage; but as regards merchandise the expenditure of time and money involved in transhipment would seem to present an insurmountable barrier to the choice of the new route. Again, Mr. Cumberland tells his readers that "snow shoots" have been erected, so constructed as to prevent all chance of the line being blocked and traffic suspended during the winter months. But surely this contretemps may happen? And even should this risk be reduced to a minimum, to journey three thousand miles in a train with the thermometer at somewhat below zero, is, and must be, none too comfortable, unless there are means of warming the carriages specially adapted to such circumstances. In any case, looking after one's luggage, with the weather so cold that the moustachios freeze, is not a very delectable idea.

Strategically the line is of the utmost importance, as it runs entirely through British territory. In time of war it would be impossible to overrate the value of this circumstance. It renders England to a degree independent of the Suez Canal; and if, as is probably the case, a submarine line of telegraph be constructed, we should not, as at present, be left to the mercy of a hostile power for our communications in time of war. Even these great benefits do not exhaust the list of advantages now secured to the country. The Pacific Coast, thus linked to England, possesses some of the finest harbours in the world. Coal is unbounded; and with a squadron in those waters, aided by a local Canadian fleet, Russia would be absolutely powerless as far as naval tactics are concerned, whenever, as must happen sooner or later, our hereditary enemy crosses swords in memory of Sebastopool.

Lastly, but it is an important consideration, the Canadian Pacific Railway opens that immense—almost unlimited—expanse of corn-growing lands. In time of peace this is useful, for it not only supplies food but increases the demand for labour, and gives an impetus to emigration. When at war with our Yankee cousins —absit omen!—the product of India and Canada would enable us to laugh to scorn all attempts to starve England into subjection —of course assuming that we obtain the mastership of the ocean; if otherwise, this island is doomed. "Annihilation" is written on the portals of Fate.

On all these heads Mr. Cumberland touches with the skill of an expert and the pen of a professed litterateur. His work teems with anecdotes; it is at once light and thoughtful, instructive and amusing, earnest and full of sparkling mirth. It is just what a book of this nature should be; nothing is superfluous and nothing is omitted. The author merits a debt of gratitude which should and will be repaid in the popularity of the "Queen's Highway."

RADNA.†

All the world knows that the late Emperor of Russia was assassinated in the spring of 1881 by Nihilists, who blew the poor old man to bits, and left his body a quivering, mangled corpse; but the inner workings of this terrible tragedy are at best but little known, and imperfectly understood. Princess Olga, in this volume before us, draws aside the veil which enshrouds the inner life of the Russian Court, and what does she proclaim?

The seething corruption of the Russian Court is matter of everyday notoriety. The network of espionage which spreads o'er the land and draws into the vortex of ruin alike the guilty and the innocent, is but too well understood. The brutalities, the cruelties, the tyrannies of a brutal and unprincipled official régime cannot be glossed over with fair words and honied explanations; but the Royal Family itself—so Princess Olga would have it believed—are absolutely free from all contamination with the vices, the crimes, the sins, which stains and pollute the Empire which bows to the sway of the Northern Czar. The powerlessness of ignorance is the destiny and the misfortune of all who sit upon the throne of the most demoralised and unprincipled governing race which time has ever witnessed in history, painted in colours of contempt and contumely. Where all are concerned, to keep secret from prying Royal eyes the misdeeds which should ruin the perpretators, none are prepared to reveal secrets which would cost them power and place—perhaps, indeed, life itself. So matters go on unchecked and unaltered. Cruelty is rampant, oppression is insolent, and tyranny keeps a heel of iron upon the neck of a populace little better than serfs of the authorities, or slaves of the government.

But a cry of anguish wrings the hearts of the victims. Mothers swear revenge for murdered sons; husbands makes ready the knife to slay the assassins of lost wives; brothers raise the eyes of despair and demoniacal anger to Heaven in praying for the death of the seducer, the destruction of the despoiler. Throughout the length and breadth of the land the cry is "how long, how long?" This is the source of Nihilism's strength. We are in no way concerned to defend this most diabolical system of repairing national wrongs; we have not the slightest sympathy with men whose actions are as barbarous as their remedies are crude. But they who sow the wind must reap the whirlwind. Oppression and wrong must and will meet with their reward. And if so be, as Princess Olga proclaims, that the highest in the land are, perforce, compelled to bear the brunt of the fires of darkness it is the penalty of greatness. The Czar is the embodiment of power, power of cruelty, hence the link which completes the chain of cause and effect; hence the martyred kings, the mutilated bodies of God's Anointed Sovereigns in Holy Russia.

"Radna," which teaches and explains more on the topics to which allusion has been made, is a most powerful and interesting novel, and its appearance place its gifted authoress per saltum in the front ranks of living writers of fiction. Interest never flags; the scenes are dramatic, and the management of the characters adroit and masterly. We gladly pay the homage of praise to intellect of high order and ability which should raise a blush of pride on the cheeks of its fair possessor.

TEN YEARS IN MELANESIA.*

In the autumn of 1880 the calm of public repose was ruffled by the sad and somewhat startling intelligence that an officer of the Royal Navy, as well as some blue-jackets, had been murdered on Norfolk Island. Few persions were aware as to the locality at which the outrage occurred, and after a lapse of seven years the same mist of ignorance remains unmoved. Thanks, however, to Mr. Penny's interesting brochure on Melanesia, readers have every opportunity of informing themselves not only as to the locale, but the ways and habits of the people who dwell in the islands of the South Pacific.

Written avowedly to explain the progress of the Mission started in 1849 by Bishop Selwyn, of New Zealand, the volume, of course, deals largely with Christianity and religion; but there is an immense store of information in regard to these little-known portions of the earth. The ways and habits of the people, their peculiar superstitions and habits, their customs and rites, are all touched upon plainly, explicitly, and without any apparent bias; neither are national virtues magnified nor vices minimised. Mr. Penny has, as it were, photographed the people just as he found them—hence the value of his work. His hints, also, as to the mode of dealing with such untutored specimens of humanity are well worthy of consideration at the hands of those in authority, who might, perhaps, be tempted to scorn the teachings of a humble missionary. Over and above all it is shown that the progress of Christianity in these parts is remarkable, and of a nature to afford encouragement to the many willing and able to help in the great work of civilisation and moral instruction.

HYDROPHOBIA.†

Of all the "ills which flesh is heir to" nothing approaches hydrophobia in regard to awfulness, sadness, and hopelessness—it is pre-eminently a disease of despair. Death, too, is no less fearful in its nature than inevitable in its action. The endeavours, therefore, of the French savant, M. Pasteur, to ward off the attack of this terrible infliction by means of a species of vaccination has naturally occasioned the deepest interest amongst humanity at large. Men of science have looked into the matter —sufferers have flocked by scores to the laboratory in the hope of gaining immunity from the deadly virus with which their blood is impregnated. Some speak well of the plan; others are equally loud in their condemnation of a course of action which is considered not only useless, but replete with danger. In these circumstances of bewilderment, perplexity, and doubt, the colony of Mauritius deputed a professional officer, M. Renaud Suzor by name, to repair to Paris and report upon the case. The result is the work now under review.

Obviously the only charges that can be brought against M. Pasteur's system are twofold: (1) that it is useless; (2) that it communicates the very disease which it is intended to prevent. What says M. Suzor on these points? The normal death-rate amongst persons bitten by rabid animals (excluding wolves), taking the cauterised and non-cauterised altogether, is 20 per cent., in other words, one out of every five dies. After vaccination according to the method under discussion the figures are 1·15 per cent., or about 1 in 85. Regarding the second head, it is contended that "in no single case has it been proved that the treatment was the cause of death in any degree." It is further argued that even granting, for the sake of argument, that every death after vaccination is due to the treatment itself, is not a death-rate of 1·15 per cent. better than one of 20 per cent.? Without doubt; but, equally surely, is it not too dreadfully horrible that a person safe from rabies may be inoculated with the deadliest malady known to man? By all means vaccinate all persons whose death is otherwise certain, but how is this to be ascertained? And to empoison the blood of those who although bitten are not injured is most repulsive and revolting. This, to our mind, is the blot on the system.

EMINENT WOMEN SERIES.—MADAME DE STAEL.*

"That Madame de Staël was an eminent woman can scarcely be questioned, and her name and history therefore rightly appear in Messrs. Allen's valuable series. Comparatively few, however, really understand much about the highly-praised and little known meteor in the world of humanity. Born in the midst of a conversational circle, she imbibed the art of talking as it were the mothers-milk which gave her nourishment. By the time she was ten or eleven, says her biographer, "she had grown into a person whose opinion was quite seriously consulted." Yes, the child Germaine of the drawing-room was the forerunner of the Madame de Staël of the "Salon." The teaching of early youth laid the foundation for that sparkling transcendent power of conversation which, in after years, laid at her feet as humble worshippers alike the proudest and the humblest, the most talented and the veriest empty pates; the high, the low, the rich, the poor, sovereigns and sages, men and women, each and all did "pujah" at the shrine of a daughter of Eve whose apotheosis is one of the many marvels of a marvellous world.

Of course so gifted a creature, so adored a matron, wrote books; equally of course they were clever; more undoubtedly still, they were read—but will they live on the pages of Time? We will not prophesy. Madame de Staël, too, is, as is well known, famous as the hated of that splendid hater Napoleon the Great. Some would have it believed "that he persecuted the lady in question from unmitigated envy of her superiority." We entirely agree with Mrs. Duffy that the more probable solution of the problem is that "much as he resented intellectual power in a woman, it is, nevertheless, more likely that what really inspired his action against Madame de Staël was her turbulent disposition, and the restless mind which made her the centre of Parisian opposition." It may well be understood that a lady so talented, a spirit so indomitable, a "power" so transcendent, could not be allowed to pursue untrammelled the paths of invective, disdain, contempt, and opposition. That Napoleon at times diverged into meanness and unmannerly conduct is undoubted, but that, on the whole, his harshness was a necessity is the general verdict of history. Madame de Staël or the Emperor must have sat on the throne of Power—destiny chose the latter, to the discomfiture and eternal chagrin of the former.

This slight analysis of Madame de Staël's position in the world of notoriety will serve to show that is ample material for biography. Mrs. Duffy has worked up her subject with great care, and her remarks on the heroine of her volume are particularly unbiassed, and free from feminine gloss or partiality. Of the "Eminent Series" this is by no means the least eminent.

It is difficult to criticise this month's Century Magazine from an European standpoint, since, with one exception, every article is devoted to some American subject. The exception to which allusion has been made is a most excellent paper, entitled, "The Last Appeal of the Russian Liberals." The illustrations are fully up to the high standard of excellence which is always attained.

FOOD SUPPLY OF SINGAPORE.

From the position of Singapore—our principal coaling and docking station in the Straits of Malacca—the supply of food products forms a subject that cannot fail to be a source of interest, if not of anxiety, to the Government of the Straits Settlements. The population has vastly increased during the past few years, and many of the necessaries of life have been raised in price with its expansion. It becomes, therefore, a matter deserving the consideration of public men in the colony, to inform themselves as to where the supply is to come from, its nature and abundance, and the facilities for bringing it to market. Nor is it beyond the sphere of duty in a Government, as the agent of the public, to encourage enterprise on the part of the community in raising the necessaries of life for local consumption within the colony, and equally to prevent practices of extortion on the part of dealers in commodities absolutely necessary in sustaining human life. Some years ago an enterprising Celestial made some thousands of dollars very rapidly in Singapore by "cornering" the rice market. A similar thing, we believe, was attempted once in West Australia by the dealers in flour, during Governor Weld's tenure of administration there, but Chief Justice Burt sought out an Act under which he declared he would seize the flour and have it retailed to the public, and thus checked the extortion. In the Straits, however, the inhabitants fell in for the consequences, freedom of trade, as it was termed, in that instance, favouring the transaction. But the failure of crops in Siam or Saigon would tell very seriously upon the colony, and from this view of the position it is surprising that something has not been done to encourage the formation of rice-fields in the settlements, or to urge upon the Sultan of Johore the desirability of opening up some of the vast extent of rice-land within his territory. It is, however, satisfactory to find the Local Government at Singapore at last sufficiently impressed with the importance of the subject to take action to ascertain the extent of the food supply of that settlement, and the length of time it would sustain the population. For this purpose we understand that a committee was recently formed, consisting of the Colonial Treasurer, the Officer Commanding the Troops, and two members of the mercantile community, and sat every Friday to inquire into this matter. The result of these inquiries or the recommendations of the committee have not yet been made public, but it has transpired so far that should the contingency arise by which the present sources of supply would be cut off, the provisions now in stock would only last the population twenty days. This, it cannot be denied, is not a very encouraging outlook for the inhabitants, nor is it easily seen how the position is to be quickly improved. Rice, the chief article of food, is nearly all imported, the little produced within the colony would not do more than feed the population for a single day. Hence it is important that Singaporeans should at once set about improving this state of things. There seems to be no reason why, with a little forethought, a three months' supply could not always be kept in stock, and in this direction the Chamber of Commerce would be rendering good service to the community by aiding the Government in making out accurate returns of the different articles of food in stock, and also of cattle, sheep, and poultry. It is also in this direction of raising padi that the extensive area of flat country in the Protected Native States might well be made to produce sufficient, at any rate, for the supply of their own populations, and be thus rendered independent of those countries from which rice is so largely imported. We have often pointed out in these columns that the Native States should be the granaries for Singapore and Penang, instead of being importers of rice, as they are at the present moment.—London and China Express.

THE Bengal Presidency Rifle meeting will be held this year between the 1st and 10th of December, the centres being Rawulpindi, Mean Meer, Meerut, and Lucknow.

THE Bengal Presidency Volunteers are still without a headquarters, and likely to remain so. The site offered by the Government of Bengal in front of the High Court and bordering the river, is held by many Volunteers to be unsuitable, owing to the distance from the centres of the city from which the bulk of the Volunteers is drawn.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1887.

THE CLAIMS OF THE UNCOVENANTED.

IT is to be regretted that the official ear is still deaf to the very reasonable claims of the Uncovenanted Civil Service. Discontent is contagious and soon spreads, and it is not an edifying spectacle, nor does it give rise to pleasant reflection, to find a large body of honourable, hard-working servants of Government almost in rebellion against their master, because complaints, which are certainly well founded, are either treated with contempt or redress refused on the grounds of some verbal or legal technicality. The whole Uncovenanted Service of India is now seething with discontent and disquiet. By the Overland Mail which comes to hand to-day we are put in possession of several letters and articles upon this matter, some of which we hope will attract the notice of the authorities, and help towards bringing about the asked-for redress. As one of these correspondents writes, "It is an axiom that there is nothing more extravagant than an underpaid, discontented agent."

For every shilling that is pared off his salary a pound is lost by bad work. If our uncovenanted friends find themselves stranded in this cheerful land with children at home whose school-bills they cannot pay, some of them with sick wives whom they cannot afford to send home, with an assurance that their pensions will be paid in consumptive rupees, what I would ask is the probable value of their services on the days when driven to desperation by the blue devils of atra cura ? Frankly, very little. I can imagine such individuals going about their daily tasks with their hearts in their shoe leather, but the most rigorous effort of the imagination cannot depict them as putting their shoulders to the wheel. Ten well paid, zealous, contented men will do more work than a hundred sullen, soured dupes.

There can be no doubt of the truth of these observations, and they are not made in a querulous tone. Unfortunately, however, the writer—and his example is followed by others—goes on to draw comparisons between the treatment shown by the Government towards its Uncovenanted and its Covenanted servants. This is unfortunate, and beside the question. To complain that there are civilians rolling in p incely salaries whilst many of their comrades and contemporaries of the Uncovenanted Service know not where to turn to meet home expenses, does not strengthen the simple argument which the latter wish to push forward on their own behalf. Nor are matters improved by adding that "it cannot be contended that there is a corresponding difference in intellect and weight of responsibility between the two classes of public workers." Comparisons are not only odious, but, as Mrs. Malaprop says, odorous. Making every allowance for men smarting under a real grievance, it is to be regretted that there should be an ebullition of feeling provoking "bad blood" between classes. And we are sorry to say that this has been done. The friends of the Covenanted have, of course, come forward to add fuel to flame. One journal in its editorial column says :—

Of all the complaints which have been made from time to time, that now put forward by the Uncovenanted Service seems to us the most unreasonable and absurd. Like all the others it hinges on the discrepancy between the estimates formed by employer and employed as to the latter's value ; but, in addition to this, there is a further absurdity running through the present complaint. It is not said in so many words, of course, but it is clear that the grievance lies partly in the distinction between Covenanted and Uncovenanted. The grumblers practically say, "Some of us are just as good as the Covenanted men, as well educated, for we have University graduates among us, and we are sometimes called on to fill as responsible posts as the Covenanted men. Why, then, should there be such a marked distinction between us as to pay and privileges ? One has scarcely patience to answer such an absurd line of argument. In the first place, the Uncovenanted men who are at all on a par with the Covenanted ones in fitness for responsible posts are only in a small minority, whereas every possible precaution is taken to secure such fitness on the part of everyone who enters the Covenanted ranks.

Friends of both Services must be sorry to see so foolish an attitude taken up by each side, and must hope that a contention which can have no beneficial result to either will be allowed to drop. The Uncovenanted servants have an excellent case of their own, quite strong enough to stand upon its own merits, without attacking the position of the Covenanted. To talk of the latter as the "official aristocracy" of India, and to pretend that the Government "desires to place all Europeans belonging to the latter on a level with the Natives, to be governed by the same rules, and to be treated in every respect as if they were Aborigines of India," is neither just nor fair to the Government. We admit that the distinctive terms, "Covenanted" and "Uncovenanted," are unfortunate ones, and for years past have had much to answer for in fanning social strife in a land where, unfortunately, white caste is as strong as black caste. But it must be remembered that when the rules and regulations were originally framedf or the Uncovenanted Service of India it was of a very different nature to what it is now. The Government of that day can hardly be blamed for not having foreseen the changes which have been brought about in the character of that Service which numbers amongst its ranks now men of intelligence, ability, and experience second to none in any other service in the world. Whether the intellectual tests insisted upon in order to recruit the Covenanted Service be wrong in principle or fail in practice, they exist, and have to be accepted by those who desire to enter it. Having fulfilled the conditions laid down the Covenanted servant has a claim to the privileges which were attached to those conditions, and for those who had not to undergo the same ordeal to turn round now and cavil and draw contrasts is to be petulant and impolitic. And to be so is only to spoil a good cause.

THE NEW HEBRIDES AND THE SUEZ CANAL.—ANGLO-FRENCH AGREEMENT.

It is officially announced that on the 24th inst. the Franco-English Conventions concerning the Suez Canal, the New Hebrides, and the Raiatea Islands, in the Tahiti Archipelago, were signed in Paris by M. Flourens and Mr. Egerton, Her Britannic Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires. It is not technically accurate to describe the agreement arrived at respecting the Suez Canal as a Convention. It will only assume that shape when it is agreed to by the Powers represented at the London Conference which came to an abrupt close in 1885. The islands above mentioned are named Raiatea, Borabora, and Huahine. They lie to the north-west of Tahiti, in the Society group. When, in 1842, the French established a Protectorate over the Society Islands England laid claim to these three, and for some years the matter remained unsettled. Finally, on June 19, 1847, a Convention was signed by Lord Palmerston and M. de Jarnac, at that time French Ambassador in London, by which France and England mutually agreed to "recognise the independence" of the islands and to refrain from interfering in any way with them. We now formally recognise French Sovereignity over the three islands in question, withdrawing all British claims. Some confusion has arisen owing to the use of the term "Leeward Islands" in connection with this agreement, which, it is needless to say, has nothing to do with our possessions in the West Indies. The three islands are spoken of in the French papers as "sous-le-vent de Taïti," a phrase which simply describes their situation relatively to the main island of the group.

The official despatches which Lord Salisbury sent to Mr. Egerton, British Chargé d'Affaires in Paris, when forwarding the final draft of the Conventions for the settlement of the differences between France and England regarding the Suez Canal, the New Hebrides, and the Leeward Islands of Tahiti, have been issued from the Foreign Office. The following is the text of the Convention relating to the Suez Canal:—

"1. The maritime Canal of Suez shall be always free and open, in time of war as in time of peace, to any merchant ship or ship of war, without distinction of flag. Consequently, the High Contracting Parties agree not to interfere in any way with the free use of the Canal in time of war as in time of peace. The Canal shall never be subject to the law of blockade.

"2. The High Contracting Parties, recognising that the Sweetwater Canal is indispensable to the maritime Canal, take note of the engagements of his Highness the Khédive with the Suez Canal Company concerning the Sweetwater Canal. They agree not to interfere in any way with the security of this Canal and its sources, the supply from which cannot be the object of any obstructive attempts.

"3. The High Contracting Parties undertake in like manner the matériel, establishments, constructions, and works of the maritime Canal and the Sweetwater Canal.

"4. There shall not be erected any fortification capable of being employed in any offensive operation against the maritime Canal on any point which commands or menaces it. No point commanding or menacing its course or its approaches can be occupied as a military post.

"5. The maritime Canal remaining open as a war passage, no act of war or of hostility can take place in its approaches or ports of access, nor upon the banks of the Canal within a zone to be determined by the labours of the International Commission for the surveillance of the Canal.

"6. In time of war the belligerent Powers shall not disembark nor take up in the ports of access either troops, munitions, or war matériel.

"7. Prizes are subject in every respect to the same regulations as the ships of war of belligerents.

"8. The Powers shall not maintain in the waters of the Canal (including Lake Timsah and the Bitter Lakes) any vessel of war. However, in the ports of access of Port Said and Suez they may station vessels of war, the number of which shall not exceed two from each Power.

"9. The representatives in Egypt of the signatory Powers of this treaty shall be charged to watch over its execution. In case of any menance to the security of the Canal they shall meet at the summons of their senior member to proceed to the needful verifications. They shall make known to the Government of the Khédive the danger which they shall have perceived, in order that it may adopt fitting measures to secure the protection and free use of the Canal. They shall, in any case, meet once a year to satisfy themselves that the present treaty is duly carried out. They shall especially demand the destruction of any work or the dispersion of any assemblage on either bank of the Canal which could have for its object, or might have the effect of, an attack upon the freedom of the Canal, or the perfect security of its navigation.

"10. The Egyptian Government shall, within the limits of its powers under the firmans, take the needful steps to render the execution of this treaty respected. In case the Egyptian Government should not have at command sufficient means, it must appeal to the Sublime Porte, which shall concert with the other signatory Powers of the declaration of London, 17th March, 1885, in order to decree by common accord the steps to be taken to respond to that appeal.

"11. In like manner the prescriptions of Articles 4, 5, 6, and 8 shall not impede the steps which his Majesty the Sultan and his Highness the Khédive, within the limits of the firmans granted, may be obliged to take to secure the defence of Egypt and the maintenance of public order. In case the Sultan or the Khédive may find it necessary to avail himself of the exceptions herein provided, the signatory Powers of the declaration of London shall be advised thereof.

"12. The steps which shall be taken in the cases provided for by Articles 10 and 11 of this treaty must not cause an obstacle to the free use of the Canal. In the same cases, the erection of permanent fortifications remains forbidden.

"13. The High Contracting Parties agree, as an application of the principle of equality in what concerns the free use of the Canal, a principle which forms the basis of this treaty, that none of them shall seek, as regards the Canal, territorial or commercial advantages, or privileges in the international arrangements which may follow. Further, the rights of Turkey as the territorial Power are also reserved.

"14. Beyond the obligations provided for expressly by the clauses of this treaty, no interference with the sovereign rights of his Imperial Majesty the Sultan, or the rights and immunities of his Highness the Khédive, arising from the firmans, is attempted.

"15. The High Contracting Parties agree that the engagements resulting from this treaty shall not be limited by the acts of concession of the Suez Canal Company.

"16. The stipulations of this treaty shall not impede the sanitary measures in force in Egypt.

"17. The High Contracting Parties engage to bring this treaty to the knowledge of the States which have not signed it, inviting them to accede to it."

At the general quarterly meeting of the members of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, summoned for the 31st inst., Mr. J. C. Fielden has given notice of the following resolution which he intends to move, viz. :—"That in view of the recent very rapid increase of cotton spinning in India, and the exports of yarn therefrom, more especially to China and Japan, while at the same time there has been a very serious check to the growth of Lancashire yarn exports to those countries, the directors be requested to examine and report to a special meeting of the Chamber as to the causes and circumstances which have thus enabled Bombay spinners to supersede those of Lancashire."

Conference on the Silk Industry.—A conference of ladies and gentlemen interested in the silk industries of the United Kingdom was held on the 21st inst. at the Manchester Royal Jubilee Exhibition. The conference was convened by the Commission of the Silk Section, and Mr. T. Wardle, chairman of the section, presided. Sir Joseph Lee, in introducing Mr. Wardle, said that the real object of the meeting was the formation of what they might term a silk guild, or silk association. In a letter written to him last week, Lord Kimberley said that he could not see why India could not become the source of supply of our silk, as she was becoming for the supply of our tea. The Mayor (Mr. Alderman Harwood) said that neither as regarded silk nor anything else was there anything to be done which the nimble fingers of the Lancashire people could not do. Mr. T. Dickins read a paper on the revival of the silk industry of Great Britain and Ireland, with observations on the importance of technical education. Mr. Joseph Wright (Macclesfield) said that nothing but some sort of protection would permanently benefit the silk trade. Mr. Charles Lister (Bradford) read a paper urging the need of protection for a revival of the industry. The conference appointed a committee to draw up rules for an institution of silk manufacturers, merchants, and retail dealers, to promote the interests of the silk trade, and urged the appointment of a Minister of Commerce and the provision of further technical education.

Sir Philip Edmond Wodehouse, G.C.S.I., K.C.B., who for fifty years had served the Queen in the Civil Service and under the Foreign and Colonial Offices, died this week. He was born in 1811, and entered the Civil Service of Ceylon in 1828. From this time until his retirement, ten years ago, he filled several high posts in our colonies and dependencies. He remained in Ceylon until 1850, where he was promoted from a writership to the posts of assistant colonial secretary and clerk of the Executive and Legislative Councils in 1833. Seven years afterwards he was made district Judge of Kandy, and a few years later he was appointed Government agent for the western province of the island. In 1851 he was employed in America, where during ten years he served successively as superintendent of Honduras in 1851, Governor of British Guiana in 1854, and on a special mission to Venezula in 1858. He was in 1861 appointed Governor of the Cape of Good Hope and at the same time High Commissioner in South Africa, which post he resigned in 1870. For five years ending 1877 he was Governor of Bombay.

HIS HIGHNESS the Thakore Sahib of Limbdi, K.C.I.E., and suite, accompanied by Mr. T. R. Bridgwater, arrived by the White Star steamship Germanic at Liverpool on Friday from Canada and the United States, after an extensive tour reaching to the Pacific coast.

MAJOR-GENERAL T. P. SMITH, R.A., has been granted a Distinguished Service Pension of £100 per annum. He entered the service of the East India Company and was gazetted to the Indian Artillery on Dec. 11, 1849, and was promoted to his present rank May 25, 1886. He served in the Indian Mutiny Campaign, 1857-8, being present at the siege and capture of Lucknow and capture of Bareilly (granted medal). He also served in the Afghan Campaign, 1879-80, in the march from Quetta to the relief of Candahar (mentioned in dispatches London Gazette, and medal).

WRITING of the license of the Native Press, the Englishman, thus concludes its remarks:—"The efficiency of the administration is seriously impaired, and in such a matter there can be no question of stagnation or of a preseevation of the status quo—things must either amend or go from bad to worse. Our chief consolation lies in the fact that things are about as bad as they possibly can be, and that the grant of a few inches more rope must inevitably bring about a much-desired consummation."

THE depression in the opium trade continued throughout 1886 with a slight recovery during the latter months. The final reports, which close the year show that the total exports to Bombay for China during the last nine months of the year were 32,684 chests. This, as compared with 28,259 chests during the closing nine months of 1885, shows a considerable increase, but this represents no improvement in the price. The rate at Bombay per chest, on the last day of 1885, was Rs. 1,195 for new opium, and Rs. 1,225 for old. The prices on the 31st December, 1886, show a reduction on these low rates, and were Rs. 1,126 and Rs. 1,200 respectively. The continued depression in the opium trade is causing much anxiety to Native Chiefs, who see the principal source of their revenue in danger of decaying, while there is immediate loss and ruin to Malwa cultivators. The Native Darbars try to avoid reduction in their rates for opium lands, and compel the cultivators to pay the same rental for lands, the produce of which has enormously fallen in price. The consequence is great distress and general complaint. The new Minister of Indore, Dewan Ragunath Rao, has realised the danger, and is endeavouring to persuade the Darbar to sanction remissions of revenue which will be otherwise irrecoverable, and, in Gwalior, the agent to the Governor-General has persuaded the Council of Regency to adopt immediate measures to mitigate the general agricultural distress.

THE BROAD ARROW AND NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

Every Saturday. Price Sixpence.

'The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette' has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

Here are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing monthly (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

SYSTEMS OF

TESTIMONIALS.

From R. Norman Shaw, Architect to the Royal Academy:—

29, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.,
February 19 1884.

The "Æolus" Waterspray Company have fixed two Air Extractors and one Air Warmer in the Life School of the Royal Academy of Arts with, we all think, the happiest results. Our troubles with that school have always been very great, as owing to the amount of gas consumed, and the necessity of keeping the school well heated on account of the Nude Models, its tendency has been to get unbearably hot, and when windows were attempted to be opened the draughts were most dangerous. It is now kept at a pleasant even temperature, and there are no draughts. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The very hot air from the steam-pipes, and the fumes from the gas, are carried off as fast as they are generated, and a continual stream of warm fresh air being supplied, the school is kept comfortable.

(Signed) R. Norman Shaw, R.A., Architect.

Re St. Peter's Church, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Dear Sir,—We have pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of your "Invisible Roof Ventilators," which we fixed in above church with admirable results.—We are, yours faithfully,

COMPRISING PRACTICAL RULES FOR LEARNING THE LANGUAGE, VOCABULARY, DIALOGUE, LETTERS, AND IDIOMS, &c., IN ENGLISH AND ARABIC.

BY

Rev. ANTON TIEN, Ph.D., M.R.A.S.,

Hon. Curate of Holy Trinity, Milton-next-Gravesend; Medallist of the Roman University de Propaganda Fide; First Class Honour Man in Arabic, Syriac, and Hebrew; and Proxime Accessit in Classics. Formerly First Class Interpreter to the Allied Forces in the Crimea; K.C. of the Order of the Medjidie, &c., &c.; Author of the "Levant Interpreter" and the "Egyptian Handbook"; and Reviser of the Arabic Prayer Book, &c., &c.

"Dr. Tien's little book will be found a valuable guide to the traveller who wishes not so much to talk as to understand what he hears spoken and sees written in common Arabic. In the course of a hundred pages a clever summary is provided of Arabic grammar, which will be found sufficient for all ordinary purposes, and which may easily be made the subject of further instruction from the native teacher."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

"The most useful portion of the book consists of the dialogues, the idiomatic exercises, the vocabulary, and other additions of practical usefulness, such as lists of official titles, of tribal names, and information on the divisions of time, on weights and measures, currency, and commercial, legal, and political terms."—ATHENÆUM.

"The perusal of Dr. Tien's admirable work will be of the greatest value to officers and others under orders for the East."—MORNING POST.

"Will be found very useful by soldiers, officials, students, and merchants desirous of obtaining a certain degree of proficiency in the spoken language, which is becoming in these days of increasing importance."—DAILY NEWS.

"Dr. Tien's Manual can be confidently recommended as the most simple, practical, and trustworthy guide which has yet appeared."—OVERLAND MAIL.

"The rules and explanations are clear, terse, and to the point, and we cordially recommend his book to all who wish to acquire a conversational knowledge of Arabic."—TRUBNER'S RECORD.

"The book is of a handy and convenient size, and both author and publishers have rendered important service in placing it within reach of students."—INDIAN DAILY NEWS.

"The author of the volume before us has done good service in compiling this Manual, in which the difficulties—and, it must be confessed, they are not a few—in mastering Arabic are reduced to a minimum."—BROAD ARROW.

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name —J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1887.

General Intelligence.

[By Overland Mail.]

The Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 21st October; from Allahabad and Madras to the 19th October; and from Calcutta to the 17th October.

In consequence of representations made by the Surgeon-General the programme of the Viceroy's tour has been somewhat altered. Sir Benjamin Simpson has urged that, considering the present sanitary condition of the Quetta and Peshin districts, where there is still a certain amount of cholera, it would be very undesirable to hold durbars there, or otherwise bring together a large number of people in one place where there is very little ordinary accommodation, as a great outbreak of cholera might thereby be occasioned. The Viceregal tour to Quetta has, therefore, been postponed till next year.

The Viceroy, under the new arrangements, was to leave Simla on November 5th, travel to Karachi, arriving there November 11th, as originally intended. From thence the programme and dates as first published will be followed.

At a meeting of the Supreme Legislative Council the Hon. Mr. Scoble, in moving that the Game Protection Bill be taken into consideration, said that there had been a general consensus of opinion as to the necessity of legislation on the subject. The principle of the Bill had now been extended so as to include peacocks and also insectivorous birds, which were largely destroyed for the sake of their plumage, which was often brightest during the breeding season. Power had also been given to the local Governments to extend the provisions of the Bill to animals and game other than birds.

The Commander-in-Chief and all the Presidency Governors and Lieutenant-Governors are "on tour."

General Luck has gone to Lawrencepur to fix the site of the forthcoming Cavalry Camp of Exercise. The Secretary of State has sanctioned General Luck's appointment as Inspector-General of Cavalry in India.

The Sanitary Commissionerships are not to be abolished, as reported. Brigade-Surgeon Richardson and Surgeon-Major Stephen have been confirmed in their appointments as Sanitary Commissioners of the North-West Provinces and Punjab respectively.

A statement is now being prepared showing what public offices have been built at Simla during the past six years, and the cost thereof, which will probably see light at some future day in a Blue-book.

The Punjab Government have offered to contribute a lakh of rupees towards bridging the River Gugger, on the Umballa-Kalka road, the bridge to be made equal to carrying the railway across whenever the time comes for making the line.

In the matter of the measures sanctioned by the Secretary of State for remedying the block in the Telegraph Department a resolution embodying them will be published before the Government of India leave Simla. They must, of course, pass the ordeal of consideration by the Financial Department before being made known.

The Bengal and North-Western Railway Company have offered to complete the Assam-Behar scheme and work the Tirhoot system. The offer is said to be strongly recommended by the Secretary of State for the acceptance of the Government of India.

It is considered probable that Mr. A. C. Tupp, at present Accountant-General in the North-West Provinces and Oudh, will be appointed Chief Secretary to the local Government when Sir A. Colvin assumes the reins of office.

Colonel Pole-Carew, who has arrived in Bombay, rejoins his appointment as Military Secretary to Sir Frederick Roberts, and accompanies his Excellency on tour.

The party accompanying the Viceroy on tour will consist of Sir Donald Wallace, Lord William Beresford, Major Cooper, Major Hamilton, Dr. Finlay, Mr. J. McFerran, Mr. H. M. Durand, and Captain C. Burn.

The escort for Major Peacock and Captain Yate left Chaman for Herat on the 17th October. They will travel at full speed to the scene of operations.

The Allahabad University will date its existence from November 15, when the Senate will probably meet and the University will be formally opened by Sir Alfred Lyall.

Dr. Burgess, Director of the Archæological Survey Department, is now in Simla, arranging in consultation with the authorities a programme for the re-organisation of the department.

Major-General Peile, R.E., late Public Works Secretary to Government in the North-West Provinces, is mentioned as probable successor to the late Major-General Hyde, Inspector-General of Railway Stores at the India Office.

Colonel Cooke, on vacating the command of the 17th Lancers some little time hence, will probably become Assistant Adjutant-General at Umballa.

Colonel R. Wheeler, of the 18th Bengal Lancers, is President this year of the North-West Provinces Remount Committee in the place of Colonel Willis.

Mr. Coldstream has been appointed Deputy Commissioner of Simla, consequent on Colonel Beadon taking furlough.

Mr. M. A. Lawson, Government Botanist and Director of Cinchona Plantations, Nilgiris, recommends that an attempt should be made to grow the ipecacuanha plant in India.

Allahabad figures badly in one respect in the Civil Statements of the North-West Provinces for 1886. Summonses were, it seems, issued to attach the salaries of 458 judgment-debtors, all of whom were either railway servants or public officers, the former numbering 316 and the latter 142. And of these no fewer than 244 and 70 respectively belonged to the Allahabad district.

A resolution has been promulgated that no Chief Engineer of the P.W.D. on the State Railways, Accounts Establishment, or Secretary, or Deputy Secretary to Government in the P.W.D., shall hold the appointment for more than five years.

Private Mulligan, of the Scots Fusiliers, at present stationed in Rangoon, shot two of his comrades, Corporal Thomas and Corporal Christy, dead, and wounded another soldier, on the 17th October.

The Macgregor Memorial Fund is expected to reach thirteen thousand rupees, of which some seven thousand will be invested to secure an annual gold and silver medal, and money prizes to Native soldiers, while the picture for the Union Service Institution at Simla will cost three thousand rupees; but the latter expenditure will only be decided upon after the Madras and Bombay Committees have been consulted. The disposal of the surplus money will be settled next spring, when the subscription list will be closed.

In the Simla Bank case the district judge has decided that he has jurisdiction to hear the petition for removal of the present liquidators.

THE New Madras Municipal Six per Cent. Loan of One Lakh, for Drainage Works, has been extremely well received. The loan was closed with the result that the whole of it was taken up at Rs. 106. No less than 6½ lakhs were tendered, at an average of Rs. 210-1-5, and Rs. 11,82,700 were tendered at an average of Rs. 99-0-9.

THE REV. MARSH KIRKBY, who recently joined the Ecclesiastical Establishment, and acted for a short time as chaplain at Fort William, has given up his appointment, and proceeded home, as he did not wish to go to Burma, where he had been appointed.

THE Bishop of Calcutta proceeds home in February for about a year, the Rev. J. Mitchell, officiating archdeacon, taking charge in his lordship's absence. Some difficulty has arisen regarding the creation of the proposed see at Allahabad, and it is understood that the Metropolitan's visit to England may enable him to settle the question.

THE Jubilee subscriptions to the Countess of Dufferin's fund have amounted to Rs. 4,78,000 in India. Of this sum four lakhs go to the Central Committee, and the remainder to branches. The above amount includes only money which has passed through the hands of the honorary secretary, and is exclusive of funds paid direct to branches.

GOOD results have been achieved by the Government in Burma in training Burmans and Karens in survey work.

THE Delhi Municipality, in conjunction with some Native gentlemen resident there, have undertaken to provide funds for a lady doctor at the local hospital. The committee of the Countess of Dufferin's fund has undertaken to engage a lady for the post.

THERE has been a fire in the locomotive workshops at Sukkur, which destroyed about forty thousand rupees' worth of property.

THE JUBILEE MUDDLE IN HONG KONG.

The Daily Press says:—It certainly would strike an intelligent stranger landing in Hong Kong in September as being very odd to find the Legislative Council discussing a vote towards the celebration of Her Majesty's Jubilee. Nor has the resident in this colony much less reason for irritation. The eventful day came and was celebrated with respect if not with acclaim and noise, and as the anniversary is now long since past it is exasperating to sensible persons to find a portion of the community bent upon making the whole of it ridiculous by a waste of money and silly fuss over an occasion excellent in itself, but now become matter of history. Possibly by this time, however, some of us have got confused as to whose jubilee Hong Kong is going to celebrate. We believe it was originally intended to celebrate the Queen's Jubilee, and after many abortive meetings and much foolish talk it was decided to erect a statue in honour of Her Majesty. So far good, but the rejoicings, which would have been most appropriate on June 21, the date on which they were held throughout the Kingdom and Colonies, were here deferred to November 9. This was a grave mistake, but having made it, the best course to adopt would be to let the matter drop and devote the money that would have been expended in illuminations, &c., to the permanent memorial. If we are to have a statue of the Queen-Empress let it be one worthy of the colony—a work of art that we shall not be ashamed of, and one that will show the Chinese and foreigners who visit Victoria that the Queen after whom our city was named is fittingly honoured by its inhabitants. The Government have voted the sum of $25,000 towards the celebration and commemoration of the Jubilee, and we regret that the vote was unaccompanied by a stipulation that none of the money should be frittered away upon a too-late "jollification," as Mr. Ryrie dubbed it.

THE SINGAPORE GAS COMPANY (LIMITED).

The half-yearly general meeting was held on the 1st inst., at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. R. S. Foreman presided, and in moving the adoption of the report stated that the gas and meter rentals showed increases compared with the accounts received in the corresponding period of the previous year. Orders were on hand for the erection of forty-four lamps in a new district, and when that extension was carried out they might reasonably look for a further increase in the private lighting. The sales of residual products had been well kept up. The collections had been very satisfactory. The profit on fittings and sundries showed a decrease of £343. The loss on exchange had been very small. The general result of the half-year's working was that they were enabled to recommend a dividend at the rate of 7½ per cent. per annum. The motion was seconded and carried, and the dividend was approved.

NOTES.

NEITHER by telegram nor by overland mail is there much news of interest or importance from India to comment upon to-day. The Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, the Governors of Madras and Bombay, and the lesser luminaries of the Provinces are on tour or visiting their districts. Lord Connemara appears to be winning golden opinions from Natives and Europeans wherever he goes, and in answer to the various addresses made to him he speaks with sound sense and good taste.

SPEAKING at Trivandrum, the capital of Travancore, he said:—"I shall always be anxious and ready at all times to hear the opinions of the educated classes, no matter from what side they come, whether from British India or the Native States; and while anxious to hear all alike, I cannot pretend to pay the same attention to the views of the uneducated, because we know that such are often misleading and mischievous." This is candid and sensible, but it is sure to be misconstrued in certain quarters. The sentimentalists and seditious Native Press will declare that the Governor of Madras has no sympathy for the poor ryots, and will proceed to abuse him accordingly.

HOWEVER, he has fortunately confidence in himself. Referring to an allusion which was made to his brother, the late Lord Mayo, he said:—"I am very conscious that I could not walk in the footsteps of a wiser or more just, benevolent ruler, but men must be judged by their own acts, and it is my earnest desire to stand on my own merits." This is manly and straightforward.

COLONEL MARSHALL seems to be a most fortunate official. Not a mail has come from India for some weeks past but his name is mentioned with great praise attached to it. He has been much fêted, and many speeches have been made in his honour. He was the bearer of the Nizam's munificent offer to the Viceroy, and his return to Hyderabad from Simla is telegraphed to all the Indian papers with the remark that "Colonel Marshall was much missed at Hyderabad, both socially and politically." The Greek philosopher was wrong who declared that no man could be called happy before his death; Colonel Marshall in his surroundings exemplifies the fallacy of that aphorism.

THE Native newspapers seem to be as little impressed with the value of some of the Times Calcutta correspondent's telegrams as we are sometimes, especially with regard to those referring to Afghanistan. A vernacular journal says:—"The veracity of the gentleman who sends his weekly budget of news from Calcutta to the London Times has long been a matter of notoriety. Like Crabbe's journalist, he always coins his 'fresh tales,' and seems to live upon them. He has been more than once corrected, but he seems to have little regard for the claims of truth and fairness when he does duty as the Times correspondent."

WE need not say that we do not go so far as our Native friend in his indignant condemnation. The veracity of the gentleman who wires to the Times every Sunday from Calcutta is beyond suspicion; it is the veracity of those from whom he derives his information that we doubt. The bazaars of Peshawur and Simla are not the most authentic sources of information to go to for news beyond our frontier, but the "gup" they supply is weekly telegraphed from Calcutta to London.

TO-DAY, for instance, the readers of the Times are informed, under date, Calcutta, Nov. 6, that the Ameer has issued several proclamations that Ayub Khan had perished in the desert from thirst, sometimes that he was in custody at Teheran, and so on. Then rumour states he has fled to Russia. Who has seen any of these proclamations? Again, it is stated that "rumours are afloat regarding troubles said to be brewing in the Bajour, Dir, Swat, Kohistan, and Hazura country, and it is stated that Taj Mahommed, one of Ayub Khan's followers, is stirring up dissensions in the Herat Province." It is acknowledged that all these rumours are "unauthenticated." Why, then, help to circulate them?

One portion of the Afghan news telegraphed is certainly satisfactory, and that is, that the Afghans are beginning to appreciate the advantages of the railway and roads which are being made in the vicinity of Quetta. It is stated that Bostan, a point twenty-five miles beyond Quetta, to which the railway is open for traffic, has become an emporium for Candahar, and that last week 500 tons of dried fruits, wool, and other merchandise were brought there for carriage to India. This is promising, but it is not so satisfactory to learn that the intelligent ruler of Afghanistan has taken the opportunity of this increase of trade to raise his export duties and customs tariff. The trade, however, will grow in spite of this, and as it expands, the Amir, who is shrewd enough in business matters, will possibly see that it is to his own advantage and to the security of his rule to be a little less exacting.

There is still further matter for congratulation on the improved state of our relations with our turbulent friends in that direction:—

The new roads and railways also bring crowds of workmen across the frontier. There can be no doubt that these men will be struck by the contrast between the position of their countrymen in British territory, well governed, and lightly taxed and their own, obliged as they are to travel hundreds of miles to gain a few rupees to meet the exactions of the tax-gatherers. The great public works on the frontier have shown the Afghans our strength and resources, and familiarised them with us and our ways, and will probably lead them to hope for an extension of British influence over the country.

If British influence can turn cut-throats into peaceable traders it will be a blessing to many. But the British influence to be desired is over the Afghan character, not over the Afghan country.

Wanted, a bishop; at least the authority to make one. The good people of Allahabad in their desire for an episcopal ruler have forgotten the advice of the celebrated Mrs. Glasse, "first catch your hare;" in their case—your bishop. They have partly built a cathedral, and chosen a site for an episcopal residence, and made every arrangement for a suffragan in the North-West Provinces with jurisdiction over Oudh and the Central Provinces, when they are informed by Lord Cross that no territorial division of the Metropolitan See of Calcutta, under which Allahabad is at present, can take place without an Act of Parliament. So Allahabad has to wait, and content itself in the meantime with the loan of Aan rchdeacon.

The London correspondent of the Bombay Gazette, who, however, does not affix the well-known letters "J. M. M." tohis latest contribution to that journal, writes with regard to the Mehmandar's Department at the India Office:—

If Sir W. Fitzgerald's knowledge and experience of India were equal to his amiability and anxiety to make things pleasant all round he would be the right man in the right place; that he does not possess all the requirements of the holder of the office he fills is no fault of his, and if anybody is to be blamed it is those who were responsible for the selection of an untried man.

This is rather "damning with faint praise." We presume that there was some reason for Sir W. Fitzgerald's appointment beyond that of being the son of his father.

The selection of Sir Alexander Arbuthnot to the Secretary of State's Council is one which will, of course, be cordially approved of throughout India. Few Indian officials have done more varied or better work than he has. Joining the Madras Civil Service in 1842, he has filled nearly every appointment from Assistant Magistrate to Counsellor of the Empress that it was possible for a civilian to fill, and he has done well in all. His literary work has also been good and considerable. Besides the many papers he has published on matters connected with education and official affairs in India, and his memoir of Sir Thomas Munro, he has lately contributed to the Encyclopedia of National Biography the best monograph on Lord Clive which has yet appeared.

The Indian Press has assured itself that Sir Lepel Griffin will complete his political career in India next year, and commence his political career in England as soon as he can find a constituency to elect him to Parliament. The Bombay Gazette says (with just a soupçon of ill-nature running through its paragraphs) that Sir Lepel has not yet decided to which political party he will belong.

We accept (it says) with some reserve, of course, the statement that he intends to fight under the banner of the Liberal Unionists. For it seems only the other day that he chose the festive board of the Constitutional Union, an uncompromisingly Conservative body, for giving expression to a soul-stirring denunciation of certain traitors and assassins whom he had in his mind. However, he was once a Liberal and he is still a Unionist, and it is not to be taken for granted that one Conservative banquet has taken all the Liberalism out of him. The only thing that we need keep in view in this connection, until Sir Lepel Griffin definitely shows his colours, is that if there is anything that has less relation than everything else to the present opinions of an Indian official who takes to the game of politics it is his former political beliefs. For example of this the curious have only to consult their Dod.

Just so.

INDIA.

Calcutta, Nov. 6.

The Viceroy, with Lady Dufferin and his Staff, left Simla on Thursday and proceeded on a lengthy tour, which will embrace the principal frontier stations. Several of these will be visited in conjunction with the Commander-in-Chief. The party will arrive in Calcutta about the middle of December.

The objection which the Nizam and his present Minister entertained to Sir Salar Jung's return to Hyderabad is said to have been removed, and the ex-Minister will return, and stay there for some months. Little is known regarding the exact nature of the reasons for this objection, but there appears to be no doubt that pressure was put upon Sir Salar to return to Europe, and it is believed that he will again leave Hyderabad in the spring.

During the sittings of the late Finance Committee in Bombay the Chamber of Commerce suggested that an economy would be effected by abolishing the Calcutta Mint, and confining the coining operations to Bombay. The Committee was unable to complete an inquiry into the matter, but recommended the suggestion for consideration. The Government has now issued a resolution, stating that the Bombay Mint can coin at least one and a quarter crores of rupees monthly, or can easily be made capable of doing so, so that the whole demand for rupee coinage is well within its capacity. The proposed economy, therefore, appears feasible, but before taking any steps the Government desires to obtains the opinions of the banking and mercantile community of Calcutta. Those opinions are accordingly invited. The fact that the bulk of the silver imported into India is landed in Bombay would seem to point to that city as the proper place for converting it into rupees, and it does not seem likely that the Calcutta bankers and merchants will offer any strong opposition. It is not clear whether it is proposed to abolish the Calcutta Mint altogether, or to retain it for copper coinage only.

The Court of Inquiry into the loss of the British India Company's steamer Arcot on the James and Mary Sands sat on Monday. The evidence tended to confirm the general belief that the accident was due to the parting of the steering gear. The report will not be published till it has been submitted to the Government, but the Court announced that it saw no ground for suspending anybody's certificate, or for reporting against the pilot or the officers.

The revised estimate issued by the Indian Tea Association places the season's crop at 86,135,859lbs., the consumption of Indian tea in India being estimated at 1,500,000lbs., and the exports to Australia and elsewhere at 2,000,000lbs. There should remain for export to England about 82,500,000lbs., against 75,750,000lbs. last season.

BURMA.

Rangoon, Nov. 5.

For the last ten days telegraphic communication with India has been seriously interrupted.

Conflicting reports have been current as to the condition of the Chindwin district. Private reports represented it as greatly disturbed. The official reports were more cheerful in tone. The condition of the district is now undoubtedly improving. Colonel Symon's force has failed to find the body of insurgents which killed Major Kennedy and Captain Beville. The dacoits appear to have dispersed and taken refuge in the dense jungle. They are represented to be much disheartened by their recent heavy losses.

The Chief Commissioner has to-day received trustworthy intelligence that Bayingan, or the Viceroy-Prince, the Alompra pretender who was disturbing the Chindwin district, is dead. He was shot through the chest in an affair on the 16th of October, and subsequently died in the jungle. The force in the Chindwin Valley is now so considerable that the district can be thoroughly worked.

Fuller details have been received of Captain Beville's and Major Kennedy's deaths. Captain Beville was shot while standing in front of his men, encouraging them, by an insurgent posted on the roof of the pagoda. The bullet struck him in the shoulder and penetrated downwards to the spine. Captain Beville only survived the infliction of his wound a few minutes. Major Kennedy was wounded later on, the bullet shattering his right elbow. He lived several hours after being wounded, and was removed to a distance. He bled to death. Had medical assistance been available, his life would probably have been saved.

Some very unsatisfactory affairs connected with the police are reported. Nine dacoits attacked a police station at Myinmoo, a large village on the bank of the Irrawaddy, south of Tsagain. On the dacoits approach the sentry bolted, and the police were surprised, six being wounded and seventeen rifles carried off. Much surprise is felt at the fact that such a small body of dacoits attacked a police station containing a much larger number of policemen with complete success. From Toungdwingyee it is reported that a small body of police (the number not being given) fell into a dacoit ambush. They lost all their arms, and one man was killed. In the Irrawaddy district, Lower Burma, Inspector Rogers has been murdered by dacoits. He was patrolling with a small body of police when he was fired on by dacoits and wounded. The police abandoned him to his fate and fled. When his body was recovered it was found that he had been wounded with dahs as well as with a bullet. There is a strong feeling that the number of European officers in the police force ought to be increased.

The Government of India has augmented Mr. Crosthwaite's salary as Chief Commissioner of Burma by Rs. 1,000 per month, and he has been granted back pay. This step is generally approved as a temporary measure. The necessary expenditure of the Chief Commissioner has been much increased by the recent changes. A strong feeling prevails that Burma should be a province ruled by a lieutenant-governor.

BOMBAY AND MANCHESTER YARNS.

At the quarterly meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, held on the 31st ult., Mr. J. C. Fielden moved the following resolution, of which he had given notice:—"That in view of the recent rapid increase of cotton spinning in India, and the exports of yarn therefrom, more especially to China and Japan, while at the same time there has been a very serious check to the growth of Lancashire yarn exports to those countries, the directors be requested to examine and report to a special meeting of the Chamber as to the causes and circumstances which have thus enabled Bombay spinners to supersede those of Lancashire." He showed by carefully prepared statistics that Lancashire is being displaced in the markets of the Far East by the Indian spinners, and submitted that it is of the utmost importance, in the interests not only of cotton spinners, but of the hundreds of thousands of people who are dependent on the cotton industry in this country, that the Chamber should investigate the matter to the fullest extent. He did not think, he said, any one who had not paid attention to the subject could form any idea of where this Indian competition was going to lead, so far as the Lancashire industry was concerned. The resolution was drawn up to avoid any ground of opposition. No remedy of any kind was suggested. It confined itself simply to a request for an inquiry, and in the words he proposed to utter in its support he confined himself to making out a case for an inquiry.

In the course of a brief discussion which ensued Mr. Henry Lee said he had recently been in India, and went into several of the Bombay cotton mills, and his opinion was that the production per ring spindle in a Bombay mill was equal to, if not greater than, it was in a Lancashire mill. Wages were very small, and work was carried on without cessation from daylight till the sun went down. The workers were not allowed to leave the mills except for meals, and many of them bought their meals from men who were allowed to come into the mill yard in order to sell the men what they required. When pushed there was no scruple about working all night. It was a mistake, too, to suppose that those Indian children were not as quick as many of our own children. He never saw a frame "doffed" more quickly than it was done by those Indian children. For these and other reasons we were bound in future to look upon the Bombay mills as serious competitors with us in the China and Japan trade. At the same time he had pleasure in supporting Mr. Fielden's motion, as he believed that inquiry was desirable.

Ultimately Mr. Fielden's resolution was unanimously adopted, and the President stated that the directors would do their best to make the inquiry as full and complete as possible, and to arrive at a correct conclusion on this important matter.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

MOUNTED OFFICERS.

(Madras Mail.)

There is something almost humorous in the recent orders ruling that, in future, only four officers per battalion of Native Infantry shall appear mounted on parade. These fortunate gentlemen are the Commandant, those entirely mythical personages the senior and junior Majors, and the Adjutant; all their comrades being doomed to trudge on foot, though, with luxurious irony, they are still to be regarded as mounted officers as far as the necessity for keeping up chargers goes. This seems rather hard, for one would suppose that if they must keep chargers they are mounted officers, and therefore should ride them; or on the other hand, that if they are to walk about on parade, they might be spared the unnecessary expense of maintaining a horse while their duties could be performed equally efficiently with the assistance of a pony or a bicycle. Again, it is probable that most Native Infantry regiment serving in this Presidency might be searched in vain to-day for four British officers. In the whole Madras Army, or, for the matter of that, in the whole Indian Army, there are probably not half a dozen battalions which boast of a senior and a junior Major. Time was when officers of that description were to be met with in the service; but in British regiments the "mud" Major has swamped them, and in Native the lapse of time and a beautiful Staff Corps organisation have converted them all into Colonels. A few years hence we shall rejoice in a plethora of Majors, just as of late we have suffered from a superabundance of Colonels; but the senior and junior Major, as he existed when the regulations prescribing his position on parade were drawn up, will in any case have ceased to exist. The senior will be senior, the junior junior amongst a crowd. It was not so very long ago that Majors did Subaltern's work in the Staff Corps, and the time appears to be approaching when that state of things will once more exist.

The truth is, the new order illustrates afresh the absurdity of our present plan of officering Native regiments. The officers who are now to walk about on foot, but are nevertheless to keep up chargers and to consider themselves mounted officers, have nothing ing whatever to do in their regiments during peace time. When things go smoothly they are relegated to a mild description of supervision, and we are assured that the Native officer is a very fine fellow, and must on no account be interfered with in the command of his company—except on the musketry range, where, it would seem, he is not to be trusted. But as soon as trouble threatens or a war breaks out the Native officer is relegated promptly to a position of greater freedom and less responsibility, and the dismounted officer, who is, nevertheless, mounted, comes to the front and does all the work. A sort of compromise is, in fact, attempted, and compromises are proverbially unsatisfactory. Under the old regular system, a Native regiment had British officers to each company; under the later irregular plan it had only four at the most, and Native officers assumed the place of their British comrades and held command of companies. The present arrangement is neither one nor the other. There are enough officers to work the regular system; there are too many for the irregular, and British and Native officers alike occupy anomalous positions. Such as it is, this apology for a plan has invariably broken down even under the strain of one of our small wars against savages; and it needs no prescience to foretell that it will disastrously fail if ever the Native Army is pitted against an European foe.

HINDOO WIDOWS.

(Indian Daily News.)

The parties who are moving for a home or asylum for Hindoo widows must have a very inadequate conception of the work they propose to undertake. It is very kind of our American cousins to listen to the relation of Mrs. Ramabai, and to offer generous help to found such an institution. But they cannot have considered that the sums named would be miserably inadequate to make even the least impression on the vast number of people they desire to befriend. We would not say a word in deprecation of their humane endeavours, were it possible to do anything to meet the evil which is deplored. But where it is sought to affect the whole social fabric of a country, counting its inhabitants by hundreds of millions, the establishment of an institution at a cost of £5,000 seems ridiculously inadequate. So indeed it is; and at once shows that, to meet the evil, it is not so much the effects as the cause that will have to be dealt with. So long as the system which manufactures widows continues, so long will every possible effort of philanthropists fail to deal with the misery attending it. Prevention will be far more effective than any attempts to cure an evil of such magnitude and antiquity. Patience will be sorely tried, but it is the only remedy; and those who are engaged in the cause must work on in patience and hope. They have a good ally in human nature against the tyranny of custom. The battle will have to be fought with intelligence and enlightenment, which are bound to spread, and the victory will ultimately be won.

THE FOREIGN TRADE OF BENGAL, 1885-86.

(Pioneer.)

There are several points of considerable interest in connection with the foreign trade of Bengal during the past year. In both imports and exports there was a large advance on the year 1885-86, and but for a decrease of 156 lakhs in the imports of treasure, the total imports would have been the highest on record. As with the total foreign trade of India so with that of Bengal, by far the greatest part is carried on with the United Kingdom; but it is interesting to note that the percentage in the case of the Bengal trade, 65 per cent of the whole, is 10 per cent higher than holds for the total trade of the country. This is probably due to a larger proportion of the staple exports of Calcutta being consumed in the United Kingdom than is the case with those of Bombay. On the other hand, it is decidedly curious to find that the United States rank third in the Bengal trade, while they rank only seventh with India as a whole. The chief article of merchandise imported from the States is, of course, kerosine oil, which was last year shipped to India in larger quantities than ever, and we might have expected the oil would be landed at Bombay instead of Calcutta. The explanation is that the Indian products in chief demand in the States, such as indigo, raw jute and gunny bags, are found most readily in Calcutta. Of late years greater facilities in the way of communication have helped the development of a trade between Bengal and the States, the steamers of the lines plying between Calcutta and Liverpool and Glasgow having engaged to carry cargo through to the States. A curious feature of this trade during the past two years has been the export of raw cotton from Bengal to the States—surely a pre-eminent example of the carrying of coals to Newcastle. Turning to the trade with other countries, the most noticeable feature is the continuous decline in the shipments to and from Australia since 1882-83. In that year the value of the total trade was over 160 lakhs, whereas last year it was under 80 lakhs. It is especially disappointing to find that the exports of Indian tea, for which it was hoped there would be a great field in Australia, declined in value, no doubt only by a small amount, but sufficiently to show that the article is not making its way in the Colonies. As to the trade generally it may be noted that, according to the Superintendent of the Statistical Department, fluctuating exchange has again been a source of loss to importers. When goods had been sold at what appeared to be profitable rates before exchange could be covered, it fell heavily, often converting this profit into a loss. But then what business have importers to complain so long as exporters have their trade "stimulated?"

BENGAL.

THE report on the operations of the Factory Act in Calcutta for the year ending the 30th of June last shows that there were forty-three factories in existence during that period. Of these thirteen are jute mills, twelve jute presses, four cotton mills, three Government military factories, two dockyards, and the rest silk, paper, rice, shellac and other factories. There were 123 accidents during the year, of which six proved fatal.

THE death is announced of Mr. Dear, of Monghyr, whose name has long been a household word in Bengal and Behar. An up-country paper remarks that he was one of the few cases on record of a man spending in the country a fortune made in the country in the spirit of philanthropy that men generally keep in reserve for the benefit of their native land. "But Mr. Dear could not have done more for his adopted town if it had been his birthplace."

MR. MOOKERJEE, Assistant Curator in charge of the Economic and Arts section of the Indian Museum at Calcutta, who has just returned from England, where he was deputed in connection with the Glasgow Exhibition, has resumed charge of his office, and relieved Mr. A. Macdonald, his locum tenens, a Professor of the Presidency College, who intends proceeding home shortly on twelve months' furlough.

THE indigo brokers of Bengal see no reason for making any change in their last estimate of the crop for the coming season. The produce of Behar is expected to be fully up to 67,700 maunds. Some of the Native agents consider that the estimate of 40,000 maunds for Benares and the North-West is too high, but there seems every reason to believe that that estimate will be reached. In all the districts the indigo is said to be drying quickly, and some boiling samples and a few chests of Native make have already arrrived in Calcutta. The anxiety which was felt in Behar owing to the long continued drought being likely to injure the prospects for next season has been somewhat relieved by a fall of rain at most factories.

THE Rev. J. E. Scott, of Rai Bareilli, writes to the Indian Witness that one morning lately his wife heard the piteous shrieks of a woman proceeding from a hut not far from the verandah where she was working. After the screams had continued at intervals for an hour she sent her malee to the hut, when it was discovered that a man had stripped his wife naked and strung her up by the wrists and ankles to the rafters and was thrashing her with a stick from time to time as she swung there. The wife was a girl of thirteen or fourteen years. The ruffian was placed before the Deputy Commissioner and sentenced to two months' hard labour.

AT a late meeting of the Calcutta Town Council a novel proposal for extending the water supply of the town, and more especially in view of the requirements of the Suburbs, was discussed. Dr. Sinders brought forward a proposition for a series of experiments to be conducted in well boring in different parts of the town, so as to strike springs, the yield from which would materially add to the existing supply. It was mentioned that Dr. Warden had bored wells two inches in diameter and some forty to fifty feet deep, from which excellent spring water was obtained. It was pointed out however that the engineer was of opinion that the cost of boring wells of any size would be something enormous, and that even if a bed of sand was reached, and a clay bottom followed, that the supply from the sand formation would soon be exhausted. It was also pointed out the low lying plain of Bengal was not rich in springs, and that to obtain good water a depth of about 200 feet was necessary to be reached. It was also stated that Dr. Simpson was at present engaged in drawing up a report on this very subject, and in view of the submission of this report it was agreed to postpone the further consideration of the question.

MADRAS.

IN supersession of former orders on the subject the Madras Government have authorised the Commissioner of Land Records, Settlement and Agriculture, and the Superintendent, Revenue Survey, to issue in future, on their own authority, certificates of proficiency to junior civilians who have satisfactorily completed the prescribed course of training in Settlement and Survey, respectively; a report of the grant of certificate in every case being made to the President of the Board of Examiners.

RECENTLY the collectors of the districts in the Madras Presidency were requested by Government to inquire and report regarding the fraudulent adulteration of indigo. This they have now done. Government on considering their reports have resolved not to have recourse to special legislation with a view to prevent the adulteration of indigo, which is found to exist in certain districts. The best means, they think, of putting a stop to the evil complained of would be for the purchasers to carefully examine the article offered for sale, and, if it is found to be adulterated, to institute criminal proceedings against the vendor. If this course were adopted in a few cases it is supposed that the practice of adulteration would soon cease.

OWING to the very large addition to the existing rolling stock of the Madras Railway, as also the large addition to the sister line, the S.I.R., pending sanction, the question of the supply of timber is at present engaging the attention of the authorities. Both these companies sent their Locomotive Superintendents to Burma, and these officers entered into special engagements with agents in that country for the supply of Burman teak to their respective companies, when wanted in sufficient quantities of good quality, and at cheap rates—the result being a decided saving. Now, however, as the Madras Forest Department have declared their ability to supply the necessary timber, a meeting of railway and forest officers is to be held shortly to discuss the matter, and decide whether Burma or India shall supply the teak timber required.

MR. M. A. LAWSON, Government Botanist and Director of Cinchona plantations, Nilgiris, recommends that an attempt should be made to grow the ipecacuanha plant in India. He writes as follows:—

The stock of this most important medicinal plant has, during the past year, been increased from about two hundred to over seven hundred plants, and the greater number of these, as Government have sanctioned the proposal, will be put out in the Government teak forest at Nilambur. As mentioned in my last year's report, the few that had been planted three years ago in this forest are growing vigorously, and I have little doubt but that the soil and climate of Nilambur will suit them far better than those of Barliyar. Last autumn it was reported that the stock of ipecacuanha in the European market was almost exhausted, and that there were faint prospects of this stock being much increased by fresh imports from abroad, and it was further reported that the price of the drug had risen from half-a-crown to ten shillings a pound. Whether this sudden failure in the supply of the ipecacuanha drug is due to the plant having been uprooted in its natural habitat, or whether it is due to some commercial ring having been formed I am not able to state, but it is certainly very desirable that the plant, which produces the best known cure for dysentery, a complaint so common in India, should, if possible, be grown in the country.

There was heavy rain at Belgaum on Oct. 16. Two inches fell in the town, but much more all over the surrounding country, and there were inundations in many places. The mail tonga for Dharwar, with four persons, was washed away at the bridge at Moosenhall, and the coachman and syce were drowned. Their bodies and those of the horses have since been found some distance down the river. The passengers, one of whom is a clerk in Goverment service and the other a Brahmin, escaped. Two mail bags have also been recovered, but the others are still missing.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces will not take leave until a week later than was originally supposed. The 23rd November will probably be the actual day of making over.

Since the opening of the Benares Bridge, the Oudh and Rohilkhund Company, says the Pioneer, have been laying themselves out for competing with the East Indian and North-Western for the through passager traffic between Moghul Serai and Saharunpore, trusting in shorter distance and cheaper fares to counterbalance the disadvantages of a change of carriages. Nor would any one wish to quarrel with them for this; what the North-West public do complain of is that in the Company's new arrangements the convenience of local passenger traffic is totally ignored. To get down from Naini Tal to Allahababad now, thanks to the new arrangements, involves a night in a bungalow, a start an an unearthly hour in the morning, a day spent in a creeping train between Bareilly and Lucknow, and yet another night in a railway carriage. Going the other way the journey has been converted from one of twenty-four hours' comparative comfort into one of thirty-six hours' misery, and simply because the Oudh and Rohilkund Company will not condescend to start their train from Cawnpore in time to catch the Bareilly train at Lucknow. The line has returned to its traditions again; and it is thoroughly characteristic that it should have chosen to do so just when the traffic from Kumaon is at its highest point.

Calcutta, Oct. 30.—Some confusion appears to prevail in the little Native State of Sikhim, adjoining the British district of Darjeeling. The Rajah has been residing for the last two years at Chumbi, in Thibet, leaving the care of the government to a Regency consisting of two chief Ministers. It is now said that some Thibetan intriguers around the Rajah are trying to manipulate Sikhim affairs in the interests of Thibet, and that a series of orders incompatible with the Rajah's duties as a British feudatory have recently reached the Ministers. It is doubtful whether those orders emanate direct from the Rajah himself or have been issued by persons who have improperly obtained possession of his seal. He appears to be of weak character, with little taste for State affairs, and as his mother and wife are Thibetans he is suspected of a strong leaning towards that nationality. The Deputy-Commissioner of Darjeeling, on the invitation of the Rejents, has proceeded to the capital, Tumloong, to make inquiries and advise them.

The Government of India (says the London and China Telegraph) are beginning to view with alarm the steady decrease of the opium revenue. The steady downfall in prices, due partly to the increase in the tax on Indian opium in China under the additional article of the Chefoo Convention, and also to the steady increase in local production and improvement in the quality of the Chinese drug, has undoubtedly seriously affected the revenue. The Indian Government must, however, have foreseen these consequences, and though they may not be able to remedy them they have not come on them unawares. Chinese opium has year by year been growing in quantity and in favour, whilst it has a pull over its Indian competitor in the way of taxation, and therefore of price. There will always be a certain demand amongst the wealthier classes for Indian opium, for it is a superior article. Whether a cheaper description can be produced in India to compete with the native and Persian products for favour amongst the poorer classes remains to be seen.

THE "FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW" AND THE BEHAR PLANTERS.

The following letter has been addressed by the General Secretary to the Behar Planters' Association to the editor of the Fortnightly Review:—

Sir,—In your issue for September you have permitted an article, signed by Mr. Stobie, entitled "An Incident of Real Life in Bengal," to be published.

In this article Mr. Stobie has been at much pains to malign the community of which he was formerly a member. Under cover of a so-called "incident of real life," he has defamed the whole planting community of Behar, and calumniated the servants of our Government.

For the sake of creating a temporary sensation he has held us—the planters of Behar—up to the opprobrium of the English reading public.

He has related his story in such a manner as to induce the English public to believe that such an act as he has related is of frequent occurrence among us, and that the members of the Medical and Police services invariably shield the offender.

He asserts that the incident occurred recently, and allows his readers to infer that he wrote from his own knowledge.

Now, Sir, the story Mr. Stobie relates is wholly fictitious—the child of his fancy.

Mr. Stobie came to Behar about 1866, and terminated his career as a planter in 1879. No instance has occurred within the boundaries of the three districts he names, during the last twenty years, of a post-mortem examination having been held on the body of a Native said to have been beaten to death by a planter for not cultivating indigo.

I can call to mind but two instances in the Province of Behar in which Natives were alleged to have met their death at the hands of a planter during the past twenty years, and in both cases the Natives were the servants of the planters concerned, not poor sick cultivating ryots. In the one case the planter underwent a long and anxious trial; in the other it was conclusively proved that the man died from natural causes.

The former case occurred many miles from where Mr. Stobie resided. If it has any secret history, or any history not disclosed at the trial, Mr. Stobie is not likely to be cognizant of it.

The latter occurred some 15 miles from where Mr. Stobie resided, and I do not think he will have the temerity to say that it had any concern with cultivation of indigo, or that, as Mr. Stobie puts it, a poor sick cultivator who begged for time was thrashed to death.

Mr. Stobie has omitted to give the name of the planter who beat his poor, sick tenant to death for not cultivating indigo, the name of the surgeon who gave the false certificate of death to shield his friend and countryman, or the name of the police officer who condoned the offence, and burked the evidence, nor has he told the public what it was which induced him—the writer—to keep silence while such acts were done and for so long since.

Mr. Stobie asserts that the "incident" occurred recently in one of the many factories that thickly besprinkle the large districts of Tirhoot, Chupra and Chumparum. Of Chupra he knows nothing. He never resided there, and seldom, if ever, visited it. Of Tirhoot, but little. He was there only a short time at the commencement of his career. From 1869 to 1879 he lived in Chumparun district.

I deny the truth of the story told by Mr. Stobie, and I challenge him to prove his case. I deny that the cold-blooded and brutal murder he relates ever took place. I deny that any post-mortem examination has been held on the body of any Native alleged to have been thrashed to death by a planter because he did not cultivate his lands in the districts mentioned by Mr. Stobie. During all the time Mr. Stobie was in India or since he left it, and excepting the two cases mentioned of the post-mortem examinations which followed on an accusation of violence resulting in death, none can be adduced by him.

Believing it is impossible for a whole community to seek redress under the law, he has ventured to libel us. Believing that for a community scattered over a country half as large as England, it would be impossible to bring the fiction home to him, he has ventured to hold us up to public reproach.

Mr. Stobie's opinion of us or our doings would of itself carry little weight with the reading public, none certainly with any acquainted with his career, and the reasons for his now being a disappointed man. But when his vapourings appear under the ægis of your name and reach the public under the cover of your influential journal, they attain an importance they little merit. Your countenance alone makes them deserving of our attention.

The maligned officials of our Government will, I have no doubt, be placed in a position by Government to defend their reputations if considered necessary; but we, the maligned non-official residents in India must rely on the right-minded Press of England to see justice done to us.

You, Sir, have permitted us to be libelled in your Journal; we now appeal to you to afford us redress. You can do so by assisting us to elict the truth from Mr. Stobie.

We ask you to give us up the name of the planter who was guilty of the atrocity related, and this we ask you to do in justice to the planting community and to the individual maligned.

A member of a community may, in a hasty moment, be guilty of doing another person grievous hurt without such an act necessarily reflecting on the character of the community to which he belongs. That the planters are exempt from doing hasty acts I do not assert, but what I do most emphatically assert is that in these districts which I know personally, a planter has not for many years past been guilty of, or even charged with manslaughter for the sake of profit on indigo.

Awaiting a reply to the above, and hoping you will make my protest to the article as widely known as you have made known the original,

W. B. HUDSON,
Secretary, Behar Planters' Association.
